PREFACE.

In 1871 I published from the press of Robert Clarke & Co., of Cincinnati, an outline genealogy of the descendants of William Spooner, of Plymouth. This was not a work of ambitious pretensions; it gave a complete account of but three generations; from the fourth generation downward only one branch, that of which Elnathan Spooner, No. 166, was the ancestor, was traced.

This modest volume was a part of the fruits of nearly twelve years of very laborious research. I say a part, for as I stated at the time, I designed it merely as the forerunner of a larger and more complete work, then in course of preparation. Indeed, so far had I advanced in the preparation of the complete work, that the material necessary to it had nearly all been gathered, and it remained only to obtain a few additional data and to perform the mechanical part of arrangement and revision. I, therefore, confidently expected that a year or two of faithful application would bring my task to a successful issue.

The felicitations which I indulged on my near approach to the conclusion of my labors, were not, however, justified by the event. The manuscript was, indeed, completed within the time which I had prescribed; but the inducements offered for its publication were of so unsatisfactory a character that, with a due regard to my own circumstances, I could not embrace them. But the want of adequate encouragement from the family did not persuade me to dismiss my project; and though, during the years which have elapsed since then, many things have come between me and my work; though the cares of family, the calls of business, private trials and bodily distress have pressed upon me with no light weight, nevertheless my interest has not abated; I have found time to push my work forward; and I have continued, by careful inquiry, to supply its defects, and by scrupulous censorship to expunge faults. I have twice brought the work to the verge of publication; but the support extended me, though prompt and gratifying, was each time insufficient, and I was obliged, however reluctantly, to await a more propitious season.

This more propitious season is now apparently at hand. Encouraging signs apprise me of its near approach; and I trust that no very mercenary motive will be charged to me when I confess that I now take some slight satisfaction in garnering what I can not believe to have been poorly sown or negligently cultivated. My satisfaction is not, however, of a selfish or sordid kind; in a pecuniary sense my outlay has been great, and my income must be correspondingly small; yet, I shall think myself amply reimbursed if those to whom these volumes are committed shall pay me the debt of thanks and the tribute of appreciation.

It is natural that, in bringing to an end this work of many years, pleasure at its conclusion should not be wholly unmingled with regret. He who devotes any considerable portion of his time to the performance of a self-imposed task, however unimportant that task may appear in the eyes of others, must have his feeling as well as his interest enlisted; his attachment to his labor must strengthen with progress, and when the end comes he must feel, like Gibbon, very "loth to part with so pleasant a companion." Twenty years and more of almost uninterrupted genealogical research have given me a real love and enthusiasm for my work, and I can not now lay it aside without some "emotion of uneasiness." Nor is this emotion of a wholly abstract nature; during these years of labor it has been my fortunate lot to have contracted many agreeable intimacies; and my "horror of the last" is now greatly heightened when I reflect that, in dismissing my "pleasant companion," I also bid a formal adieu to friends whose acquaintance has given me much satisfaction and whose assistance much profit.

However willingly I might persuade myself that my volumes are the product of genuine ability, good sense counsels me to indulge no such flattering illusions. My part has been, at most, that of the chronicler; I have brought no learning and little special knowledge to the performance of my task; and the most that I can expect is, that some few persons, who, in common with myself, have made genealogy their study, will take knowledge of my book as a fairly good one of its kind, reliable in most material points, and faithful and trustworthy in narrative. If, aside from its character as a family record, it be found to possess any other particular merits; if its sketches of life and character appear to be traced with any peculiar felicity or success, credit must be allowed, not so much to myself as to others; for, though the mechanical part of the work is wholly my own, the task of finishing and embellishing it has been performed in great part by assistants—assistants whose aid I have gladly welcomed, and whose kind offices I now gratefully acknowledge.

And yet, while I make this acknowledgement with all sincerity, I feel but ill disposed to surrender to others more credit than is rightfully their due. They who have engaged in like undertakings with my own can alone know the care and pains which genealogical inquiry demands. Few pursuits require greater perseverance and discrimination; with the genealogist, facts are not facts until they have borne the scrutiny of problem and doubt; and conclusions are not conclusions, until every evidence and every argument has been duly pondered. A genealogical work in which truth and error appear in nearly equal proportions, does not, of necessity, reflect serious discredit on its compiler; one in which there is less error than truth deserves praise; one in which error is of rare occurrence, must be esteemed perfect; but one in which truth is the only quantity present, we have no means of judging, for it has not yet been produced.

Considering, therefore, the difficulties which beset the genealogist, I think that I am not entirely unwarranted in asking for this work the reader's indulgence and consideration. To what rank of excellence it will be found to belong, it is not for me to assert. I am conscious that I have done the best with my material which my circumstances and ability would allow; whether this "best" is good or bad in comparison with the efforts of others, the candor of my readers must determine.

I know not in what light I shall appear to men of taste and of critical discrimination when I repeat, that acting in my capacity as a genealogist, I have made but little effort to secure any high degree of mental excellence. I have written my genealogy as a genealogist, not as a lover of letters; it has been my first and chief endeavor to obtain facts and to present them in an orderly and intelligible way; and, though I have not unfrequently called biography, and indirectly literature, to my assistance, I have not allowed myself to forget that genealogy is my only legitimate calling, and that all other things can be employed merely as auxiliaries.

I am well aware that my pursuit, though very honorable, is, when compared with other lettered pursuits, of but slight significance. Genealogy calls for mechanical, more than for intellectual labor; for discretion more than for learning or talent. It exacts great attention and diligence, but it exacts the attention and the diligence, not of the thinker, but of the specialist. The praise awarded to the genealogist is therefore of a negative kind. He is commended for his care and method, but he is commended as one who follows successfully an obscure craft, not as one who makes himself useful by contributing to valuable knowledge.

I am far from questioning the justice of the literary dispensation which assigns to genealogical works a very low place among the productions of the human mind. Nor will it avail me much to assert in defence of these works that they can be produced only by vast labor. The author who brings labor and research to the composition of his book is surely much to be commended for his pains, but he is not much to be esteemed, nor is his book much to be valued, unless the results of his efforts proclaim him to be a man of intellectual worth. The fact that the "Novum Organum" was twelve times rewritten before it was suffered to appear in the world, would, of itself, have but ill-sufficed to give celebrity to the name of Bacon.

That genealogy is a pursuit not very worthy of the attention of noble intellects, I will not deny, but that it, nevertheless, is not without its uses, I think a very little reflection will render clear. To trace the progress of nations is esteemed by men of learning and of capacity to be a very useful employment; likewise, to relate the lives of individuals is considered by so eminent an author as Dr. Johnson to be an occupation worthy the most gifted understandings. I cannot, therefore, think that to employ one's time in recording family histories, is to choose a literary calling wholly profitless or ignoble. Genealogy is, indeed, of far less comparative value than history, for its scope is narrower, and it concerns itself not with events, but with men,—men of whom few can be of more than common significance. It is less instructive and entertaining than biography, for its lessons are not so obvious, and its opportunities for excursion not so frequent. But, comparison aside, genealogy still has much good in itself. When rightly conducted, it cannot fail to rescue from oblivion many things which the world will willingly admit into its stock of valuable information. Its facts are presented with clearness and precision,—science itself is not more exact. It appeals to a very large and intelligent class of readers, and that branch of knowledge is surely not much to be despised whose utility, however limited, is of a definite and certain kind. Finally, it is an invaluable assistant to history and biography, for it discloses facts without which many pages of the biographer and the historian would be left blank.

I cannot more appropriately conclude the apologetic part of my preface than by introducing, in support of the general positions which I have taken, a few noble sentences from Dr. Johnson. Though the sentiments to which they give expression were intended for the virtuoso and the antiquary, they may very profitably be regarded and taken to heart by the genealogist.

“There are indeed,” says this great essayist, “many subjects of study which seem but remotely allied to useful knowledge, and of little importance to happiness or virtue; nor is it easy to forbear some sallies of merriment or expressions of pity, when we see a man wrinkled with attention and emaciated with solicitude in the investigation of questions of which, without visible inconvenience, the world may expire in ignorance. Yet it is dangerous to discourage well-intended labors or innocent curiosity, for he who is employed in searches which, by any deduction of consequences, tend to the benefit of life, is surely laudable, in comparison of those who spend their time in counteracting happiness, and in filling the world with wrong and danger, confusion and remorse. No man can perform so little as not to have reason to congratulate himself on his merits, when he beholds the multitudes that live in total idleness, and have never endeavored to be useful."

Of the scope of this work, not much need be said. It is comprehensive, but it is not and does not aspire to be comprehensive in the completest sense of the word. Only one line of ancestry is traced. I have aimed only to give the names of the descendants of William Spooner (Plymouth, 1637); the descendants of other emigrant ancestors of the name Spooner have been disregarded. Neither have I undertaken to give an account of the English families, for any data relating to these are meager and unsatisfactory, being but little more than is to be found in Burke's works, and, then, I soon realized the impossibility of connecting our American progenitor with any degree of certainty with any one of the old-country families. I, therefore, have preferred to omit all mention of them, rather than to endanger the reliability of my work by introducing matter of doubtful authenticity.

The work has been made as thorough and exhaustive in the male branches as possible. Every known person of the name Spooner, has been applied to for family records; all published genealogies and local histories (as far as within my reach), have been examined, and town records of New England have been searched for information. I have departed somewhat from the general rule of genealogists, and have conducted my inquiries with reference not only to descendants of male but also to those of female members of the family. All married females (where the records have been obtainable) have had their descendants brought down two, in many cases three, and, in some families, four generations. Where there has been failure to bring down the female descendants three or more generations, from intermarriage, the failure is owing to the fact that records have not been furnished me.

I am quite aware that, even in some of the male branches, the records are not complete, are not satisfactory. This fact cannot be regretted by any person more deeply and sensitively than it is by the compiler; every effort has been made to have the record of each family exact and full in the most complete sense of the word; where such is not the case, the fault is with those who may have complaint to enter for these deficiencies.

Another feature of the work, is the giving of the line of American ancestry of those who have intermarried with the family. In undertaking this, reliance has been largely had upon published family histories. It could not be undertaken, to reach out for these facts to town records, or to family records and traditions; and, in so far as these histories have been published and accessible, I have drawn on them for the genealogical facts given in these volumes.

It has been my intention to make the completeness of the biographical notices a prominent feature of this work. I have aimed to make it a register not only of names, but also of lives and deeds, and, in pursuit of this object, have availed myself of the literary services of friends in and out of the family. The consequence is, that no small interest will be found to attach to this part of the work, for, though it no doubt has its imperfections, though some names may perhaps have been given undue prominence, and though others may have received but insufficient notice, yet I think that justice has been done in the main. In some cases, yes in very many, there is given but the facts of birth, marriage, and death, with place of residence and occupation. Of many of these, no doubt, true worth, service to country and position in society, would have justified and even demanded more to have been said, even to the giving of extended notices. In all such failure, I must put in the plea of the want of facts,—facts of life, record of events I could not manufacture, I had to rely upon relatives of the deceased as well as of the living for such facts and records, and where they have failed to honor my call, there, and there only, have I failed to give the record which merit, and service, and life would have justified.

The omissions of dates of births and deaths, and of marriages, and of the names of the parents of those who have intermarried; and, in some cases, of the names of wives, is to be regretted,—the blanks could not be filled. Somewhat numerous as these are, I think, however, that they are not more so than will be found in other works of the same kind.

Acknowledgements are due to all members of the family who have either directly or indirectly contributed to the compilation of these volumes. Among those not connected with the family to whom special thanks are due, may be named, the late Samuel G. Drake, A. M., Rev. Lucius R. Paige, D. D., John Ward Dean, A. M., the late N. B. Shurtleff, M. D., Rev. Henry M. Dexter, D. D., the late Miss Frances M. Caulkins, D. Williams Patterson, Esq., the late John B. Congdon, Esq., and Arthur H. Gardner, Esq. Of the family, death has called home three of its members who took a most lively and intelligent interest in this work, and very greatly assisted in collecting the materials and somewhat aided in the literary department,—Whipple Spooner, M. D., Hon. Alden J. Spooner, A. M., and Simeon Pratt, Esq.; though dead they should not be forgotten. And, of the living of the family, I must not fail to make mention of James Walter Spooner, Esq., Gen'l James M. Ruggles, Franklin B. Dexter, A. M., John O. Austin, Esq., Gen'l Daniel Ruggles, Hon. Henry Ruggles, and my son Walter W. Spooner.

And, I must not fail to name two works, recently published, "History of Hardwick, Mass.," by Rev. Lucius R. Paige, D. D., and "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," by Hon. William T. Davis. These books have been a very great help to me in the closing labor on this first volume.

It has been my aim to make the manner of arrangement and the abbreviations in this work so simple as to be readily understood by all. A few explanations may, however, be in place.

The numbers printed prominently above the various families indicate the serial position of the heads of these families. The Roman numbers which precede the names of the heads of families indicate the generation. Thus: the number "9," Ebenezer Spooner, means that he is the ninth of the family. The number "ii," which precedes his name, signifies that he is of the second generation.

The plus (+) mark, when placed after a name, indicates that a full account of the person and of his family is given in the proper place. Thus: "30, Samuel +", means that an account of Samuel, number 30, and of his family will be found further on. The reader should turn over until he comes to the family headed "30," where he will find a record of Samuel, and of his family.

The children of the members of the families of the fifth generation, of course, constitute the sixth generation. The history and record of the families of the sixth generation, is not contained in this volume, but will be given in the second. The plus sign has been placed after the name of every member of the sixth generation of whom an account will be given in the second volume.

The method of tracing the line of ancestry may be described as follows.—Let the reader take the number 1911. The name is Ephraim Spooner. Turn to this number where it first appears; it is found that Ephraim is the son of (v) James Spooner, No. 680. Referring to No. 680, we find that James was the son of (iv) Ephraim Spooner, No. 266, who, by the same method, we find to have been the son of (iii) Thomas Spooner, No. 60. Turning back to 60 in its serial order it appears that Thomas was the son of (ii) Ebenezer Spooner, No. 9; and on referring to No. 9, it will be seen that Ebenezer was the son of (i) William Spooner, the American progenitor of the family.

And, now, I give to the family the first volume of the work. The material for the second volume is mostly in hand, and may soon go to the printer. It will appear soon, provided the subscriptions for this volume evidence that the family desire the work to be completed.

FIRST GENERATION.

i WILLIAM SPOONER, b——: d. March, 1684.

The earliest record that we have relating to William Spooner, is the assignment of articles indenturing him, by John Holmes* to John Coombs, as is seen in Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. XII, p. 19, as follows:

“Bradford Gov^r a R. R. Caroli, XII jth, 1637.

“Whereas, William Spooner of Colchester, in the County of Essex by this Indenture, bearing date the twenty-seaventh day of March Anno Dmi., 1637, in the thirteenth year of his Maties Raigne, hath put himself apprentice wth John Holmes, of New Plymouth, in America, gent. from the first day of May next after the date of the said Indenture vnto thend terme of six yeares thence ensuing wth diuers other couenant both pts to be pformed eich to other by the Indent it doth more plainly appear. Now the said John Holmes wth the consent likeinge of the said William Spooner hath the first day of July assigned and set ouer the said William Spooner vnto John Coombs† of New Plymouth, aforesd gent for all the residue of his terme vnexpired to serue the sd John Coomes, and the sd John Coomes in then^d of his said terme shall giue the said Willm Spooner one comely suit of apparell for holy days, and one suite for working days, and twelue bushells of Indian Wheate, and a good seruiceable muskett, bandaliers and sword fitt for seruice.”

* Holmes was in Plymouth as early as 1632. He was “admitted into the freedom of the Colony January 1, 1634-5,” and was sworn “messenger of the Government December 4, 1638.”

† John Coombs was in Plymouth as early as 1630. He appears to have possessed considerable landed property, obtained by grants, by purchase, and by inheritance of his wife, who was Sarah d. of Cuthbert Cuthbertson. He d prior to 1645.

March, 1643. It was “ordered by the Court that William Spooner shall pay for the debt of Mr. Coombs his master vnto Wm. Hambury the sun of 10s.” August, 1648, the Court “ordered that Thomas Cushman shall haue and enjoy without disturbance, the one-third part of all the English corn due vnto Miss Combes for her part from Willm

It thus appears that William Spooner began life in America,* as an apprentice to a Mr. John Coombs, a well-to-do citizen of New Plymouth. His age at the time of his indenture is unknown, but it is natural to suppose that he was then in his minority. As concerns his origin, the time and place of his birth, and all other matters ancestral, we are, for lack of authoritative information, obliged to speak in very general and conjectural terms. Furthermore, it is not in our power to supply the connecting link between the Spooners of America and the Spooners of England; so we must be content to affirm that, as the families of England and America have a community of name, so also they must have a community of blood,—a very pleasing affirmation by the way, since it enables us to claim, with our more pretentious brethern of England, a co-descent from the old “laird of the manor,”† and a co-heirship to the coat-of-arms and to the titles granted by Queen Elizabeth.‡ But this is Spooner, for this psent yeare, except the rye, whereof he is to haue the one-half, and one part of fve of the Indian Corn, and the one-half of the frute, and the one-half of the hempe.”

Oct. 16, 1646. “William Spooner came before the Gou^r and vndertake to saue the towne harmless from any charge that might befall of a child that Mrs. Coombs left with him when she went for England, and which he vndertake to keepe and prouide for.”

Aug. 1, 1648. The Court “further ordered concerning the children of the said Mrs. Combe, now being with William Spooner, that the said Spooner keep them for the psent and not dispose of them for the future without further orders from the Court.”

The payment of the debts of Mr. and Mrs. Coombs, the custody of their children having been given by Mrs. Coombs to William Spooner, and this guardianship having been confirmed by the Court, is good evidence that William Spooner was in possession of the lands of Mr. and Mrs. Coombs. Whether these lands were held by him, in trust, or had been purchased with these incumbrances, cannot now be determined.

* It is possible, that he was what was known at a later period as a “redemptioner.” “In early times, emigrants came over frequently as redemptioners; that is, the ship took them without prepayment of passage, and on their arrival sold them by auction for the lowest term of years for which any one would take them and pay the passage money.” Hist. Mag., v. iv, p. 197.

† John Spooner of Seething, was lord of the Manor of Manclerk’s late Inglise’s, in the reign of Henry IV, and died lord in 1514, and Richard Spooner was his son and heir, who was to marry Cecilia Willis; and Thomas Spooner, gent, was lord in the 40th of Elizabeth. Bloomfield’s Norfolk, Vol. i, p. 169.

‡ “Wickwantford, Co. Worcester, 1559, Az. a boars head, ar. armed, ar. pierced through the neck with a spear, ar. embued with blood.” Burke’s General Armory.

There was “A Confirmation of the Arms, and a Grant of the Crest to Thomas Spooner of Wickwantford in com. Wigorn, at Droitwich com. Wigorn, 10th August, 1683, by Robt. Cooke, Clarencieux, 29 Nov., 1589, 32 Eliz.” Miscellanea Genealogica Heraldica, 1872.

a very unsatisfactory kind of speculation, and must be esteemed of little worth; so, as good Colonel Newcome, of Thackeray's story, did not think it a disgrace to be descended from a barber-surgeon, let no one of our family in America, how exalted soever in station or wealth, deem it a matter of shame that our common ancestor chanced to be an obscure and unlettered Plymouth apprentice; rather than a "belted knight, marquis, or duke," of the realm of England. And, as we find no dishonor in this, neither would we make any particular merit of it, but simply record the fact that William Spooner, from whom our branch of the family is descended, was certainly a very plain and (at least in the estimation of the world) a very insignificant man, who was born, lived, begot children and died, and who, as we have every reason to believe, acted his part in life well. This fact we shall endeavor to bear in mind as we write this memoir, well aware that the subject of it had few qualities which served to distinguish him from the great body of people, yet who, like Matthew Prior, having no Norman blood or noble connections to boast of, can still point to a more ancient and honorable lineage, and claim equality on general principles with Bourbon or Nassau.*

William Spooner then, "of Colchester, in the county of Essex," (England or Massachusetts?), arrived in the New Plymouth settlement early in the year 1637. Whence he came, whether with Ann Spooner from Leyden,† whether direct from the‡ mother country, or whether—which we think the most probable—from the little embryo town of Colchester, Massachusetts Colony,‡ is not known. Let this much be said,

Nisbet says:—"The boar, say the naturalists and heralds, is a champion among other wild beasts, and encounters his enemy with a noble courage, and, in order to battle, he is said to whet and sharp his tusks." Guillium says the same; "he betokeneth a man of a bold spirit, skillful and politic, or warlike feats, called in Latin, aper ab asperitas."

* A reference to Matthew Prior's celebrated epitaph:

"Here lies what once was Matthew Prior;

The son of Adam and Eve;

Can Bourbon or Nassau claim higher?"

† It is known that in 1616, John Spooner was living in Leyden and was the head of a family;—also, that Ann S., his widow, was there in 1630. In 1637 an Ann Spooner was in Salem, who it is supposed was the Ann S. of Leyden, and that John and Ann of Leyden were the parents of William of Plymouth and of Thomas, who was in Salem in 1637.

‡ The name Spooner was an early one in England. In the fifteenth century, and however, that considering his youth, (he probably was not more than sixteen or seventeen years old at the time of his indenture), and considering also the fact that a Mrs. Ann Spooner (doubtless from Leyden, Holland) was in Salem in 1637, it is more than probable that William made the journey to America with Ann Spooner and Thomas Spooner, whom we suppose to have been his mother and brother, and that, on their arrival in this country, the family separated, Ann and Thomas settling in Salem, and William seeking his fortune first in the little Colchester settlement and subsequently in New Plymouth.

Of William Spooner's life after his apprenticeship to Mr. Coombs, we have, from the records, a tolerably well-connected account. From the various orders of the Court, already quoted, we conclude that he was a faithful and competent steward, entrusted with the administration of his master's estate and the custody of his children. These were no common marks of confidence, especially among the early New England settlers, with whom sturdy self-reliance was one of the first and greatest of virtues.

In the list of August, 1643, William Spooner is mentioned as one "of all the males that are able to beare arms, from xvi years old to 60 years wthin the se^rall townships." He was the early part of the sixteenth, the name was confined, chiefly to Worcestershire, Essex, Middlesex and Yorkshire counties.

The indenture of William, naming him as of "Colchester, Essex county," would seem to indicate that he came from the old Roman town of Colchester, England. It is the opinion of some of the family and of others, that this is the proper interpretation of the words "Colchester, Essex county" in the indenture.

An opinion, possibly not well founded, and yet entertained by the compiler of these records, points to an early settlement "beyond the Merrimack" as the place where William first took up his residence in America. That settlement antedates 1637,—and, from the first, was probably known as "Colchester," and the district that it was in as "Essex." In 1639, it was "ordered by the Court that the other plantation beyond Merrimack shall be called Colchester." Under date of February, 1679-80, is the following record:—"This Court being sensible of the great inconvenience and charge that it will be to Salisbury (Colchester), Haverhill and Amesbury to continue their County Court, now some of the towns are taken off, and considering that those towns did formerly belong to Essex county, and attended Essex courts,—do order, that those towns that are left be again joined to Essex." These records and other facts, lead us to the conclusion that the settlement "beyond the Merrimack" was known as "Colchester" from its earliest date; and that the region of country was called "Essex";—and, from these facts we conclude that this American Colchester was the earliest American home of William Spooner.

propounded to take up his freedom,* June 7, 1653," and was "sworn and admitted June 6, 1654," and at the same time was appointed Surveyor of Highways. He also served on the "Grand Enquest," 1657 and 1666.

On Dec. 26, 1657, Benajah Pratt sold to William Spooner, "for the consideration of a Cow, one-half of his land, called Purchase land at Coaksett alias Acoakus and places adjacent." Oct. 25, 1658, Samuel Hicks sold to William Spooner, "in consideration of a valuable sum, fifteen acres at the lower South meadow in the Township of Plymouth," which was sold by William Spooner to Robert Ransome June 30, 1662, and on this same date Robert Ransome sold to William Spooner, "twenty acres of upland at Acushena." On Aug. 1, 1662, William Spooner sold to Edward Gray, "his share of the land at Puncatasset and places adjacent." Memorandums of these conveyances are found on Plymouth Records.

He continued to reside in Plymouth until about 1660, when he removed to the new settlement at Acushnet in the Dartmouth purchase.† Here he held lands in his own name and an interest in the purchase, which were confirmed to him and to his heirs in their proprietary rights by his will. His lands and the grants made to his sons and grandson, were situated near The-Head-of-the-River, somewhat to the north and east, thence to the south on the east side of the river Acushnet; a small

* The qualifications to become a Freeman were:—"Twenty-one years of age, sober, peaceable conversation, orthodoxy in the fundamentals of religion and a ratable estate of twenty pounds." Balies' New Plymouth, i. p. 230.

† The purchase of Dartmouth was originally contracted for by thirty-six colonists who met at Plymouth, March 7, 1652. The confirmatory deed of the purchase, given by William Bradford, Nov. 13, 1694, names fifty-six proprietors. The deed of Wamsutta or Moanam, who was called by the English Alexander, as given in the history of New Bedford, gives the bounds of this purchase as follows: "All the tract or tracts of land lying three miles eastward from a river called Cushenagg to a certain harbour called Acoaksett to a flat rock on the westward side of said harbour, and whereas the said harbour divideth itself into several branches, the westernmost arme to be the bound, and all the tract or tracts of land from the said westernmost arme to the said river of Cushenagg, three miles eastward of the same, with all the rivers, creeks, meadows, necks and islands that lye in or before the same, and from the sea upward to go so high that the English may not be annoyed by the hunting of the Indians in any sort of their cattle."

This grant or purchase was "allowed by the court to be a township, and known by the name of Dartmouth, June, 1664," and comprised the territory now incorporated as Dartmouth, New Bedford, Fair Haven, Westport and Acushnet. The original township of Dartmouth was about thirteen miles square.

portion of the inheritance of his son, John, was on the West or New Bedford side of the Acushnet, and they held land on Sconticut Neck and at Nasquatucket.

It is traditionally claimed, (and this claim seems to be well founded,) that William and his sons built the first mill within Dartmouth bounds, which was located in what is now Acushnet village.

He was twice married; first to Elizabeth Partridge, who died April 28, 1648, and second to Hannah Pratt. By his first wife he had one child, John, the dates of whose birth and death are not known, but who was living in February, 1734, and therefore must have been at the time of his death, nearly, if not quite, a nonogenarian. By his second wife, William had eight children, all of whom survived him.

William Spooner's educational advantages in the way of "book learning," etc., were certainly very limited. His will, in common with many of the instruments executed by the early colonists, bears the "mark" of illiteracy. It is dated March 8, 1683. On the margin of the record, we find the memorandum "1684," which indicates that the year, instead of being 1683, was in fact 1684, and should therefore have been written 1683-4*. The inventory of his estate bears date March 14, 1683, (more properly March 14, 1683-4). Six days only intervening between the making of the will and the taking of the inventory, clearly evidences that dissolution took place some time between the eighth and the fourteenth of March, 1684. Considering this fact, it is not a matter of surprise that being, as he must have been, "weake of body," he was physically, if not mentally,

* "Those who consult the Plymouth records," says Dr. Shurtleff, editor of the twelve published volumes, "should be reminded that they were written at the time when the Julian method of computing time, commonly known as 'Old Style,' was in use in England and its dependencies, and that therefore in New England the legal year commenced on Conception day, the 25th. of March. The addition of ten days to any date given in printed volumes of records, all the facts therein having transpired in the seventeenth century, will reduce it to 'New Style.'

"The first figure indicates the legal year commencing on the 25th. of March, and the last the historical year commencing on the 1st. day of January."

This same double-year-dating is also found in all the early records of New England towns. In the records of this period—the seventeenth century—taken from town registers and given in these pages, the double-year-dating has been omitted, the historical year only is given. The dates of the days of the month are invariably given as found on the records.

incapacitated from doing more than affix "his mark" to the last will and testament.*

His will and inventory of his estate, as found on Plymouth County Wills Records, are in words as follows:

WILL OF WILLIAM SPOONER.

March 8, 1683.

"The last will & Testament of William Spooner, being aged & weake of body, but yet in perfect understanding & memory, wherein I haue disposed of my estate as followeth, Im primis: I giue vnto my son, John Spooner, that thirty acres of land where he now dwelleth, with Twenty acres more to be added therevnto at y^e next deuision of Dartmouth lands to him, his heirs & assigns foreuer; also, I giue to my grandson, John Spooner, one-fourth part of a share of all y^e vndeuided lands in y^e township of Dartmouth, with two acres of my three acres of good meadow, lying on y^e west side of Sconticut neck at y^e entering in of y^e neck, to him, his heirs & assigns foreuer; also, I giue y^e bed which I now lodge on vnto my aforesaid Grandson; also, I giue vnto my son, Ebenezer Spooner, eight pounds, to be paid vnto him three years after my decease, in good current pay.

"Also, I giue vnto niy son, Isaac Spooner, fiue shillings; also, I giue vnto my son-in-law, John Sherman, my great coat; and vnto my daughter, Sarah Sherman, i giue one cow; also, I giue vnto my daughter, Martha Whing, on cow; also, I giue vnto my daughter, Hannah, & her son, Josua, one cow or the value of a cow; I giue also vnto my daughter, Mercy, to be delieured vnto her two years after my decease;† also, I giue & bequeath vnto my son, Samuel Spooner, my house and y^e seat of land belonging to it, both vpland and meadow, containing forty acres, more or less, with one acre of my three acres of good meadow, lying on y^e west Side of Sconticut aforesaid, vnto him, his heirs and assigns foreuer; also, I giue all y^e rest of my upland already laid out, with one-fourth part of a share of all vndeuided lands, except that twenty acres I giue vnto my son John, as aforesaid, to be equally deuided between my son Samuel & my son William, to them, their heirs & assigns foreuer; also, I giue y^e rest of my neat Cattell, to be equally deuided amongst my two sons, Samuel & William; also, all y^e remainder of my laid-out meadow I giue to be equally deuided amongst my three sons,

* On a recent examination of Plymouth Records by Mr. James Walter Spooner of that city, a record was found in Vol. 3, Folio S2, Old Colony Records, which is almost conclusive evidence that William Spooner could write. In that record his name appears with those of Samuel Jenney and James Shaw as witnesses to an agreement between John Hayward and John Cook as to a highway, ("with the consent of the neighbors at Acushenah,") to "The Neck," in Dartmouth. These names of witnesses are given as having been written by themselves. Thus we can relieve William of the extreme illiteracy of not having been able to write his name.

John, Samuel and William, to them and their heirs forever; also, I giue all my household goods, of all sorts, to be equally deuided amongst my son Samuell & my daughter Hannah and my daughter Mercy; also, I make my son Samuel my sole executor, and I haue made choyce of my two friends, Seth Pope & Thomas Taber, for my ouerseers, to see this my will performed.

Here, then, is the simple story of a simple and unpretending, though in no sense ill-spent life; a youth of labor,—an age of ease,—honorable toil—well-earned competence—peace with God and man. This story we shall leave as we found it,—unadorned and therefore best adorned,—complete in itself and pointing its own moral. Its own moral? Yes, for it has a moral; a homely one perhaps, and fashioned after a very common and vulgar pattern, yet not lacking in rugged extrinsic worth.

William Spooner's lot was cast among a very remarkable people, who, individually and collectively, builded better than they knew. Good taste forbids us to dilate on "morals," "heritages" or "posterity," still, even in our humble capacity as a collector of facts and unimportant biographical data, we cannot forbear, in passing, to pay our little tribute of appreciation to the virtues of these sturdy pioneers, who adding patriotic endeavor to intelligent conviction, raised up a tabernacle in the wilderness and wrought for posterity a work of great social and moral beneficence. Here, we are convinced, is the most edifying spectacle in all history; for these men, unlike the founders of most other nations, were actuated by no sinister motives of gain or self-seeking. Theirs was a more devout spirit of action, arising from principle more than from fleeting caprice, and brought to fruition by peaceful pursuit of worthy ends. In the course of events, wars and feuds arose among them, but their quarrels were always quarrels of necessity and never of choice. We are not called upon, in passing on the character of the forefathers, to subscribe to their religious views, or to have religious convictions of our own of any kind. Certainly, in the light of the present liberal age, we find some what to condemn in their religious principles and practices; particularly in the stupid fanaticism which ostracised Roger Williams, and, which inspired the persecutions at Boston and Salem. Still, when all is said that can be said, we cannot but admire the devoted Christian purpose by which they were governed; and even though that purpose was sometimes warped and misdirected, we should not forget that the spirit in which men act, and not the fruit of action, is always "the highest matter."

How the Pilgrims* and the Puritans came to be what they

* There is a marked and clear line of distinction to be drawn between the Pilgrims and the Puritans.

Said Arnold—the historian of Rhode Island—"The Pilgrims of Plymouth were more liberal in feeling and tolerant in practice than the Puritans of Massachusetts Bay."

* * * "As they were distinct from the Puritans of England, and had long been separated from them in Holland, so did they preserve that distiction in some measure in America."

The two colonies, in all that related to governmental policy and laws bearing upon the people, were entirely distinct from each other until the Union of the two colonies in 1692.

"No evidence appears that, during the witchcraft delusion, any instance of it occurred within the bounds of Plymouth colony."

were; how they toiled and fought; how they adapted themselves to soil and climate and conciliated and subdued the barbarous tribes among whom they were thrown, is a story which we are not called upon to repeat in the present connection. Suffice it to say that their form of government* was, for more than half a century, a perfect theocracy, and that their annals are "the short and simple annals of the poor." They did nothing very "glorious," in the common acceptance of the term, performed no prodigies of warlike valor; and were content if at the year's end their crops were safely garnered and their devoted numbers remained intact.

William Spooner was both with this people, and of them; "sober and peaceable in conversation and orthodox in the fundamentals of religion." During his fifty years' sojourn among them, the little nucleus formed at Plymouth, grew in size and importance, until from a mere settlement it became a wealthy colony, capable of maintaining its own in war and peace. This was the primitive period of American civilization, and whatever of wisdom exists in our institutions to-day—and we are persuaded there is much—must be accredited to the enter-

* The "Social Compact" signed on board the Mayflower by the forty-one adult male passengers, before landing at Plymouth, was the foundation and basis of the laws of the Plymouth Colony Government.

The first act under this Plymouth Constitution, for such was the compact to all intents and purposes, was the election on the day of its adoption of John Carver as Governor of the Colony.

John Quincy Adams said of this compact :

"This is perhaps the only instance in human history of that positive, original social compact, which speculative philosophers have imagined as the only legitimate source of government. Here was a unanimous and personal assent by all the individuals of the community to the association by which they became a nation. It was the result of circumstances and discussions, which had occurred during their passage from Europe, and is a full demonstration that the nature of civil government, abstracted from the political institutions of their native country, had been an object of their serious meditation. The settlers of all former European colonies had contented themselves with the powers conferred upon them by their respective charters, without looking beyond the seal of the royal parchment for the measure of their rights and the rule of their duties. The founders of Plymouth had been impelled by the peculiarities of their situation to examine the subject with deeper and more comprehensive research."

The first article of the Declaration of Rights and Laws, as adopted by the colony, 1636, was in these words: "That no act, imposition, law or ordinance be made or imposed upon us at present or to come, but such as have been or shall be enacted by the consent of the body of freemen, or associates of their representatives legally assembled."

"Here we find advanced," said the Orator of Rochester Bi-Centennial Celebration: "The whole principle of the Revolution, and not only that, we find the whole doctrine of our Republican institutions."

prise and independence of these devoted pilgrims and to their brother colonists of New England, New York and the South. These were stirring times, too, in the mother country. The civil war, the Commonwealth and the Restoration belong to this era of English history. The dissensions at home naturally had an adverse influence on the affairs of the struggling colonists, not to engender strife or feud amongst them, for they were too well united in interest and opinion, but to create a breach, at least in feeling, between the republican New Englanders and their royal master. The fruits of the bold independence and right of free speech asserted by the colonists, are seen in the grievous persecutions to which they were subjected by the restored monarchs, such as the withdrawal of the royal charter, the imposition of severe and unjust taxes, and the tyrannous exactions of royal governors. All this was felt and suffered, and left its rankling wound. Nevertheless, despite the fact that the colonists received no aid or sympathy from England, and that they were forced to dissipate their energies in bloody wars with the Indians, these were fifty years of phenomenal prosperity. Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island were dotted with thriving settlements, commerce sought the New England shores, and the wilderness was indeed made to blossom as the rose. It was at this time, too, that the spirit of political liberty, always inherent in the New England character, began to assert itself. In 1643, the Plymouth colony and Massachusetts towns united "for common defense" and for commercial and other purposes. The union gradually extended southward, and ere long all of the American colonies became one in heart and aim, and it remained only for the occasion to present itself, when their union, from being undefined, should become broad and national, proposing a patriotic object, and leaving a distinct impress on history.

To the religious and the political wisdom of the Pilgrims, American civilization owes some of its most cherished institutions. The compact signed by the passengers of the Mayflower, was distinctly prophetic of our national and state government.* The system of free schools, now so national in its ramifications, originated in New England.†

Generally speaking, we have taken to ourselves all that was good in the Pilgrim and the Puritan character, principles, and institutions, and applied it to our altered conditions. Puritan character and manhood are ours by inheritance; Puritan principles by time-honored observance, and Puritan institutions by adoption. In all that touches our national and private conduct, we have, in the example of the forefathers, a model well worthy of our strictest imitation, for, though it cannot be claimed for the Puritans that they were entirely free from human error, yet their conspicuous virtues atoned for their seeming faults; conscience and faith led them in the path of wisdom; and we must search history in vain to discover a state of society in which justice was more righteously dispensed; in which the domestic virtues were more religiously practiced, or in which the laws of man harmonized more perfectly with the laws of God.

The first wife of William Spooner was Elizabeth Partridge.¹ She d. April 28, 1648.

* Bancroft, writing of the compact, says:

"This was the birth of popular constitutional liberty. The middle ages had been familiar with charters and constitutions, but they had been merely compacts for immunities, partial enfranchisements, patents of nobility, concessions of municipal privileges or limitations of sovereign power in favor of feudal institutions. In the cabin of the Mayflower humanity recorded its rights and instituted government on the basis of 'equal rights' for the 'general good!'"

† "The Puritan settlers of New England were fully convinced of the necessity of universal education. They came here with no intention of founding a colony of semi-barbarians like the Boers of South Africa; and, accordingly, we find that as soon as they had provided temporary shelter for themselves, they reared in humble guise indeed, but with willing hands, the church and the school house."

"The free public school (the common school of our time) was of New England origin, but whether Massachusetts or Connecticut is entitled to the honor of its first establishment, is a mooted point. The first legislative enactment was made by Massachusetts in 1647."

The grant by Plymouth colony, 1647, of the pasturage of Rochester lands and at an earlier date of fishery privileges at Cape Cod, were largely for the support of schools. Hon. W. W. Crapo said at Rochester Celebration, July 22, 1879: "The school fund of the Plymouth colony came from the rental of the pasture lands of Rochester, and from the income derived from the rights granted to take mackerel and bass and herrings with nets and seines. The pasturage of Rochester and the fisheries of Cape Cod must always be associated together, as furnishing the earliest support for free schools upon this continent."

is known to have been living in 1734. Walter, at these periods of time, was of an age to have an interest in such matters, and from either John, the son of Elizabeth, or of his grandfather, he probably obtained the record communicated by him to his Plymouth relative.

2 Joshua Pratt came in the "Ann," 1623, and was allotted land among "the old comers." His widow, Bathsheba, administered upon his estate Oct. 6, 1656. He was one of the original thirty-six purchasers of Dartmouth, who met at Plymouth, March 7, 1652.

Spooners heirs are named among the proprietors of Dartmouth in the confirmatory deed of Bradford, and were recognized under the will of their father as the owners of Joshua Pratt's share in "The Purchase," as is seen in the records of Dartmouth proprietors.

These facts, with family tradition, point to Joshua and Bathsheba Pratt as the parents of William Spooner's second wife.

ii JOHN SPOONER. He was living Feb. 7, 1734.

John Spooner was born in Plymouth prior to April 28, 1648, and, is known to have been living Feb. 7, 1734, and must then have been bordering on his 90th. year.

Finding, as early as Oct. 16, 1669, that John Spooner was one of a jury appointed by the Court of Assistants "to lay out an highway, vizt., a county road from Middleboro, Bridgewater, and other places toward Boston,"—establishes the fact, that at that date he was a man of consideration, and esteemed by the Court as of sound judgment,—such services were then only confided to men of known worth and intelligence, and usually of mature years.

He further served the Colony as Grand Juror, in 1702; and, his townsmen as Surveyor of Highways, 1686, 1699 and 1700, and was a member of the Town Council 1690. It is recorded that John Spooner was elected, May 18th, 1710, to represent Dartmouth in the General Court,—but on reference to the published list of officers as compiled by Mr. Whittemore, it is not seen that he took his seat as Representative.

His homestead is described on the record as:

"Beginning at a heape of stones, on y^e west side of y^e way that goes from the meeting house to sd Spooner's abounds, between sd Spooner and John Jenny. * * bounded west by sd mill pond; south by part of Samuel Jennie's, part by undeuided land, part by John Jennie's Land; east by Sam^{el} Spooner's homestead; north, part by y^e undeuided land, part by y^e Land of John Spooner, Junr, Containing by estimation one hundred thirteen acres, allowance for highway, boggs and barren land, in y^e Eight Hundred acre devison and y^e right of sd Spooner qualified by Abraham Tucker's homestead and the Land that belongs to it."

On April 24, 1730, he conveyed to his son, Nathan Spooner,—“in consideration of y^e natural love & effectyon which I haue and beare unto him,
* * all y^t my lot of land lyng to y^e northward of Joseph Taber's homestead, with y^e house in w^{ch} he now dwells, with all y^t lot of land lying to y^e westward of Accoshnut River at a place commonly known by y^e name of Doop Brook, with all y^t lot of land and Salt Marsh meadow lying on y^e Eastward side of Sconticut neck & to y^e Southward side of y^t land y^t belongs to y^e heirs of Jonathan Hathaway Decea^d with all my Salt Marsh meadow at Nasquatucket on y^e west side of Shiping Creek & to y^e westward of y^e meadow w^{ch} I gave to my son Will^m Spooner by deed of gift, also one-third part of one-eighth part of one whole share of Cedar Swamp, with all my right in y^e Islands in said town,—Reserving to myself and to his mother, my wife, y^e above mentioned Premises, Granted to my sd son Nathⁿ Spooner, during y^e term of our natural Lives and to y^e Longest Liver of us.”

This deed was acknowledged before Samuel Willis, “Justice of y^e Peace,” and was witnessed by James Cushman and Isaac Nye, April 27th, 1730; and was recorded in book 20, folio 40, July 14th, 1730, by Samuel Howland.

That John Spooner was married twice, is quite evident from the recorded dates of births of his children.

It is not known who his wives were.

Mr. Sherman was a farmer and blacksmith, lived on land inherited from his father, in what is now South Dartmouth, Mass. He and four others of the name Sherman, held proprietary interests in Dartmouth, under the title of his father.

We know only of Mr. Sherman, that he was a highly respected citizen, an honest, hard working, thrifty man.

His will was executed, June 19, 1720, and was probated May 21, 1734. In it he provides:—

“Imp. i I give and bequeath unto Sarah my wife during her life or widowhood, the house wherein I now dwell, with the yard and half the orchard, and the best bed, and the use of all my household goods, and one cow, said one cow to be hers and her order after her; and whereas I have given my son Timothy my homestead by deed, my will is that he, my said son Timothy, shall keep a cow for his mother during her life or widowhood, and provide and procure for her fire-wood and all other necessaries as shall be suitable for her during her life or widowhood.” He gave to his son Timothy his “shop and smith tools, and all his carts, plows, and all implements belonging to husbandry.”

His sons Philip and Timothy are named in the will as executors.

3 Philip Sherman was a great-grandson of Henry and Agnes Sherman, of Dedham County of Essex, England. The Shermans are of German origin.

Hon. Philip Sherman married Sarah Odding, a daughter of Mrs. John Porter. In 1634 he emigrated from England to New England, and settled in Roxbury. In the Ann Hutchinson troubles, he took the popular side, but as Governor Winthrop ultimately prevailed, he with others found it convenient to emigrate to Rhode Island, and in Providence—with seventeen others—purchased the island of Aquedneck, “through the joint influence of Roger Williams and Sir Henry Vane with the Narraganset Sachems. The Indian name of the place, where the settlement was made, was Pocassett, and was retained some time by the settlers, until changed to Portsmouth.”* “The purchase was completed March 24, ii SAMUEL SPOONER, b. Jan. 14, 1655; d. —, 1739.

The deed of his homestead conveys

“One hundred and four acres and half, with allowance for barren land and rocky, and also for a way; Situate and being on y^e eastward side of Acooshnet river, * * * abounds between sd homestead and y^e homestead of Thomas Hathway, * * * to a fence y^e bounds between sd homestead and y^e homestead of John Jenne * * * ; sd homestead bounded eastward by undivided land, north by y^e homestead of John Jenne in part, part on y^e land of John Spooner, part on y^e land of Samuel Spooner; southward on y^e homestead of Thomas Hathway; westward on y^e marsh and sd Acooshnet river, qualified by Abraham Tucker’s homestead and the land that belongs on y^e right of sd Samuel Spooner on y^e Eight Hundred Acre division.” The date of the execution of this deed by the Proprietors was April 9, 1711.

He was constable† in 1680; and again in 1684; served on grand and petit juries and held other positions of trust. He and his brother John, with others of the Dartmouth proprietors were defendants in suits brought by Zachary Allin and others, Oct. 28, 1684, and by William Wood and others, March, 1686. On trial of the first action, the jury “found for the defendants with the costs of suit,” and in the latter action the plaintiffs were non-suited.

1638. On the first day of July, 1639, they established a regular government of which William Coddington was chosen Governor and Philip Sherman, Secretary. After this he often held office in the colony, and in critical periods, as a man of intelligence, wealth and influence, was frequently consulted by those in authority.

“The early record prepared by him still remains in Portsmouth, and shows him to have been a very neat and expert penman as well as an educated man.

“After the removal to Rhode Island, he left the Congregational Church, and united with the Society of Friends. Tradition affirms that he was a devout, but determined man.” N. E. Geneal. and Hist. Reg., v. xxiv.

* Arnold’s Hist. of Rhode Island, v. i. p. 124.

† The late James B. Congdon, Esq., of New Bedford, to whom the compiler of these records is largely indebted, wrote:

“The earliest recorded date is 1658. This was six years before the incorporation of the town. The earliest town meeting recorded is 1674. This was ten years after the town was incorporated.

“The name Spooner first appears in the record of municipal proceedings in 1680, when Samuel Spooner was chosen Constable. After that time the name Spooner appears on almost every record. One of the name was elected to some office, or is in some way introduced, at more than two-thirds of the town meetings from 1680 to 1779.

“The office of Constable was an important one. He was collector of taxes as well as preserver of the peace. More time for a hundred years was taken up in choosing, excusing and fining this officer than in doing all the other town meeting business.”

His will has date, September 27, 1731, and was proved Feb. 19, 1739, and is of record as follows:

"In the name of God, Amen. This twenty-first day of September, 1731, I, Samuel Spooner, of Dartmouth, in the County of Bristol, in the Province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England, Yeoman, Do make this my last Will and Testament, respecting such worldly estate as it hath pleased God to bless me with, I give and dispose of in the following manner & form:

Imp's.—My will is and I hereby give and bequeath to Experience, my dearly beloved wife, one feather bed and furniture to it, at her election, with all other my household goods and utensils within doors during her widowhood, and that with what my three sons, viz: William, Samuel and Seth, are otherwise obliged to do for her interests, will be an honorable support for her during her remaining my widow.

"Item.—I give to my three sons, William, Samuel, and Seth, & it to be to them, their heirs and assigns forever, all my Cedar & Spruce Swamp lying in Dartmouth, and the same to be divided between them in manner following, that is to say: William to have the one-fifth part thereof, and Samuel to have the one-fifth part thereof, and Seth to have three-fifths parts thereof; and this I give them with a charge to be kind to their honored mother and brother Jashub, and provide for them as they shall stand in need, as by covenant they are obliged unto.

"Item.—I give unto my son, Daniel Spooner, besides what I have already given, one shilling out of my moveable estate, immediately after my death.

"Item.—I give unto my son, Wing Spooner, besides what I have already given, one shilling out of my moveable estate, immediately after my death.

"Item.—I give to my son Jashub, one shilling out of my estate, with a desire of his good careage under the provision I have made for his comfortable support by his brothers, William, Samuel and Seth Spooner.

"Item.—I give to my son, Seth Spooner, whom I constitute and appoint sole executor of this my last will and testament, all my out door moveables, as creatures and husbandry tackling, and he to pay all my just debts, as by covenant he is obliged to do.

"Item.—I give to my five daughters, Mary, Hannah, Annah, Experience and Beulah, besides what I have heretofore given them, one shilling apiece, each of them; and that, with the legacies I have ordered my sons, Daniel and Wing Spooner, to pay them, with what household goods shall remain after my wife's decease which I give her the improvement of, together with such moveable estate as I have not in this my will before disposed of, to be equally divided between them, my said five daughters, and that to be their portion of my estate.

"Lastly.—Whatever estate in lands that I shall be the owner of, or that in any way be appertaining to me that I have not already disposed of, the same, what or wheresoever, be equally divided between all my sons, and to be to them, their heirs and assigns forever; and I do hereby ratify this and no other to be my last Will and Testament.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, the day and year above written."

He came to America 1632; was in Boston for a time, afterward at Saugus. "In 1637, Edward Freeman and nine others, who had been residents of Saugus, formed an associa-highly respected and of influence where he lived. His will is dated March 25, 1717, and provides:

"Imp. I give and bequeath to my loving wife, Martha Wing, the easterly end of my now dwelling house, to be hers during her natural life; also one cow out of my stock at her choice, also two swine, which is also to be at her choice, also twelve pounds money per year, yearly paid her by my son Samuel Wing, and one cow and two swines' keeping yearly, both Winter and Summers during her natural life, upon condition that my son Samuel fails in maintaining her in all respects, as hereinafter I shall will and order him to do.

"Item. I give and bequeath to my son Samuel Wing (upon condition herein expressed) and to his heirs and assigns forever, all my housing and lands both uplands, meadows & swamps, divided and undivided, that I have and do own in the afores^d Rochester & elsewhere and all my moveable estate of all sorts and kinds whatsoever, excepting what I have heretofore & shall hereinafter in this Instrument otherwise dispose of, to be him, his heirs and assigns forever. That is to say, he maintaining his mother Martha Wing during her natural life, with all things necessary for her comfortable subsistence in this life, at the Judgement and discretion of my afores^d two sons Stephen and John Wing, or to pay to her as afores^d."

His sons, Stephen and Samuel, were named as executors. In thus giving to his son, Samuel, the homestead, and making him his residuary legatee, he had not failed in remembrance of tion 'to erect a plantation or town within his Majesty's General Court at Plymouth,' and near the neck of land between the opposite shores of Barnstable and Buzzard's Bays." "They were soon on the ground, and with them about fifty others who were called 'Associates.'" John Wing was one of the "Associates." He came from England with his parents, and settled at Sandwich. He was enrolled, 1643, as "liable to bear arms." in 1657, "the people called Quakers," made their first appearance in Sandwich. Daniel Wing soon associated himself with the Society of Friends, and with his associates, was subject to "penalties of law," in not supporting the established church, and for the offence of being "Quakers," &c., and on four different occasions, from Oct., 1658, to June, 1660, he was fined £5, and at another time he was fined £10, "for refusing to aid the marshall," and was excluded from the number of freeman, 1658. ii WILLIAM, b. ——— ; was living Oct. 27, 1735.

He was a farmer; lived to the north of the village of Acushnet. The traditional site of his residence, as pointed out a few years since, was marked by the ruins of the foundation of a house.

He served in the militia with the rank of Lieutenant; was frequently chosen to town offices; and, with his wife, was a member of Rochester Church.

On May 12, 1711,—“Seventy-six acres of Land was laid out to William Spooner, to complete sd Spooner's claims, beginning at the South-east corner of eighteen acres added to Samuel Jennie's, Jun^r. Homestead. * * The above land was laid out by Benjamin Crane and his assistants, on the day and year above written, and was the thirteenth day of August, 1736, transcribed out of sd Crane's Journals, and therewith compared by me.

“BENJAMIN HAMND, Surveyor.

“The above 76 acres of Land is so much by mashur, and when qualified was to complete sd Spooner's claims in 800 acre division as I sc'pose by what appears in sd Journal.”

On May 20, 1735, his son Benjamin executed a mortgage on:

“Two-third part of sixty acres of land lying in Middleboro, * * near y^e Elder's pond, which he bought of Elkanah Leonard, * * in consideration of 124 pounds, which sd William Spooner paid to his son, Benj. Spooner, to enable him to purchase sd land, which money sd William Spooner designed for his support and maintenance during his life, and whereas the sd Wm. Spooner hath now two comfortable suits of apparel or clothing and a horse; if, therefore ye said Benjamin Spooner, his heirs, executors and adm^{rs}, shall at all times during ye natural life of his sd Father maintain him as well clothed as he now is, and also provide him all other necessaries for his comfortable support both in Sickness & Health during his Father's Life, and a comfortable place to live at; and also keep a horse for his sd Father, winter & summer, as long as he is capable of Riding; then this deed to be void & of none effect." Acknowledged Oct. 27, 1735⁵ before Benj. White, Justice of the Peace.

His son, Nathaniel Spooner, and Stephen West, Jr., executors of his estate, filed their account, charging themselves with the inventory £325, and asked allowance for payments as follows:

ii EBENEZER SPOONER, b. —, 1666; d. Feb. 5, 1718.

Ebenezer, the youngest son of William Spooner, the elder, was born on the old Spooner homestead at Acushnet. At an early age he entered the family of Mr. William Crow,* of Plymouth, by whom, as we conclude from the record, he was reared and adopted. In Mr. Crow's will, dated 2: 11: 1683, and proved March 6, 1683, the following provision is made:

"Item.—I bequeath to Ebenezer Spooner and to Ephraim Thomas all my land and meadow lying near Monponset pond; also I bequeath to them one hundred acres of land which was long since granted to my uncle, Atwood,† by the Court, lying at a place called Doty's meadow, which lands and meadow shall be equally divided between them when Ebenezer shall be 21 years old. I also bequeath to Ebenezer Spooner an heighfer commonly called his."

Ebenezer lived afterwards at Marshfield, where, in June, 1691, he was qualified as a freeman. Subsequent to 1694, he removed to Dartmouth; and there, with his wife, he became a member of Rochester church. From Dartmouth he returned about 1703 to Plymouth, where he passed the remainder of his days.

This branch of the family continues to be largely represented in Plymouth.

His gravestone is standing on "Burial Hill" and is the oldest monument of the family in this country. The stone is a blue

On July 2, 1694, Ebenezer Spooner and Ephraim Thomas conveyed to James B^earse, of Barnstable, “in consideration of 25 pounds, a certain tract of upland and meadows, on the easterly side of Monponsett Pond,” given them by William Crow. On the same date, they quit claim, “2 acres at James River”—the deed running from John Sturtevant to Elkanah Cushman, they relinquishing “all claim they might have by virtue of a gift from old William Crow, in his last will.” And on Feb. 17, 1703, Ebenezer Spooner and Ephraim Thomas conveyed to John Sturtevant, in consideration of £4:10, “one hundred acres of upland, at a place called Lakeham,” referring, also, to the will of William Crow.

iii JOHN SPOONER, b. July 2, 1668; d. —, 1728.

John was the eldest son of John Spooner of Dartmouth. He inherited from his grandfather, William Spooner, "one-fourth part of a share of all y^e vndeuided lands in y^e Township of Dartmouth," together with two acres "of good meadow lying on y^e west side of Sconticut neck, at y^e entering in of y^e neck."

He became quite independent, leaving, at the time of his death, real estate valued at £1,700, and chattels valued at £213:08:6. His will was executed March 4, 1728, and probated April 12, 1728.

Besides being a man of wealth, John Spooner was a man of some influence. A glance at the records of the town of Dartmouth will reveal the estimation in which he was held by his townsmen. He served almost constantly for many years in some official position. It is possible that it was John, Jr., and not his father, who was chosen Representative to the General Court in May, 1710.

iii WILLIAM SPOONER, b. May 11, 1680; d. ———.

He was a farmer; lived on land inherited from his father, in Dartmouth. He was a man of industry and of thrifty habits; and the membership of himself and wife with the Rochester church, is evidence that theirs was a religious household, and, by the trusts held by him, we have knowledge of the high esteem in which he was held and the confidence reposed in him by his townsmen.

His will bears date July 11, 1729. The inventory of his estate summed up £1,325:05:0.

Samuel Hammond was one of the early settlers of Rochester. By his will, dated July 12, 1728, he gave to his grandson, Peter Spooner, "fifty acres of land, lying in Wells afores'd, to be to him, his heirs and assigns forever," and to each of his grand-daughters, Elizabeth and Rosamond Spooner, "fifteen sheep, when she shall come to the age of eighteen years, to be paid to her by my executors out of my movable estate." To Jeduthan, John, Thomas, Phebe and Mary Spooner, he gave "five shillings apiece, to be paid to them by his executors after his decease."

iii NATHAN SPOONER, b. Sept. 21, 1689; was living 1744. He was a farmer, Dartmouth. He was long afflicted with cancerous troubles, which finally caused his death.

On January 4, 1732, he conveyed:

“In consideration of ye sum of seventy pounds in Bills of Good Publick Credit, to him in hand paid by Sam^l Spooner, Junr., [No. 30.] *

* The one-half of a certain Tract of Land containing, by estimation, Twenty-seven acres, lying, situate and being in Dartmouth afores^d and on ye east side of Scoticut neck. Said Land being formerly Laid out in Equal Partnership between my father, John Spooner, [No. 2,] and his brother, Sam^l Spooner, by Benjamin Crane, Surveyr.”

And on Sept. 5, 1742:

“In consideration of Sixty Pounds in good passable bills of publick credit in hand paid,” by Samuel Spooner, [No. 30], Nathan Spooner conveyed to sd Samuel Spooner, “a certain tract of Salt Meadow situate, Lying and being on the east side of Scoticut neck, in Dartmouth afores^d, containing one acre and thirty-nine Rods. * * This lot of meadow bounds eastward on the Sea.”

These tracts of land continued to remain in the family, until after the death of Lemuel Spooner, No. 1151, and, were then inherited by the children of Reed Spooner, No. 1152, who inherited under the wills of Samuel Spooner, No. 30, and Lemuel Spooner, No. 1151.

iii SAMUEL SPOONER, b. Feb. 4, 1693; d. —, 1781.

Samuel Spooner inherited from his father a large tract of land to the east of the river Acushnet in Dartmouth. He preserved his possessions intact, increasing them from time to time by purchase, and transferring them finally to his son Elnathan, free from encumbrance. The house in which he

10 i Philip de LaNoy, says Savage, "came in the Fortune in 1621, and was 19 years old at his coming; was s. probably of Jean and Maria de Launey, baptized Dec. 7, 1603, in the Walloon Church of Leyden; was freeman of the Colony 1632; removed soon after to Duxbury; m. Dec. 19, 1634, Esther Dewsbury, and 2d. Mary, widow of James Glass, d. of William Pontas. He removed to Bridgewater, of which he was one of the original proprietors, and was one of the original purchasers of Dartmouth." One of his children was:

ii Lieut. Jonathan Delano, b. 1648; d. Dec. 23, 1720. He represented Dartmouth in the General Court. He was one of the proprietors of Dartmouth, by the purchase of his father. He m. Feb. 26, 1678, Mary, d. of Nathaniel and Sarah (Walker) Warren; b. Feb. 20, 1658. One of their children was:

iii Mercy Delano, who m. William Spooner, No. 28.

The eldest son of Lieut. Jonathan Delano located at Tolland, Connecticut. His d., Susannah, b. Jan. 23, 1724, m. Nov. 5, 1746, Noah Grant, of Tolland. Noah and Susannah (Delano) Grant were the great-grand-parents of President Ulyses S. Grant.

lived, together with a large part of the land connected with it, remained in the family until 1855—altogether, a period of about two hundred years,—when it was sold by Lemuel Spooner, No. 1151, to a Mr. Dillingham.

Samuel was a farmer. He held several minor town offices. He was a regular attendant on church worship at Acushnet.

His will bears date, Sept. 25, 1777, and was filed for probate, May 1, 1781. It directs that the homestead and the bulk of his other property shall be left to his son Elnathan.

Long previous to his death, however, Samuel had practically disposed of his effects among his children. To those who lived to maturity, married and went from home, he had largely given. Advancing years and infirmities had in a measure incapacitated him from continuing to discharge the active duties of life; so, not wishing to keep up the struggle after his day was past, and feeling entire confidence in the capacity and fidelity of his sons, he shifted the responsibilities of life to their shoulders. To Elnathan he made a deed of gift of the homestead. How well his confidence in his children was justified, is shown by the way in which they observed all his wishes, fostering instead of dissipating their patrimony and carrying out his plans for their welfare. He continued to live on the old homestead with his son Elnathan. He died in 1781 at the advanced age of eighty-eight years.

He m. Apr. 10, 1717, Rebecca Weston.¹¹ She d. Jan. 20, 1729.

- iii DANIEL SPOONER, b. Feb. 28, 1694; d. —, 1797.

Daniel went from Dartmouth to Newport, R. I., where he was admitted a freeman of the colony, May, 1732, and where he carried on the business of house-carpenter in company with his brother, Wing Spooner. He returned to New Bedford, after a time. He removed to Hardwick, prior to June 16, 1748, when he sold a lot near the Barre line, "granted originally to Mr. Keith," and adjoining land of Col. Willis. In a deed of July 14, 1750, he is described as of Nichewoag (Petersham), and must have been a resident of Petersham before April 2, 1749. On that date, both Daniel and his wife were received into membership of the First Church of that town on letters from the Church of Dartmouth. On July 11, 1750, he was chosen one of the Deacons of First Church, Petersham, and held this office many years.

He was an active, thorough-going, reliable man, devoted to his family and friends. As a citizen, he was ever alert to the interests of his town and the welfare of his country. In all the trying times of the Revolutionary conflict, although then beyond the allotted age of man, he took a most decided interest and gave his full influence in behalf of his country. He, and his sons and sons-in-law, were, all of them, patriots. In the town offices of Petersham, the Deacon served in one capacity or another, from 1755 to 1768. An addition to the village was laid out by him.

As an evidence of his vigorous old age, it is related of him, "that after he had passed his ninetieth year, he made the journey to Vermont on horseback to visit his sons."

In his family, while he was an ample provider, indulgent and kindly, giving to his children all the educational advantages afforded by the neighborhood, yet he was a rigid disciplinarian. He was largely governed by the principle that "He that spareth his rod hateth his son; but he that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes." A great-grand-son of his relates that Daniel was "a carpenter and joiner, and worked much from home during the week, and on his return home Saturday night, he would call up his large family of boys, and, without any inquiry, would give each of them a whipping, presuming that, by their conduct through the week, they had deserved it."

The homestead of Deacon Spooner, in Petersham, is yet standing, and is owned by a member of the family. "It is a two-story frame building, 26x40, posts 17 feet, making roof quarter pitch; cornice 14 inches; front door, 6 panels, with side-lights; the interior well finished. His land had frontage on the roads leading to Hardwick and Barre."

- iii SETH SPOONER, b. Jan. 31, 1695; d. March 28, 1787.

Seth Spooner was born in Dartmouth,—that part of the township, now Acushnet, and died in the same town, being the first person laid in the Long Plain grave yard.

He learned the weaver's trade, and lived on his father's place, which he inherited, until by standing surety for his brother-in-law, Nathaniel Sheperd, he lost his homestead. He then, by deed dated June 25, 1741, purchased a farm at the Long Plain (in Acushnet) from Joseph Taber, Jr., (No. 90,) with one acre only of cleared land. Here he lived in a log house, until late in life, when he was taken into the family of his grandson, Hon. Alden Spooner, No. 534, who built on the same site. He was, during his latter years, insane and sometimes violently so. According to tradition, he was of an enterprising and adventurous disposition, very fond of trading and often losing property by this propensity.

trade of house-carpenter some years in New Bedford and vicinity, and about 1739 he removed with his family to Newport, R. I., where, on Sept. 27 of that year, he was admitted a freeman of the colony.

In Newport, he continued at his trade as a master workman and architect, and built up for himself a large contracting business. His brother, Daniel, was associated with him in business some years. Many buildings of his construction are yet standing in Newport, the most notable one being that of the Redwood Library. These all evidence his skill as a mechanic.

The community of Newport soon took knowledge of Mr. Spooner as a man of uprightness, enterprise and intelligence, and called him into the service of the town. Some of its offices he held for years. He held a Captain's commission in the militia.

Mr. Spooner was a member of Rev. Dr. Stiles' church. His wife was a member of the First Baptist Church.

He m. March 9, 1729, Deborah Church.¹⁴ She was living, 1774.

iii BENJAMIN SPOONER. b. Mar. 31, 1691; d. ———, 1783.

It is said of Mr. Spooner, that his early educational advantages were very slight, being limited to what could be had in the schools of his neighborhood, during winter months, and confined to early boyhood years. These, however, were sufficient to lead him to a higher self-culture,—reading, observation, adaptability to apply and use, made him in manhood's life one of the most cultured men of the places in which he lived. His influence through life was given to all enterprises that looked to the welfare of his fellow men, and carried with it the high respect of all who knew him. He was a tall man, of a well formed, large frame.

Soon after attaining his majority, Benjamin went to Sandwich, where he married. From Sandwich he removed to Middleborough, Mass., about 1720, where he purchased a large tract of land bordering on what has since been known as Elder's pond, in that part of the township now known as Lakeville, and here he lived a long and useful life.

iii THOMAS SPOONER, b. —, 1694; d. Dec. 19, 1762.

Thomas Spooner remained in Plymouth. He was a shoemaker by trade, and conducted this business many years, accumulating a competency by his own labor and that of those who were in his employ.

He was a man of more than the average ability, having received a good education for the times; he turned this advantage in a good direction, not solely to his own aggrandizement, but to that end which would accomplish the most good for his townsmen. Soon his ability and his high integrity gave him recognition and placed him in responsible official station, and for many years he served the town in one office or another.

He was Lieutenant of the North Foot Company, under command of Capt. Isaac Lothrop, Jr., in the 1st. regiment of militia in the county of Plymouth, whereof James Warren was Colonel.

Like others of this branch of the family, Thomas was a member of Plymouth Church, and he often served upon its committees and in its offices.

His remains were interred on "Burial Hill," by the side of his father.

- iii EPHRAIM SPOONER, b. —, 1698; d. Nov. 26, 1776.

Captain Ephraim Spooner (for so he was called) lived in Abington, Mass., to which town he went in early manhood; and he was a useful, highly respected and honored citizen. Here he purchased land, and the honorable calling of farmer seems to have been his through life.

He was a man endowed with good natural ability, which had been improved in the schools of Plymouth; and the cultivation of the useful was not neglected in his maturer years. He served his townsmen in minor positions, and was Selectman eight years.

To the church of which he was a member, he gave the influence of his upright character and the strength of his manhood. He was one of the committee appointed to superintend the construction of the meeting-house, which was built on "the southwesterly corner of Peter Nash's pasture, on the westerly side of the road, near the northwesterly corner of Rev. Mr. Dodge's homestead."

The tombstone of Ephraim and that of his third wife are standing in Abington cemetery and bear the following inscriptions:

Erected
 Captain Ephraim Spooner.
 He died Nov^b y^e 26th 1776
 In y^e 78th year of his age.

All ranks and stations here below
 To sovereign death alike must bow:
 Being called of God we cannot stay,
 His summons none can disobey.

In memory of

All of his children, excepting Sarah, were born at Hardwick. Some time prior to 1776, he removed to Warren, Conn. The latter years of his life, and those of his wife, were passed in the family of his son-in-law, Jasper Barnes, at Monkton, Vermont.

He served in the Continental Army for a time, during the ²⁸ He was s. of John Noble, of Wethersfield and New Milford, Conn., and grandson of Thomas and Hannah (Warriner) Noble, who was in Boston 1652, removed to Springfield 1660, and to Westfield 1669. It is said that "The first settler of New Milford, Conn., was John Noble, who came here in the year 1707; he brought with him at first one of his daughters, then about eight years old. His house here was for some time the last house on this side of Albany, and General Nicholson once lodged in it in the wars under the reign of Queen Ann. It deserves to be mentioned to the credit of the natives, that Mr. Noble once left his little daughter, then eight years old, alone with them for the space of three or four weeks, while he was necessarily absent from the town, and on his return he found that she had been treated and taken exceedingly good care of."

iv SAMUEL SPOONER, b. Aug. 31, 1726; d. —, 1794.

Samuel Spooner was a farmer, Dartmouth, Mass. His land bordered on that of Bartholomew West. By his will of Oct. 26, 1793, proved May 6, 1794, he gave to his wife "the use of one-half of the dwelling-house and the farm during her life," and required his son William, "to otherwise provide for his wife." His daughter Rebecca was "to succeed her mother, if she should outlive her, in the use of the one-half of the dwelling-house and the land." On the death of both the widow and daughter, this one-half is given to his grandson, Richard B. Grinnell, requiring him "to pay six shillings to his mother, Reliance, as soon as he is twenty-one years of age, and if her necessity requires it, he shall grant her his assistance towards her support, as far as he shall judge himself able." To his son, William he gave the remainder of his property and appointed him sole executor.

"They moved into the wilderness; no land was cleared. They had to cut poles and to make a yard before they could unyoke the oxen. She, (my grandmother,) showed me the rock beside which she made a fire and baked a johnny-cake for supper. Grandfather got his farm under such cultivation as to keep a good stock of cattle before he died. Grandmother administered and settled the estate after great trouble, and carried on the farm. The latter part of one winter and in early spring, snow fell so deep that the fences were covered, and the crust was hard enough to bear both men and cattle. Men went to March and April town-meetings in a direct line. Being short of wood, grandmother would yoke the oxen, uncle Lemuel drive them, (he was then ten or twelve years old,) to the edge of the woods on the crust of the snow; she cut down a tree, hooked the chain, and he drove to the house while she cut another tree.

"I remember after grandmother was eighty years of age, as she was singing one of her great-grand-children to sleep in her room, a neighbor called; the door of her room being ajar, he inquired with some earnestness, 'what young girl is in the other room singing?'"

He was a farmer,; lived on land of his father, on Scoticut Neck, Fairhaven, Mass.

His widow administered upon his estate, 1770, which was valued at £85:16:1.

The father of Thomas, by his will, gave:

“The use of one-half of that tract of land whereon my said son Thomas did live, to his widow Grace, until his two grand-daughters, Rebecca and Janet, my said son Thomas' daughters severally become of age or be married, * * * when, if my said daughter-in-law, Grace Spooner, does still remain my said son Thomas' widow, my will is that she improve the one-third part of the described premises, so long as she remains his said son's widow.” And he further orders, “that on failure of the marriage of his grand-daughters and the failure of an heir or heirs borne of their bodies lawfully begotten, that my son Elnathan Spooner, have the said land with the dwelling house, if he be living, but if he be dead, it shall be equally divided between his heirs, if he have such heir or heirs; if not, I then give it to my grand-son, William Spooner, (son of Seth, deceased,) if he should be then living; if not, it is to descend equally to the male heirs of my son Amaziah.”

This tract of land, on the death of Rebecca, 1858, was inherited by the children of Reed Spooner, No 1152, and was sold by them to Jones Robinson, of New Bedford.

- iv ELNATHAN SPOONER, b. Nov. 20, 1730; d. May 29, 1816.

Our knowledge of most of those of whom we have thus far spoken, and indeed of the greater number of those of whom we have yet to speak, has been obtained chiefly from town and colonial records. Consequently this knowledge is very scant and crude; for our facts, being scattered and often of doubtful authenticity, our conclusions must, in many cases, be vague and inferential.

We examine the records and find that a certain person was born at a certain time and place; that he married and left children—or that he did not, as the case may be; and that he died, and, dying, disposed of his property in a certain way and to certain persons. Here, in most cases, our task ends; and if we attempt to go beyond this, and to speak of life, character or works, we speak, for aught we know, pure fictions. If, then, in the course of our inquiries, we come upon a man whom we know to have had qualities, either of mind or heart, which entitle him to be singled out from his fellows, it is right thus to single him out and to mark him with a distinctive mark.

* See note, No. 33.

† His first wife was Mary Rice, who d. July 9, 1812.

Elnathan Spooner was born in Acushnet, Dartmouth, Mass. He was a son of Samuel, and of Deborah, his second wife. During his father's life, he received from him the old homestead as a "deed of gift," and here he lived, maintaining his aged parents and raising his own children and the children of his son Seth by his first wife.

At his death, he made the following provision for his two daughters:—"equally to be divided between them, all my salt marsh meadow lying in Nasquetucket, adjoining Ephraim Delano's land, together with my westernmost lot of land lying in Sconticut Neck, being a wood-lot containing about ten acres, and also the improvement of one-third part of my dwelling house, together with the improvement of one-third part of my orchard." His homestead, with the remainder of his estate, he gave to his son Thomas.

If we may credit the testimony of Elnathan's grand-children, who were reared under his roof, of his neighbors and of all who had dealings with him, he was in every sense a true man. His nature was generous and charitable,—he was profoundly religious,* looked always to the bright side, and lived and died without losing a friend or making an enemy. We know that it is very easy to give a man a character for virtue and honesty after he is dead—particularly when he has been buried three-score years or more, and when he is a man of whom no one has heard or cares to hear. But with regard to Elnathan we speak

* He worshiped at the Congregational Church of Acushnet, which was formed early in the last century. Ricketson says:—"The meeting-house, taken down a few years since, having been long unoccupied and in a dilapidated condition, stood upon the hill about half a mile to the eastward of the village of Acushnet. The old grave-yard, however, still remains,—one of the most ancient and interesting burial-places in the Old Colony domain." In this cemetery were interred the remains of Elnathan, and of his

He was succeeded by Rev. Israel Cheever, who was dismissed in 1759. He was followed in 1761, by Rev. Samuel West, D. D. He was a graduate of Harvard. He remained in pastoral charge until June, 1803. Ricketson says that:—"Under the ministry of Doctor West, the society was very large, being the only meeting for religious worship, with the exception of that of the Friends, for an extensive district of country. Doctor West was a man of superior abilities and education for that period, but his great eccentricity combined with absence of mind, rendered him less practically useful in his profession than many of inferior talents and knowledge."

31 i John Jenney, d. 1644. He came in the "James," 1623; was a highly respected and useful citizen of Plymouth; was an Assistant from 1627 to 1640. He m. in Leyden Nov. 1, 1614, Sarah Carey. Their eldest child was:

ii Samuel Jenney, who was living, 1686. His mother was one of the original pur-at Dartmouth, and were among the largest land holders, deriving this interest by the purchase of one full proprietary share by Mrs. Sarah, the widow of John Jenney, the American progenitor of the family.

The family dates its American origin to about the first settlement of Plymouth; from this place they removed to the Dartmouth purchase, and were among the earliest settlers of that new territory. The family were neighbors and friends of the Spooners, and both families were closely connected by frequent intermarriages.

John Jenney, who married Abigail Spooner, was a farmer. His land in Dartmouth fronted on the east bank of the Acushnet river, and was about equi-distant from "The-Head-of-the-River" and Fairhaven wharf. The situation is a most delightful one; the land above the average for agricultural purposes. This land he inherited, and here he dwelt in peace, surrounded by his friends and having an abundance to meet the wants of his family,—and here probably he would have continued, had it not been for the approaching conflict between the American colonies and the mother country. The trials, the turmoil and troubles attending the war, fell more heavily upon those living on or near the sea coast, than upon those who lived in the interior of the country. To avoid, as far as could be, these threatened conflicts and trials, Mr. Jenney sold his place and removed with his family to Hardwick, Mass., where he purchased a large tract of land and lived during the rest of his life.

He is represented as having been a man of good natural endowments, which had been cultivated by as good an education as could be given in the schools of his neighborhood. These advantages were well used by him, to the welfare of his children and to the benefit of the communities where he dwelt. He was industrious and enterprising; sustained an honorable character and faithfully discharged every trust.

who was a man of much ability and considerable celebrity. Edward was his fifth son.

Edward Ruggles' large landed interest placed him in independent circumstances,—and, having had all the advantages of an education, he became a very prominent as well as a useful man,—using his wealth and influence as became a good citizen and Christian.

He was a farmer; was ensign of militia. He resided in what is now New Braintree, somewhat more than one mile east of the river, on the road to Rutland, until about 1760, when he purchased the estate on the summit of Ruggles Hill, Hardwick, where he afterward lived.

His wife, Lucy, was a woman of marked refinement and intelligence. She was the eldest child of Dea. Daniel Spooner of Petersham, Mass. She had an energy of character and aptitude for business very rare with her sex. Until within a few years of her death (she died in her 92d year,) she retained entire possession and control of the estate left her by her husband.

Daniel Fay was an agriculturist, the owner of a large landed estate in Hardwick, Mass. He was an intelligent and highly-respected and influential man. We find him as having been in service in the French and Indian War, 1758, in the Company of Capt. Samuel Robinson, Col. (afterward Brigadier General) Timothy Ruggles' regiment. He was commissioned Lieutenant of Militia, 1771, and was Lieut. on the "alarm list," 1775.

iv SHEARJASHUB SPOONER, b. Aug. 14, 1735; d. April 25, 1785.

Shearjashub was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. His name is found on several muster-rolls. He was with Stark at Bennington. In common with many other soldiers and citizens of the Revolution, he was a sufferer from the financial embarrassments of the Government, so much so that, through an unlucky venture in Continental paper currency, he was forced to sacrifice his patrimony to pay his debts.

In 1779, he took up his residence at Heath, and in 1785, leaving his eldest son in charge of his family and farm, and taking with him his second son, Paul, he went to Hudson, N.Y., to seek employment at his trade—that of house-joiner. Here he died shortly afterward (April 25, 1785) of small-pox.

Though comparatively poor during his last years, and though at no time of his life situated in affluent circumstances, Shearjashub gave to all his children excellent educational and social advantages. He was himself a man of much culture, and was highly respected by his neighbors and friends, not only for his intelligence and probity, but also for his really superior gifts of mind. We shall see when we come to speak of some of his descendants, that these gifts were of no uncertain kind, and that in the family of at least one of his sons, they bore some very remarkable fruits.

iv WING SPOONER, b. Dec. 29, 1738; d. Dec. 7, 1810.

Like his elder brothers, Shearjashub and Ruggles, and his younger brothers, Eliakim and Daniel, Wing Spooner entered the army and fought in the wars of his country. More fortunate than his brothers, however, he became a soldier of very considerable merit, so that, early in his military career, he was elevated from the ranks and given the command of a Company.

At the breaking-out of the French and Indian war, Wing, then only nineteen years of age, enlisted in the Company of Capt. Stone. In 1758 he was transferred to the Company of Capt. Alexander Dalrymple (Col. Jedediah Preble) in which Company he had a long service.

When the troubles arose between the Colonies and the mother country, Wing Spooner was among the first in his village to condemn the oppressive measures resorted to by England, and to advocate the cause of independence and revolution. An ultra Whig from conviction, he showed himself a true patriot, both by precept and example. He was active and efficient in raising volunteers and in helping to devise ways and means for the prosecution of the war. So great was his patriotic ardor, that he caused his two eldest sons to enlist in the Federal service while they were mere youths and not legally required to bear arms.

In April, 1775, Wing Spooner enlisted as a private in the Company of Capt. John Wheeler, (Col. Ephriam Doolittle.) Soon after, as a mark of recognition of his services prior to his enlistment, he was raised to the rank of Captain. He commanded a company in the regiment of Col. Nathan Sparhawk at the engagement at Bennington, and was present with his Company at the battle of White Plains, and at other of the important conflicts of the war.

Wing was also honored in peace. He held several important official positions in Petersham, where he resided. He showed good capacity in his management of his various public trusts.

His house in Petersham is still standing on the New Salem road, about a half-mile west of Petersham; and in this house he and his wife passed the entire forty-eight years of their wedded life.

iv ELIAKIM SPOONER, b. April 7, 1740; d. Jan. 3, 1820.

Eliakim Spooner was the fifth, and, after his younger brother Paul, perhaps the best-known son of Deacon Daniel of Petersham. Until about 1780 he lived in Worcester County, Mass., where he was quite prominent, filling several town and county offices.

Following the examples of his brothers, he enlisted in 1757 in the colonial service. He performed his first tour of military duty under Captain Eleazer Warner, and afterwards was in the regiment of Col. Timothy Ruggles. In 1775, with his brother Wing, he gave his best endeavors to the patriot cause. He volunteered in the Company of Captain John Wheeler.

The year 1780 found him in Vermont, settled on a part of what was then known as the "New Hampshire Grants," whither he had removed from his former home in Massachusetts. A few years afterwards, he left "the Grants" and took up his residence in the township of Westminster, on a place known as "the Governor's Farm," so called because, when the division of the proprietary shares among the grantees had first been made, this property had been reserved for the use of the Governor.

This "Governor's Farm" was a very valuable property, embracing a large tract of fertile and finely-situated land on the west bank of the Connecticut River. When Eliakim Spooner negotiated for its purchase, it was held by the Commissioners of Confiscation of the State. It had formerly been the property of an Irish adventurer, Crean Brush, who, insinuating himself into the good graces of the New York Colonial Assembly, had received a number of lucrative appointments, among them, Colonial Secretary of Cumberland County, and thus obtained possession of considerable landed property in the "New Hampshire Grants." Taking possession of his newly-acquired property about the time of the breaking out of the war, Brush made himself peculiarly offensive to the colonists and authorities by his profligacy, avariciousness, and what was thought to be still more odious at that time—violent Toryism. He left his property and sought protection with the British in Boston, where, however, he was soon committed to prison for a felonious act. Making his escape before the time appointed for his trial, he put a violent end to his life. Having left Vermont at the time he did and under the circumstances he did, the confiscation of his possessions followed as a matter of course. Unfortunately, however, the act of confiscation was not passed until after Brush's death; and this afforded his heirs a technical ground on which to seek to recover the property. After the admission of Vermont into the Union, the daughter and heir of Brush laid claim to the farm, and brought suit in the Circuit Court of the United States, against Eliakim Spooner, in whose possession it then was. She obtained a decree in her favor, but subsequently Eliakim entered a plea under the Vermont Act of Betterments, and was eventually reinstated in possession, though not until after a tedious and expensive litigation.

The troubles in which Eliakim was involved, relative to the retention, and afterward the recovery of his property, came upon him in the later years of his life, and were, as they well might have been, a source of great annoyance. He had just begun to enjoy the possession of the wealth and leisure which he had so well and honestly earned, and, with this wealth and leisure at his command, felt justified in entering a new and more varied sphere of action and employing his abilities in a field for which he was eminently qualified,—the service of the State. Had this misfortune been spared him, and had he been free to make his way to political preferment, who can say that he might not have enjoyed a much greater measure of success than he attained, and have reached some higher destination than he did? As it was, he raised himself to several important positions of trust and honor. He frequently represented his town in the Vermont Legislature, and for seven successive years was elected a member of the Executive Council of the State. His last years were passed in Woodstock, Vt.

Eliakim Spooner is remembered as a man of very marked mind and character. He was dogmatic and opinionative, yet very candid and generous. He had few "advanced" ideas or opinions; did what the world (his world) did, and looked to the main chance with genuine Yankee tact. In a word, he was a thorough-going New Englander, with all the New Englander's faults and virtues.

iv PAUL SPOONER, b. Mar. 20, 1746; d. Sept. 5, 1789.

Paul Spooner, the youngest son of Deacon Daniel Spooner, was born in Dartmouth, Mass., Mar. 20, 1746. About 1749, his father removed to Petersham, and here Paul grew up and was educated. When, in 1757, his elder brothers enlisted in the army, Paul remained at home, and thus, in a great measure, the care and responsibility of assisting his father in the support of the family devolved upon him. He was educated as a physician and was, we believe, the only one of his father's family who enjoyed the advantages of a professional education.

In 1768, having qualified himself for his chosen profession, he went to Vermont, and purchased a farm on the "New Hampshire Grants" in Hartland, where he commenced the practice of medicine. But feeling an active and patriotic concern in the stirring events of his time, he was soon diverted from his professional practice and led into another path. A pioneer in the work of organizing the territory, he soon became thoroughly identified with its interests, and was, for some years previous to his death, one of the most prominent men in its legislative, executive and judicial councils.

To rightly appreciate the value of Paul Spooner's public services, it should be borne in mind that Vermont, at the time of which we speak, was in its formative state. It was originally settled under grants of land made by the Colonial Governor of New Hampshire, with the consent and approval of the Crown, on condition of actual occupation and settlement. Grants of this kind were first made in 1749, but as the territory was on the extreme frontier, it was not until after the conquest of Canada in 1759, and the final conclusion of peace in 1763, that the work of settlement can be said to have begun.

All who are in any way familiar with Colonial history, know the story of the claim advanced by New York to the possession of the "New Hampshire Grants." It is a story of much interest, even to the desultory reader, but, as it has no very direct bearing on the matter in hand, we will not introduce it here at length. All that need be said is, that the Colonial Governments of New York and New Hampshire set up conflicting claims to the territory; that a bitter and uncompromising war at law was waged for thirty years; that the sympathies of the colonists were strongly enlisted in favor of New Hampshire and against New York, and that finally, in 1777, the settlers took the matter into their own hands, declared their independence of New York, and proceeded to organize an independent State Government, a Constitution was adopted and ratified, and, in obedience to its terms, an election for State officers was held in 1778. At this first election, Paul Spooner was called to official position. He had previously (May 5, 1777,) declined the office of Sheriff of Cumberland County, to which he had been appointed by the Colonial Government of New York.

In our desire to first dispose of this point of our subject, we have somewhat anticipated matters in point of time. Paul Spooner first appears in Vermont history as a delegate from Hertford (Hartland) to a Convention held in Westminster, Oct. 19, 1774, to protest against the "Tea Act," "Boston Port Bill" and other measures of the British Crown. He was a member of the Committee on "Resolutions" and had a part in drawing up a report expressive of the sense of the Convention. The report which was adopted, expresses surprise that the King and Parliament "should dare to attempt to bind the Colonies," asserts that, if the colonists submit to the exactions of Great Britain, they are "in the fullest sense of the word, slaves," and condemns the King and Parliament as traitors, "not only to their American subjects, but also to the British Constitution."

At the Whig Convention, held at Westmoreland, Feb. 5, 1775, Dr. Spooner was chosen Secretary. Again, June 6, 1775, he was a delegate to the Cumberland County Congress, and was chosen by that body as one of three delegates to represent the County in the Provincial Congress at New York. He served in this capacity during the rest of the session of the Congress, was re-elected and served during the session which commenced Nov. 5, 1777. In July, 1777, he became a member of the Vermont Council of Safety, and, in the absence of its Secretary, Ira Allen, was appointed Secretary pro. tem. When the State Constitution was adopted, he was again elected a member of the Council, and was afterward re-elected four times. He, therefore, served in this body from 1777 to 1782-3, a period of six years.

In 1782 he became Lieutenant Governor of the State, to which office he was annually re-elected until 1787. He was for nine years Judge of the Supreme Court (1779 and 1780; and 1782-9.) During the years 1781 and 1782 he was Judge of the Probate Court of Windsor County, and during these years he was also sent by his State as a representative to the Federal Congress to press Vermont's claims to admission into the Union. In this, however, he did not succeed, for it was not until two years after his death that Vermont was received into the Union.

From the accounts that have come down to us of Paul Spooner, it is clear that the eminence which he reached in public life was well-merited. His judicial decisions evince considerable ability. He had the gift of application, and was, if the evidence of history counts for anything, a most successful worker in every good cause. He was emphatically one of the few that are chosen, and his ambition must indeed have been great if it was not fully gratified. One thing, indeed, was denied him,—an opportunity to carry his reputation beyond mere State bounds and make it national. But the fault was neither his nor his countrymen's, but nature's, which forced him to submit to the common lot while he was still in his prime, with his mind and reputation fresh and vigorous, capable of growing with his country's growth and exerting an influence proportionate to his ability.

532 ii Paul, b. —, 1772; d. ———.

He lived in Hardwick, Vt. At the first town-meeting of the citizens of Hardwick, Paul was chosen Town Clerk and held this office two years. He was a Justice of the Peace in 1796 and 1797, and represented his town in the State Legislature from 1797 to 1800.

"He is remembered," writes a friend, "as a man of fine talent, a useful citizen, and naturally one of the best men who ever lived in the town." From Hardwick he went to the then "District of Maine," about 1803, where he soon died, a victim of intemperance.

When Hardwick was first settled and laid out as a township, eight persons of the name of Spooner had proprietary interests of 200 acres of land each, iv WALTER SPOONER, b. —, 1720; d. Oct. 26, 1803.

The materials for a notice of this member of the family are, at this distance of time, scanty, and indicate but imperfectly the place which he filled in public places.

His father was a queer compound of Yankee shrewdness and shiftlessness, better remembered by his inveterate love of driving a trade than by any other trait; of his mother we know only the name,—Rose Clarke of Sandwich,—and her family was from Rhode Island.

His school advantages must have been very few, but his native good sense stood him in good stead. In 1741, his father, by standing surety for a brother-in-law, was obliged to give up his inherited farm, near the present Friends' meeting-house at Acushnet. A tract of uncleared land was purchased on the "Long Plain," so called, now in Acushnet, on the borders of Rochester, and in his nineteenth year the son helped to clear an acre of ground to erect a house, which is still standing. The house which he built in later years, and which was his family residence, is also standing near by.

His first public occupation was as Selectman of the town of Dartmouth, in 1759; this office he held for thirteen consecutive years, and also for later periods. In 1761, he was chosen a Representative to the General Court, and so continued for nine years. In 1769, being elected a member of the Council of the Province, his name, in company with Bowdoin, Hancock and Otis, was rejected by Governor Bernard; but in 1770, he was admitted to the Council, and held his seat for seventeen years. Any history of our Revolutionary period will show how important were the duties of the Councilors (twenty-eight in number) during these years; and the records of the proceedings of the Council prove that our kinsman was especially trusted and active. In his turn he acted as President of the Council while it was the supreme executive authority in the Province. He was, of course, one of the Councilors who took their seats in the first Provincial Congress of Massachusetts, in November, 1774, in place of those arbitrarily appointed by the King in defiance of the Charter. At the next election the General Court alone had the choice of the Council, and these two bodies governed until the adoption of the State Constitution in 1780.

Among the special trusts which he fulfilled, one which took him outside the Province may be mentioned. In June, 1775, he was chosen chairman of a committee of three sent by the Massachusetts Legislature to Lake Champlain, to inquire into the importance of holding Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and the method by which these posts should be maintained; also to examine into the spirit, capacity, and conduct of Col. Benedict Arnold, then commander at Crown Point, and to order his immediate return to Massachusetts if they should think proper. Arnold is said to have been highly indignant at these instructions, and accounts are preserved of an outrageous attempt instigated by him to seize the Commissioners and rob them of the money which they carried for the pay of the troops. This incident is referred to in the following extract from Amory's Life of Gov. James Sullivan, (i, 54,) who was one of Judge Spooner's associates on the Commission: "Our informant heard Sullivan narrate the particulars of the encounter with the soldiers many years after their occurrence, at his own table, before a large party of gentlemen, among whom was his companion of the expedition, Walter Spooner. Spooner was a man of remarkably venerable appearance, and had been, at one time during the war, President of the Council. In relating the attack upon them in the woods, Sullivan directed the attention of the company to his ancient friend, and begged them to contemplate that grave and dignified presence, to recall what a rigid observer they had always found him of what was proper and decorous, and then realize, as best they could, that during all this encounter, he was swearing like a trooper."

The reports of this important Commission, written by Judge Spooner, and addresses to the Massachusetts Assembly and the Continental Congress are preserved in Force's American Archives. In the same repository we find accounts of conferences held near this period with General Washington, in which our kinsman took part, as well as various letters of his, in his official capacity as President of the Council, to Washington. He was on the committee appointed in March, 1776, to draft the address to the General on his entrance into Boston just after the evacuation by the British.

In 1778, he is said to have attended Gen. John Sullivan in an unofficial capacity as an adviser in his notable attempt to dislodge the British from Rhode Island.

He had a seat in the Convention which framed the Constitution of Massachusetts, having been chosen a delegate from Dartmouth, December, 2, 1779. The state Government then organized placed him in a new position, from which he acquired the title by which he was best known. On March 27th, 1781, he was appointed by Governor Hancock, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for his native county.

He was a delegate to the Massachusetts Convention of 1788, which ratified the Constitution of the United States, and one of the Presidential Electors for the first and second terms of George Washington. In 1791, he was Chairman of the Massachusetts Commissioners appointed to adjust the boundary line between that State and Rhode Island.

Shortly after this, on reaching the age of seventy, he retired from his long and honored public career, being so induced, as he said, by the sight of many of his acquaintances who had outlasted their usefulness in public life. Twice only did he suffer himself to be drawn from his retirement, in acting as Presidential Elector a second and third time in 1792 and 1800.

He retained, however, until his death, several less burdensome duties; such as Chairmanship of the Board of Overseers of the plantation of Indians at Marshpee, to which he had been appointed by the Governor and Council in 1789, and the trusteeship of Bristol Academy at Taunton, long a famous institution in his section of the State, of which he had been named the first Trustee at its incorporation in 1792.

At his death, the Columbian Courier, the only paper then published in New Bedford, gave the following:

“Died, in this town, Oct. 26. 1803, after a short illness, Walter Spooner, Esq., in the 82d year of his age. Judge Spooner was an early and active friend of the American Revolution, and both before and after the establishment of our Independence, filled several important stations under the Government, with honor to himself and usefulness to the State: and, after being induced by increasing age to retire from more busy cares of public life, was at the two last periods for the election of President and Vice President of the United States chosen one of the Electors of this Commonwealth.”

The Boston papers also noticed his death as the loss of a patriot and statesman well known in the political history of Massachusetts.

A summary of his character would be interesting, but his deeds are his memorial. He had abundance of good sense, but no graces or elegancies of speech or pen to mark him. Those who knew him trusted him, and relied on his judgment; one of his colleagues in the Council has left it as his testimony that, “after Samuel Adams this was the most clear-headed and far-seeing man he had ever known.” When party lines were drawn after the settlement of the government, he was an earnest Federalist.

Judge Spooner was not connected with any religious denomination. While at home he was a devout and regular attendant at Friends’ Meeting, and probably held a similar belief; thus on becoming a member of the Council he affirmed, instead of taking, the oath; yet while in Boston he is said to have attended the preaching of Rev. Dr. Mayhew. Like the less strict party of the Quakers, he believed that defensive war might be justifiable and proper.

Samuel Spooner lived in Newport, R. I. He was a house carpenter. A grandson of his writes of him: "He took an active part in the Revolutionary contest, in strenuously opposing the tyranny of the British Government. He was one of those who styled themselves 'Sons of Liberty'; so strong was he in his animosity to the Royal Government, that he would not drink tea, nor did he allow it to his family. When the English occupied Newport, so loyal was he, he would not remain there and be removed to Bristol R. I. He returned to Newport after the British had left, to find that his house had been occupied by English soldiers, and was nearly destroyed."

iv CHARLES SPOONER, b. —, 1738; d. —, 1779.

Charles Spooner was born in Newport, R. I., and lived there all his days, excepting the period of time that Newport was held by the English troops, when he was in Bristol, R. I. He was a house-carpenter, a skilled and trusted workman.

He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and had a large influence, which was ever directed to all the best interests of the town, to the cultivation of a high social and moral standard, and to the strengthening of religious character.

He was a patriot, a "Son of Liberty," opposed the tyranny of the British Government, and devoted himself to the cause of Independence, aiding largely in the rallying of recruits for the patriot army and in raising means to support the families of volunteers.

His early death, following closely upon his losses during his absence in Bristol, and the sacrifice of business interests through his patriotic devotion to country; left his family destitute. His wife died soon after. Their orphan children were taken into the family of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Briggs,—No. 188,—and by them were educated.

Mr. Spooner served his town in many of its offices. August 8, 1763, Governor Stephen Hopkins commissioned him "Major of the Regiment of Militia in the county of Newport," to which he had been appointed by the Colonial General Assembly of Rhode Island.

- iv WING SPOONER, b. —, 1749; d. Dec. 28, 1802.

Wing was a house-carpenter, Newport, R. I. The Newport Mercury said of him:

"The death of an honest and worthy man and citizen is a public loss. No man, according to his ability, was more devoted to public utility than Captain Spooner. Liberality was the prominent feature of his character.

"To his patriotism and exertions the town of Newport is indebted for the formation of a well disciplined and respected Independent Company,—the Newport Guards,—which, for many years, he commanded, with the universal approbation of the Company and the public.

"Warmly attached to the independence and the liberties of his country, he, by his individual suffrage and influence, supported those politics which was characteristic of the true American.

"As a private man, he fulfilled all his domestic duties. As a citizen, he was patriotic and public-spirited, and a supporter of good order and government. As a soldier, he was active and vigilant, an advocate for discipline, and by a fortunate manner able to support it without severity. As a Mason, he was a brother good and true, naturally philanthropic and charitable.

"The citizens of the town, the Independent Company of the Newport Guards, under the command of Capt. Perry, and the fraternity of Masons evidenced their regard for his memory by attending his remains to the grave."

Joshua was born in Middleboro', Mass., and was married there. He removed to Providence, R. I., prior to 1760, where he afterwards lived and followed his trade of house-carpenter. He was elected Deputy to the Rhode Island Colonial Legislature, Apr. 16, 1760.

This was no slight honor in those days. The colonists elevated none to office but those of probity and capacity; those who could come with clean hands. None but men of intelligence and respectability were entrusted with public business. To be elected to represent Providence, in the Legislature, is most conclusive evidence that our kinsman was a man of intelligence and had the high consideration of his townsmen.

He was a soldier in the French and Indian war; and again, when his country called, in the Revolutionary contest, he volunteered and served a long time. He was Sergeant of the Company under command of Capt. Amos Washburn.

His was a long and useful life. His is the largest family that we have of record.

iv CORNELIUS SPOONER, b. Dec. 10, 1732; d. ———.

He was a house-carpenter; lived about one and one-half miles below Fairhaven, Mass., on land where the Fort now stands.

Cornelius was a most active participant in the Revolutionary War,—almost continuously in service. His name is first found on the muster-roll of Capt. Lucius Pope's company, which marched from Dartmouth, for Roxbury, April 21, 1775; and, lastly, on the "list of men raised in ye county of Bristol to serve in the Continental Army, agreeable to a resolve of ye General Court of Massachusetts, of Dec. 21, 1781," and is described on the muster-roll as, "stature, 5 feet, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches; occupation, carpenter; complexion light; brown hair; blue eyes; enlisted for three years." He died in the army.

iv EBENEZER SPOONER, b. Oct. 26, 1718; d. —, 1776.

Ebenezer was the eldest son of Thomas Spooner, of Plymouth. In early manhood he settled in Middleboro', where he married Mary Morton, the daughter of a wealthy farmer. In 1769 his daughter, Phebe Spooner, married Andrew Oliver, a son of the celebrated Chief Justice Oliver; and Ebenezer's family thus became connected with some of the first families of Massachusetts.

In Ebenezer's life and character we note a feature which, as it does not seem to have been possessed by any other member of the family, entitles him to be spoken of apart from others. So far as is known, he was the only one of the family who did not side with the colonists in their struggle for independence.* And not only this, but he was a pronounced Tory and Loyalist, and, from the first mutterings of discontent in 1765, until, in 1776, he was forced to flee his home, Ebenezer was a consistent and strenuous opponent of everything but entire obedience to the British government. Driven from his family and possessions by the strength of public sentiment, he sought refuge within the British lines in Boston. He was commissioned a Lieutenant in the third Company of "American Loyal Associates," under the command of Brigadier-General Timothy Ruggles. Embarking with the British army at the time of the evacuation of Boston (March 17, 1776), he fell ill

* Gaphineah Spooner, (who is supposed by some to have been Zepheniah S., No. 164) of New York, and George Spooner, (who was a descendant of John Spooner, of Boston, See note, No. 137.) of Boston, were also Loyalists.

(whether from the effect of a wound or disease is not known), and died soon after.

In the biographical sketches which we have introduced in the course of this work, it has been our chief study to speak only of matters of ascertained fact; to view a man in the light of his known character, impulses and actions, and in so doing, to studiously avoid being influenced by matters of opinion. In striking the balance of a man's character, we have not concerned ourselves to inquire whether he was in politics a Whig or Tory, or a Democrat or Republican, or whether, in religion, he followed the precepts of Jonathan Edwards or those of Thomas Paine. These are questions which may well be asked when we are called upon to determine the amount of good or ill that a man has done in the world, but they are not questions which should in any way affect our judgment of the man himself. In judging character let us ask ourselves: is the man honest? Does he act and speak the truth, in the main? or, Is he a base truckler? and, does he speak and act what he knows to be falsehood?

In so far as we can be said to criticise character (and criticism of character is to a certain extent inseparable from biographical inquiry), we have endeavored to do full justice, never venturing to extol a man simply because he agrees with us in matters of opinion, or to condemn him because he differs. We may, in passing, indicate what we think to be the plain verdict of history, and assert that this or that man did or did not aid to bring about a certain beneficent result; but when a man acts honestly, we can go no further, and are bound to say that he is one of the honest men of the world.

So, in writing of the Revolutionary period of American history, or, indeed, of any other momentous period, such as that of the anti-slavery agitation, or that of the great Civil War, we should not permit ourselves to misconceive the character of any of the actors in it. To be sure, viewed in the light of history, one of the contending parties is essentially right and the other essentially wrong; yet who shall say that they are not both essentially honest?

Mr. Sabine, in his very intelligent and well-considered essay on the state of the Thirteen Colonies and the attitude of political parties at the beginning of the Revolution, has said about all that can be said, both in defence and in condemnation of the American adherents of the British Crown; and all who wish to examine the matter in detail should not fail to read his valuable contribution to Revolutionary history.* Considered as a political party, the Tories of the Revolution were certainly opposed to the broad principle of freedom and humanity; they were certainly a party of high-born and haughty aristocrats, who had nothing in common with the people by whom they were surrounded. But when all this is granted, the plain fact remains that, as a party, they proposed to themselves a very earnest, very honest, and—let us say frankly—very humane, and, in one sense, commendable purpose. Not only this, but when we leave these generalities and search for individual examples of heroism and self-denial, we certainly shall not be at a loss where to look or what to say. We can not think that it would derogate much from the character of American valor if Timothy Ruggles and Richard Saltonstall could be classed with the men who fought to establish American independence; neither do we think that Jared Ingersoll or the Olivers could fail to receive our undisguised admiration if, instead of having suffered from Whig fanaticism, they had been driven from their firesides by mobs of infuriated Tories. Doubtless these instances of Tory bravery and fortitude weigh very little when placed in opposition to the noble examples of the American patriots, but they weigh a great deal when we come to inquire whether history has or has not done entire justice to the character of a much condemned people. It will perhaps be answered that a great many of the Tories were low and unscrupulous conspirators, who stuck at neither bribery nor assassination to compass their ends; and all of this is perhaps true, but we should remember that where no quarter is given, none can be expected, and that, when the political life or death of a people depends on desperate action of some kind, their recourse to questionable practices is neither entirely unnatural nor entirely indefensible. Finally, dislike as we may the principles of the Loyalists and the objects which the Loyalists proposed, it should be said that they were nevertheless quite honest and conscientious in their opinions, and on this ground deserve, if not our sympathy, at least our generous forbearance.

So far from condemning Ebenezer Spooner for his part in the Revolution, we think that the course he took is rather a point in his favor. The fact that he took the unpopular instead of the popular side, may not, perhaps, do very great credit to his discretion or to his worldly wisdom, but it certainly does do great credit to his independence and sincerity, and, we think, pronounces a not unfavorable verdict on his character in general; for, what truer test can there be of the rectitude of a man's character than his readiness to offer up his life and his possessions in sacrifice to his opinions? A man who shows such a readiness, and who dares calumny and persecutions for opinion's sake,—who finally surrenders his life in combating what he honestly thinks to be error, was not, we must conclude, negatively honest and upright, but positively so.

One of the crew escaping, returned to Plymouth and narrated the wrecking and the massacre. And, we have further, the tradition:—"that as the party were massacred they were made food of by the natives,"—thus indicating that there was a race of Cannibal Indians then in Florida.

iv THOMAS SPOONER, b. Aug. 17, 1724; d. Mar. 19, 1800.

Thomas Spooner was born and lived in Plymouth. He learned the trade of shoe-maker with his father, and carried on an extensive manufacturing business. In this and other business he was very successful and accumulated a handsome competency.

He was a man of fine address, well educated, and of an evenly balanced mind, which gave him great influence in town affairs. He contributed liberally of his means and devoted much of his time to advancing the interests of his native town.

He was a member of the First Church of Plymouth. He avoided notoriety; in no sense of the word ever sought position; would not countenance the use of his name as a candidate for any public office; yet, on some occasions, he accepted such trusts when popular demand and duty seemed to require that he should. In all these positions he evinced great good judgment and reflected credit upon those who called him to their service.

Benjamin Willis was a graduate of Harvard. After graduating, he returned to his native town, Bridgewater, Mass., where he lived as a farmer. He appears to have been a man of a cast of mind much above the average, and yet his talent was never brought before the public, or given to its service through any efforts or ambition of his own. His happiness and his life were on his farm.

We find him, though, brought before the public, and at periods of time serving in official positions of honor with great faithfulness and credit. To the town he gave his services in its offices, as he was called upon from time to time. At a later period in life, 1779, he was chosen, with Nathan Mitchell, Esq., to represent Bridgewater in the convention called to draft a constitution for the Commonwealth. Soon after the ratification of this Constitution he was appointed Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Plymouth County, which office he held well up to the time of his death. In earlier life, he had the rank of Major in the county militia. His was a long, unambitious life. Inheriting a large landed estate, favored with the advantage of a collegiate course, and gifted as he was, had he wished it, it was in his power to have risen to any official position in Massachusetts in the gift of the people; such, however, was not his ambition. His was not an ambition "impatient both of delays and rivals." He was quite content in the iv EPHRAIM SPOONER, b. Dec. 28, 1735; d. Mar. 22, 1818.

Ephraim Spooner was born in Plymouth and passed his life there. Of him, we give below what was written by Hon. Josiah Thomas, and published in "The Sentinel," a Plymouth paper.

"Died at Plymouth, on Lord's day morning, the Hon. Ephraim Spooner.

"It would not inereely be injustice to the deceased, but injury to the living, to suffer the life of a man distinguished by such pre-eminent usefulness and active benevolence as was that of Dea. Ephraim Spooner, to pass unnoticed.

"Dea. Spooner, by his native beneficent disposition, suavity of manners, and constant readiness to oblige, early commended himself to the general public. In the intercourse of social life, the expressions of his civility and kindness were uncommonly ardent, and to strangers might appear to be somewhat overstrained; but they who intimately knew him, can vouch with great confidence that he never made a tender of service in which he was not sincere, nor dispensed a favor that did not flow spontaneously from the heart,—and it may be safely added, that he never intentionally did a wrong thing nor thought a mean one. His fellow-townsmen, impressed with his worth and assiduity, introduced him into the various respectable offices of the town, and his election as Town Clerk for fifty-two years in succession, and which he retained until his death, amidst the struggles and conflicts of party, satisfactorily evinces the upright and faithful manner with which he discharged the respective offices he sustained.

“In opposition to the iniquitous system of policy adopted by Great Britain toward her colonies, his whole soul was engaged. As his industry was continued, nothing in his power was left unessayed to promote, in his language, the glorious cause, and the writer of this article could mention instances of sacrifices he offered to the shrine of his country, and of wonderful exertions he made to procure subsistence for the indigent during the distressing period of the war of the Revolution, that would excite the admiration of all men acquainted with common principles of human action. But his patriotism, though in a high degree zealous, had not the least tincture of bitterness, and in the distribution of his charities, party feeling had no participation—a pure philanthropy seemed to have marked him for her own.

“Universal good will being so conscious a feature in the character of Deacon Spooner, it is unnecessary to state the warmth of his affection in the relation of husband and parent, or the ardor of his attachment as a friend.

“In the year 1790 he was appointed by the Executive Council Justice of what is called the old Court of Common Pleas, and held this office till that Court was established. Being educated a merchant, his friends cannot claim for him great information in legal science: but a quick natural discernment, and inflexible rectitude of intention, generally guided him to correct decisions. If any mistaken bias was discovered in his opinions, it was unconsciously produced by his strong sympathies with the unfortunate.

“He represented the town of Plymouth in the Legislature several years with his usual activity and perseverance, and finished his political career as a member of the Executive Council.

“But the highest point in the character of Dea. Spooner is yet to be named. He was from full conviction a Christian, and for more than fifty years made a public profession of his religion, and for thirty-four years officiated in the office of Deacon at the altar of the First Church of Christ in Plymouth, and the first in New England, without blemish. Imbibing the heavenly temper of his Master, like him he went about doing good whenever opportunity presented, without cold calculation on the measure of his ability; and in the meekness of his disposition, and mildness of answer, resembled his beloved disciple.

“His piety was without bigotry, and his devotion without enthusiasm. No obtrusive polemic divinity; no metaphysical disquisition on the nature of faith perplexed the simplicity of his creed, or alienated him from his fellow Christians; piety to God and benevolence to man, being with him the sole test of orthodoxy and discipleship.

“But about four weeks before his own death, Dea. Spooner buried his wife, with whom he had lived fifty-four years in the most entire harmony, walking cheerfully together in the christian course, and in the ordinances of the Gospel; and the pious fortitude and calm resignation he exhibited on the occasion, will not admit of doubt that they are again united in shouting the divine praises.

“Accept, venerable shade, this small tribute to the memory of thy friendship, greatly beloved in life, deeply lamented in death.”

Of Mrs. Spooner, it was said, at the time of her death:

“In early years having professed her faith in the glorious gospel of the blessed God, her life was a comment on her profession, displaying the virtues of industry, charity and discretion, and the graces of piety, humanity and resignation to the divine will, the sum of all religion. As the natural result of a life habituated to the exercises of benevolence and devotion, when the last solemn scene approached, she quietly resigned her soul into the hands of her merciful Creator, in humble hope of that eternal rest promised by the great Savior of man to his faithful disciples.”

v ELEAZER SPOONER, bap. Nov. 15, 1734; d. Mar., 1813.

Eleazer Spooner was born in Dartmouth; removed to Oakham, Mass., in about 1776, or the early part of '77. On Apr. 14, 1777, he purchased of Jesse Allan, for the sum of £383:06:8, "a certain tract of land, with the buildings thereon, lying and being in Oakham, aforesaid, containing 155 acres, be the same more or less." On this land he afterwards lived.

He was an industrious and thrifty man; mixed but little in public affairs; quiet and unobtrusive in habits; more disposed to suffer a wrong or injury than to coerce reparation.

In the Revolutionary War, Benjamin was Sergeant of the Company of Capt. Amos Washburn, in the regiment of Col. Ebenezer Sprout.

He was a man of small stature, quick and active, a great walker. "On one occasion," it is said, "he walked from Dartmouth to Oakham, 90 miles, in two consecutive days, with apparent ease."

A grandson of his writes: "My grandfather was a Congregationalist; a quiet man; serious and a constant attendant at meetings. He was a strict observer of the Sabbath, which, with him, commenced at the going down of the sun on Saturday; and no labor, not even the cleaning of the cattle stalls after turning them out in the morning,—nothing was allowed to be done, until after sunset Sunday."

v SAMUEL SPOONER, b. —, 1739; d. Apr., 1813.

Samuel Spooner was born in Dartmouth, where he received all the educational advantages that the neighborhood schools afforded. These advantages he turned to good account in after life.

In the Revolutionary war, he served in the Company of Capt. M. Kempton, Col. Freeman, and was Sergeant of Capt. Samuel Tubbs' Company, Col. Timothy Walker.

Until about 1790, Mr. Spooner was a mariner, being for several years in command of his own ship. The exposure of of his calling finally so impaired his health that he was forced to relinquish it. He then resorted to school-teaching, which was afterwards his main calling. He taught mostly in Bristol

Co., Mass., until the close of the last century, when he removed to Brookfield, where he purchased a tract of land, and here, for a number of years he taught winter schools.

Samuel was a man of much more than ordinary ability; a good citizen, meeting all his obligations to society. Devoted to his family, he gave his children a good common-school education. He m. —pub.— Dec. 13, 1760, Lydia Brown.

of "The New London Summary and Weekly Advertiser," Aug. 8, 1756. This was the second establishment of the kind in the Colony of Connecticut. Miss Caulkins, in her History of New London, says:

"This paper was a folio sheet; the size of the page about 12 inches by eight, with two columns of print. The heading was adorned with an ornamented cut of the Colony seal, with the escutcheon of the town added by way of a crest, viz.: a ship in full sail."

This paper was discontinued at the death of Timothy, uncle of the subject of this sketch, who had been associated, in business with his brother Samuel, (v.) and had been previously connected with Samuel Kneeland, in the printing business at Boston, having removed to New London in 1652.

"Under the enterprise of Timothy (vi), s. of Samuel Green," says Miss Caulkins, "The New London Gazette, with stamp of the king's arms, appeared in November, 1763. The paper was considerably increased, the print arranged in two columns, and the price 6 s. per annum. This was in fact the same paper under another name, being a continuation by the nephew and assistant of the former publisher, but as the numerical summary was not continued, the numbers being commenced anew, it may be classed as another paper. It was soon enlarged in size, and the name changed to The Connecticut Gazette. This had been the title of the first newspaper of the Colony, established in New Haven, by James Parker & Co.; John Holt, Editor; but discontinued in 1767, and there being then no newspaper in the colony bearing that title, it was adopted by the proprietor of the New London paper. In 1789, Mr. Green took his son, Samuel, into partnership with came the printer of the Colony of Connecticut. His homestead in New London, purchased 1717, was part of the Codman lot in Main street, near the north end. Thomas said of him: "His piety was free from the gloominess and asperity of the bigot; he was benevolent in his heart and virtuous in his life. He was of a very facetious disposition, and many of his anecdotes are handed down to the present time." He m. Mary, d. of Col. John* and Mary Flint, b. —, 1688; d. May 27, 1748; m. 2d. him, and the Gazette was issued by Timothy Green & Son, to 1794. In 1805, he retired awhile from the paper, and it was conducted by Ebenezer P. Cady and Nathaniel Eells. In May, 1808, it was renewed by Samuel Green, and continued to January, 1838. when it passed for two years into the hands of John J. Hyde, who was both editor and publisher. It reverted to the former proprietor or to his son, Samuel Green, and was conducted by the latter to July, 1844. The next editor was A. G. Seaman, by whom it was continued about three years, after which the existence of the Gazette was entirely closed."

"Green's Connecticut Register was first published in 1785, and again in 1786; it was then intermitted for one year, but has regularly appeared every year since to 1852 inclusive. From 1750, the Greens universally printed an Almanac or Astronomical Diary."

Mr. Green was a public-spirited and enterprising man. The full energy of his character was given to his business. He looked well to the affairs of his town and gave full support and hearty co-operation to all enterprises that looked to its interest. His service was given to the town in such offices as, by the partiality of his townsmen, he was elected to. To his family he was kind and indulgent, and gave his children every educational advantage then afforded in that community. Mr. and Mrs. Green were church members and regular attendants upon service.

v JUDAH P. SPOONER, b. Nov. 5, 1748; d. Feb. ———, 1807.

Judah P. Spooner was a boy of uncommon sprightliness and capacity. While the carrier of the New London Gazette, published by Green, he wrote satires and other articles for the paper, besides the customary New Year's Address, which he delivered to his patrons. His instincts of liberty were ardent and were influenced by such works as Juno Divino, and the pamphlets of Paine and other writers. About 1773 he took charge of a printing office in Norwich, Conn., in partnership with his brother-in-law, Green, printing jobs and pamphlets, but declining the solicitations of the people to publish a paper, as that would interfere with the Gazette of New London. About the same time a press was established by the Robertsons, called the "Norwich Packet." Miss Caulkins, in her History of New London, says: "In some instances the two presses were rivals, reprinting the same works, and each endeavoring to forestall the other. Green and Spooner preceded the Robertsons in bringing out an edition of Watts' Psalms, (1773), and of the Manuel of Exercise, as ordered by his Majesty, in 1764. They were competitors also in issuing school-books.

"The celebrated Dialogue concerning the slavery of the Africans, which advocated the doctrine of immediate emancipation, written by Dr. Hopkins, and addressed to the Continental Congress, came from the press of Green & Spooner in 1776. They also reprinted and assisted in sowing the country with 'Paine's Common Sense.'"

This press at Norwich was continued until 1778, but was in charge of Spooner only until the outbreak of hostilities against the mother country. Then, leaving his family at Norwich, Mr. Spooner marched with the first volunteers for Boston and took part in the battle of Bunker's Hill, where, having a few more cartridges than his fellows, he delayed a little to use them, and sought to reach the retreating column by speed of foot. This exposed him to a volley, from which he escaped with only a slight wound in the side. He was afterwards in the Privateer service, and being captured, suffered imprisonment in that pestilential hulk, The Old Jersey, anchored at the Wallabout, Brooklyn, N. Y., from which he was sent home with a broken constitution and the "long fever," which clung to him for a considerable time afterward.

In 1780 he established a press at Hanover, N. H., which was then claimed as a part of the unorganized state of Vermont. Here for a time a paper was published under the joint names of Spooner & Green. When the boundary of Vermont was fixed on the other side of Connecticut river, the new State offered a bonus of "one hundred bushels of wheat for a printer." Spooner and Green, tempted by this offer, moved their press across the river and set up at Westminster, Vt. In February, 1781, the first number was printed of

“THE VERMONT GAZETTE, OR GREEN MOUNTAIN POST BOY.”

Its motto was:

“Pliant as reeds where streams of Freedom glide, Firm as the hills to stem Oppression’s tide.”

Mr. Spooner thus became the pioneer printer of Vermont, his press being the first established in that State. In 1783, the materials of the office were sold to George Hough, who removed them to Windsor, Vt. Mr. Hough formed a co-partnership with Alden Spooner, a brother of Judah P., in the printing business, and they established in Windsor, “The Vermont Journal,” of which Alden Spooner soon became the sole owner. He continued to publish it until his death.

On the disposal of his business, Judah P. became unsettled and was a wanderer. His family returned to New London. Some years later, Judah P. was invited by his brother Alden, to Windsor, to aid him in his printing office and on the paper he was publishing. This invitation was accepted and he located with his family at Windsor. He remained there, working at his trade, and had well re-established himself in business, when the tempter came in the person of Matthew Lyon, a remarkable man of his time, who induced him to remove to Franklin, Vt., and take charge of his paper, “The Freeman’s Library.” This paper was Lyon’s organ—a reflection of himself; its columns were mainly under the control of Lyon; the editorials were radical and censorious, bitter and denunciatory, and directed against the administration of John Adams, then President of the United States. Soon, for these writings, Lyon was indicted and summoned to trial under the “alien and sedition law.” Mr. Spooner, as the manager and chief workman of the office, was subpoenaed to testify in the case. His testimony fastened the authorship of the “seditious” articles which had appeared in the pages upon Lyon. Lyon was convicted, amerced in a fine of one thousand dollars, and sentenced to six months imprisonment in the jail at Vergennes, Vt.

Lyon was a man of very considerable ability, of pronounced opinions, and possessed of large will power. He had been a member of Congress and had signalized himself by his quarrel with Roger Griswold. He was a Republican in politics, a warm supporter of Jefferson, and in Congress had cast the vote of Vermont in favor of Thomas Jefferson for President, and he became a most radical opponent of John Adams after his accession to the Presidency. This conviction of Lyon, followed by the loss of friendships, forced him to close up his business. He sold his property and removed to Kentucky, where he was soon elected to a seat in Congress, and served in that body with credit from 1803 to 1811. In 1820 he was a resident of Arkansas, and was chosen a delegate to represent that Territory in Congress, but did not live to take his seat.*

This trouble of Lyon's, resulting as it did, again unsettled Mr. Spooner, who became a wanderer without a fixed place of residence. Bright and talented, kindly in his heart, warmly affectionate to his family, he died a disappointed and unsuccessful man, at the house of his son-in-law, Col. Thomas Miller.

The wife of Mr. Spooner was a woman of remarkable piety, prudence, talent and culture. Her children were indebted almost entirely to her, for their education and support in early life. She taught schools in New London and Sag Harbor, N. Y. She kept, from an early period of her life, a minute diary of public and private events, which, from prudential reasons, she destroyed in her last sickness. The last years of her life were passed in the family of her son.

* Col. Lyon was brought from Ireland to America when a boy. Being what was called "a redemptioner," he was "sold" for his passage, as was then the custom. He was afterwards "sold" to a new Master for a pair of cattle, which circumstance was often afterward cast into his teeth as a reproach; but of which he was proud, being a real democrat. He had a kind master, who gave him a little education, and helped him to start in the world. He married, accumulated property, and removed to Vermont. During the Revolutionary war, he held a Colonel's commission in the militia. He lost his wife, and afterward married the widow Galusha, a daughter of Governor Chittenden. He owned, in Vermont, a paper mill, grist mill, saw mill, iron-works, and many houses and large tracts of land.

Such was the respect for him by his townsmen, that he was in no way persecuted for his opinion or disturbed in his possessions.

v JEDUTHAN SPOONER, b. Nov. 12, 1755; d. May 16, 1817.

Jeduthan was the fourth son of Thomas Spooner, of New London, Conn. He went to Hardwick, Mass., about 1775, and established himself in business as a saddler, about fifty rods north of the Common. He continued in that business until 1801, when he sold his property and purchased a farm on the road to Gilbertville, and afterward gave his attention to farming.

In 1775, at the time of the engagement at Lexington, it is said that Jeduthan and others of his townsmen went to the relief of that town. He was afterward in the company of Capt. Timothy Page, "for going to Bennington in an alarm," from Aug. 21 to Aug. 31, 1777; and he had other service. Afterward, at the time of "Shay's Rebellion," or "scrape,"—as it was called in the not very elegant language of the time—he came to the relief of the Government, and was clerk of the company of Capt. Edward Ruggles, and shared the perils and sufferings of that terrible march from Uadley to Petersham, which Minot styles "one of the most indefatigable marches that ever was performed in America," and which resulted in the utter and final dispersion of the rebel army.

He served Hardwick as Selectman seven years, Assessor six years, Town Clerk five years, and as Representative to the General Court four years.

Paige, in his History of Hardwick, says of him: "He was a man of most exemplary character, and endured with Christian philosophy, a severe domestic affliction, occasioned by the insanity of his wife, with tragical accompaniments."

Jeduthan was a religionist of the straightest sect,—and not a religionist in doctrine and feeling merely, but in practice. Many stories are told of his loving and lovable nature and of the devout Christian spirit which governed his life, and which he seems to have carried into all his dealings and relations with the men around him. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace," was the text of the discourse at his funeral.

v ALDEN SPOONER, b. Aug. 22, 1757, d. May 1, 1827.

Alden Spooner was born in New London, Conn., where he received a good elementary education, partly in the village school, but chiefly in the printing office with his brother, Judah P. Spooner. When, in 1781, his brother established himself at Westminster, Vermont, Alden accompanied him, and assisted him in the publication of the newspaper ("The Vermont Gazette or Green Mountain Post Boy") issued from his press.* In 1783, Alden Spooner, together with George Hough, purchased Judah's office and removed with it to Windsor, Vermont, where they commenced the publication of the "Vermont Journal and Universal Intelligencer," under the firm name of Hough & Spooner. † Soon after, Mr. Hough sold his interest in the business to Alden, who thus became sole proprietor. Hough removed to Concord, N. H., and established there the "Concord Herald and New Hampshire Intelligencer."

After the dissolution of partnership with Mr. Hough, Alden Spooner continued to publish and edit the "Journal." This he did with much success and ability—his paper being one of the most influential in that part of New England. Politically, Alden Spooner seems to have been a man of very liberal and independent connections. During Jefferson's Presidency he was a warm Republican and a supporter of the Administration; but after the election of Madison, his political views underwent a change and he joined the Federalists. Though a true journalist and a man of little or no political pretensions, he had a hand also in legislation,—being three times elected—in 1793, 1800 and 1802—to represent his town (Windsor) in the Vermont Legislature.

* Hon. Wyman Spooner, No. 796, himself an apprentice with, and subsequently a partner of Alden Spooner, wrote: "The press of this office was the first one imported from England; it was first put up in Cambridge, then transferred to New London, and by Green and Spooner taken to Vermont."

† Alden Spooner conducted the "Journal" until his death (1827). In 1829, the paper was purchased by Mr. Simeon Ide, and by him united with the "Vermont Republican." Mr. Ide writes us as follows: * * * "In the printing office of the "Claremont Manufacturing Company," which I established here for book-making in 1834, may be seen the old "Vermont Journal's" head or title-page, engraved on type-metal, and the identical type-cases that Spooner & Green brought from Norwich, Connecticut, and afterwards sold to Hough & Spooner."

Speaking of Alden Spooner's political and public services, we should not forget to mention that he too was one of the "patriot band" who fought in the Revolution. He enlisted in the company of Capt. Lucien Pope, in April, 1775, being then only in his eighteenth year. He was on duty at Roxbury.

In religion, as in politics, Alden Spooner was an independent. He professed no creed, and, by his peculiarly "heterodox" religious views and practices, was looked upon by his neighbors as quite an eccentric character.* Still, in spite of his eccentricities, he was by no means a "man of little faith." He was very devout in his way, and so that he himself had a sense of his own rectitude, he cared very little for the world's approval or censure.

* A correspondent writes: "It was common in those primitive times in Windsor as far back as 1809 and 1810, for the bar-room at the village tavern to be occupied of an evening by the wide-awake villagers gathered to hear and tell the news. Happening to call there on one of these occasions, I heard a farmer inquire of one of Mr. Spooner's near neighbors, 'What meeting does old uncle Alden attend now-a-days?' v NATHANIEL SPOONER, b. Sept. 10, 1749; d.——.

Nathaniel Spooner was a mariner. At the outbreak of the Revolutionary war, he entered the privateer service; was taken prisoner on the capture of the "Hope," by the enemy and was exchanged at the port of Halifax, June 28, 1777, on the order of Sir George Collier. He again entered the same service and continued in it during most of the war. Shortly after the Declaration of Peace, he removed from New Bedford to Alexandria, Va., and sailed from that port in command of his own ship, mostly on voyages to the Islands near the American coast, though he made several voyages to European ports.

He married on the Island of Bermuda. His two younger children were adopted by their mother's parents, and taken to their Bermuda home. He m. Deborah Scraghan, b.——; d.——.

She m. Dec. 7, 1780, JONATHAN* CUSHMAN, s. of James⁶¹ and Hannah (Negus) Cushman, b. Oct. 26, 1754; d. Apr. 24, 1834.

Jonathan Cushman was born in Dartmouth, Mass., and received the best education that could then be given in the schools of New Bedford. After completing his education, he was apprenticed as a mariner. His term of service "before the mast" was of short duration, his ability and faithfulness giving him rapid promotion, until in his twenty-first year, he was commissioned as Captain. His knowledge of navigation and his reputation as an officer, directed attention to him, by those in authority, who had the officering of our navy in the early part of the Revolution. He was soon commissioned as an officer of a Colonial Sloop-of-War. This sloop met with an adverse fate. It was captured by the English. The officers and crew were confined on the old Jersey Prison Ship, at the Wallabout, Brooklyn, N. Y.

How long Capt. Cushman remained a prisoner, we are not informed. In time, he was exchanged. He returned to his Dartmouth home, and for some years, followed his calling of mariner, in command of his own vessel.

Toward the end of the last century, Capt. Cushman

"Although not a Clergyman or even a 'Teaching Elder,' he prepared and delivered, on Wednesday, the 12th day of December, the day before he sailed for England, a sermon suitable to the occasion. This sermon, together with its prefatory dedication, 'To his loving friends, the adventurers for New England,' has become quite noted, from its ability and from the fact that it was the first sermon delivered in New England, that was printed." He very faithfully served the Colony as its Agent in England until his death, early in 1625. One of his children was:

v NATHANIEL SPOONER, b. —; d. about 1825.

Nathaniel was a soldier in the Revolution, serving in the Connecticut Line. He inherited the homestead of his parents, a fine tract of land bordering on the Hoosatic river, in Litchfield Co., Conn. It is said that he had had educational advantages, was possessed of a good mind and of fine address, but these failed to serve him, or rather he failed to make proper use of them. From want of care, and extravagance, his patrimony was finally lost. To mend his fortune he determined to settle in the West,—what year is not known,—his steps were turned to western New York, and he went from place to place until 1814, when he settled in Smithfield Township, Madison county. Not long after, he found a home in the village of Peterboro'. The habits of the past were fastened upon him, not of vice or dissipation, but of thriftlessness. His life was almost one of vagrancy until he came to the knowledge of Hon. Gerritt Smith, who recognized in him qualities of honesty and evidence of culture. He assisted the family, indeed, almost entirely supported it until the death of Mr. Spooner, when he supported the widow until she, too, was freed from the sorrows of life.

v EBENEZER SPOONER, bap. Mar. 24, 1751; d. —.

Ebenezer Spooner was born in Warren, Conn. He served in the Revolution; was in privateer service; was taken prisoner, and, for a time, was confined in "Old Mill Prison," Plymouth, England. A grandson of his writes: "My grandfather was a man of sound judgment, but of a very limited education. He could barely write his own name and read a little in the Bible by spelling out each word. This he felt to be a great privation. He gave all his children a thorough education for the times.

“He commenced life very poor, and after his father’s death and his own marriage, he worked four years to pay the debts of his father, who died insolvent. He subsequently accumulated a handsome property, owning at the time of his death, three hundred acres of land on the east side of the Hoosatic river.”

William Peck was a farmer. He removed, about 1787, from Warren, Conn., to Vermont, and located on a tract of new land, near what is now Vergennes. At that time there was but one house in Vergennes; their nearest neighbor was some five or six miles distant from them; no roads had been opened; when visiting, or going to other settlements, they had to be guided by blazed trees.

A grandson of Mr. Peck writes: "My grandparents endured the hardships and privations attending early settlers of a new country; they were blessed with vigorous and strong constitutions, which, united with great energy and perseverance, enabled them to open up a new farm and erect comfortable buildings. They both, in early life, experienced religion and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and they continued, through life, to be active and honored members of that denomination."

v JAMES SPOONER, b. Sept. 5, 1739; d. Sept. 3, 1815.

James Spooner was raised a farmer. This calling he gave up for that of a seaman, which he followed, except when in service as a soldier, until his removal from New Bedford to Vermont, soon after the close of the Revolution, where he purchased land. About the year 1810 he removed to Ohio, and located on land near Conneaut, where he afterwards lived.

He was a patriot soldier in the French and Indian war; he was, in 1758, in the company of Capt. James Andrews. In the Revolution his name is first found, Apr. 21, 1775, on the roll of the minute men, under Capt. Dillingham, who marched for Lexington; in 1775, was Corporal, company of Capt. Thomas Kempton (Col. Danielson), and afterwards he was under other officers.

A granddaughter of his writes: "I loved and revered my grandfather beyond almost any other person. How much I listened to his council and hung upon his words, I shall never forget. He was a good deal over 6 feet in height, a very stout frame, with broad shoulders; a frame that was never bent in the least in old age. He had light blue eyes that were mild. His hair was white when I knew him, was once dark auburn. The early part of his life he lived in New Bedford. He was a soldier when quite young in the French and Indian war, and served in the Continental army throughout the Revolutionary war. He followed a sea-faring life for about twenty years. I have heard him relate his voyages in the South seas, of doubling the Cape of Good Hope; his whaling voyages; of his having expended a large sum in building a whaling ship, which was wrecked, and he lost his all. Such seemed to be his fortune through life,—he was energetic, and persevering, would accumulate property fast, and through some accident, or by trusting to the uprightness of others, would lose all.

"He had a good education. I remember how I used to admire his beautiful writing, and of seeing him write his name neatly after he was blind. He belonged to the Baptist Church and was a Christian."

v JOHN SPOONER, b. Dec. 29, 1745; d. —, 1811.

John Spooner worked on his father's farm in Dartmouth until the outbreak of the Revolution, when, like the great body of the young men of that day, he entered the army. He was of the minute men of New Bedford, who marched for Lexington, April 21, 1775. Afterwards, he was in the company of Captain Thomas Kempton, and continued on in other companies. Soon after the close of his service in the army, he went to Douglass, Mass., where he married and lived for a time. His wife's parents becoming proselytes to Shakerism, their daughter, Mrs. Spooner, soon after adopted the same religious belief, and by her influence Mr. Spooner was also converted. They, with their children and the Cushing family, united with the Society at Enfield.

Mr. Spooner after a time became dissatisfied with the situation and withdrew from the Society, taking his children with him. His wife adhered to the Society, refusing to go with her husband and children—soon after, however, by some means she obtained possession of her son Thomas, returned him to the Society and changed his name to Samuel. The mother and son passed their days at Enfield.

Mr. Spooner lingered for a while in the neighborhood of Enfield, then left, and is next heard of at Woodstock, Vt., where it is supposed he married his second wife. His last place of residence was Hubbardston, Vt., where he kept a public-house.

Nathaniel lived, as his father did, the life of a farmer, which Lord John Russell well said: "In a moral point of view, is the most pure and holy of any class of men; pure, because it is the most healthful, and vice can hardly find time to contaminate it; and holy, because it brings the Deity perpetually before his view, giving him thereby the most exalted notions of Supreme power, and the most fascinating and enduring view of moral benignity."

He lived on land inherited from his father, in that part of Dartmouth now known as Acushnet.

- v MICAH SPOONER, b. May 22, 1754; d. Oct. 9, 1822.

Micah, like his father and brothers, was a farmer, and, too, he answered the call of his country. He was first on duty with the minute men, called out on the occasion of the Lexington alarm; and, finally, he is found, 1780, to have been in the company of Captain Thomas Crandon, (Col. John Hathaway.)

His farm was situated in the settlement made by the Spooners in Dartmouth, near The-Head-of-the-River in Acushnet.

v SAMUEL SPOONER, b. Jan. 20, 1763; d. Apr. 18, 1840.

Samuel Spooner passed his life in Hardwick, Mass., the place of his nativity. He was a farmer.

His life was not characterized with any peculiar point beyond that of his surroundings and of those of his neighbors who were engaged in a like calling. It was one of honesty, of hard toil, and yet he passed through no peculiar hardships; and while he was a man of home attachments and satisfied with them, he was ever ready, with all kindness and willingness, to serve his neighbors and townsmen, as they asked for his counsel or assistance. His intelligence, sound judgment and qualities of heart, gave him that standing which made his society courted, and his aid in neighborhood matters often called for.

Samuel, like his older brothers and a younger one, was in the service of his country. At the early age of fifteen, he was in the company of Capt. John Morgan, "detached from the counties of Hampshire and Worcester, to guard the several stores of Springfield and Brookfield," and he is found lastly to have been in the company of Capt. John Cutler, 1781.

V CHARLES SPOONER, b. Oct. 10, 1764; d. Nov. 14, 1847.

Charles Spooner was raised as a farmer and continued in that calling through life. He removed from Hardwick, Mass., to Barnard, Vt., about 1790, and some years after to Stockbridge, Vt.

Charles followed the example of his three older brothers. He was a soldier, entering the patriot army when but fourteen, or rather when not quite fourteen years of age. His name is found on the muster-roll of Capt. Hastings, (Col. Rice) and he is described as "five feet four inches high, complexion light, occupation farmer; enlisted for three years." On May 28, 1781, he received from the town of Hardwick £90, as bounty for three years' service in the army.

v SETH SPOONER, b. Mar. 8, 1762; d. Apr. 1, 1833.

Seth Spooner was born and raised on the old home of his fore-fathers in Dartmouth. His father, Elnathan Spooner, was a man of considerable note; was one of the pillars of the Church at Acushnet Village, and was, in his domestic relations, a man of great worth, of light heart and genial good will.

In Aug., 1780, Seth enlisted (on a call from Rhode Island) in the company of Capt. Thomas Crandon (Col. John Hathaway), served in that campaign, and had other service in the war. In early life he appears to have been of an unsettled and roving disposition. He followed the seas for several years, and is said to have made two or three whaling cruises. Finally, in 1787, he married and returned to Acushnet, where he lived and worked for a few years on his father's farm.

From some cause, not now definitely known, but reflecting no discredit on either party, Seth's wedded life was not happy. We have every reason to believe that Seth was a man of good character and respectability, and it is certain that his wife was a most estimable woman; but want of congeniality, either in disposition or temperament, led to an estrangement between them, and finally to a permanent separation. Leaving his wife and children with his father in Acushnet, Seth went to Stillwater, N. Y., where, after a while, he married a second time. He remained here until about 1798; afterward, he lived, successively, in Sangerfield, Oneida Co., Penfield, Monroe Co., and in Sweden Township, Monroe Co., N. Y.

At this last place (Sweden) he commenced life anew, and, with his second wife, settled on an entirely new tract of land of 160 acres, near what is now Brockport, and occupied himself in clearing and cultivating it after the approved style of the old pioneers. Of Seth's pioneer life, a son of his writes as follows: "My father moved to Sweden in February, 1811, and settled on a wild piece of land. He felled the trees on a piece large enough for a house, and also the trees that would reach the house if blown down. He put up a log house, covered it with bark, and moved into it without waiting to put down a floor. He lived in this way until he could clear a part of his land and plant his corn. When this was done, he split some logs in what was puncheon style for a floor, and used the bark from them for a chamber floor. We lived in this manner for twelve years."

As we have said, Seth Spooner was a man of a roving and unsettled disposition; and his opinions and views of life were as unstable as his habits. He was industrious and persevering, but easily discouraged, and with him it was far preferable to fly from misfortune than to combat and conquer it. Generosity was at once his greatest virtue and his greatest fault, for he could never bear the sight of misery and affliction, and would give his last cent to relieve distress, without thinking what the consequences might be to himself. He was a man who cultivated and valued the little arts of life; and as he did to others, so also was he done by. His friends were numerous and warmly devoted to him, as well they might be—for not only was Seth generous himself, but he appreciated generosity in others, valuing kindness so highly that he could not rest until it had been repaid in kind.

The last year or so of Seth's life was passed on a small farm in Hamlin, N. Y., near his daughter, Mrs. Wentworth.

v DANIEL RUGGLES, b. Jan. 5, 1756; d. Feb. 26, 1838.

Daniel Ruggles was born in Hardwick, Mass. His father was Hon. Edward Ruggles, and his mother Lucy (Spooner) Ruggles, the eldest child of Deacon Daniel Spooner of Petersham, Mass. His grandfather was the Rev. Timothy Ruggles, of Rochester, Mass., a distinguished divine. He was a nephew of the famous Brig.-Gen. Timothy Ruggles.

He was a farmer and lived in Hardwick. He served his townsmen in various official capacities; was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and was a Representative to the General Court.

At the outbreak of the Revolution, he was among the first in his town to take up arms in the cause of his country. He was present at nearly all the important engagements of the war until after the battle of Trenton.

Early in life Mr. Ruggles became a believer in the doctrines of the Universalists, and this, too, at a time when it cost something to depart from the beaten track, and when the supporters of this much-abhorred creed were held to be little better than infidels and deists.

Of Mr. Ruggles' character in general and his religious character in particular, the celebrated Rev. Hosea Ballou said :

“ He was the first in the town of Hardwick who openly professed his faith in Universalism. He was one of the few who so long ago had moral courage to let the light shine amidst the surrounding darkness which covered the people. In consequence of his honest confession of belief, and the boldness and ability with which he was constantly ready to defend it, he was extensively known. And as he was in easy circumstances and generous in his house, he was visited by the clergy, who made many attempts to refute the arguments with which he supported his religious views; but they always found him ready and fully furnished with Scripture weapons to maintain his ground. He was naturally endowed with a strong and penetrating mind, and he took great pains to look into the reason and nature of theological questions, and also made himself acquainted with the different creeds of the churches and the various methods by which the clergy endeavored to support them. Possessed of these advantages, he was able to contribute much in disseminating the truth and advancing this cause which has now obtained such an extensive and prominent establishment in the Christian community.”

v NATHAN RUGGLES, b. May 13, 1774; d. Mar. 27, 1835.

We take from Paige's "History of Hardwick" the following:

"Nathan resided in Hartford, and was a manufacturer of looking-glasses and picture-frames. In personal appearance he bore a striking resemblance to General LaFayette, and the brilliant Frenchman did not excel him in native gentility of manner. Late in life he removed to New Haven and engaged in the making of fire-works; and on the 27th of Mar., 1835, he was suddenly killed by an explosion of his own wares. It is a singular coincidence that he and his two nephews, Adin and Fordyce Ruggles, should be destroyed by the work of their own hands in the space of about seven years."

Paul Gates and wife soon after their marriage went to Vermont and located on a tract of land, near to what is now the town of Franklin. This land he reclaimed from the wilderness. The now populous and wealthy township of Franklin, had then only six families. The public road was but a bridle-path, traced only by blazed-trees. Over such a road, the grain had to be taken twelve to fourteen miles to mill. While the husband was away to mill, or off on other business, the wife was left alone in the solitude. The wilderness was the school of this new married couple, and its privations were their lessons. From these beginnings, by toil, they gathered. The lands around them were settled, the bridle-path became a road, and the wilderness gave way to orchards and highly cultivated fields.

Mr. Gates was a man of superior business ability; was affable and popular. He was Postmaster of the village many years, and, he was for a long period of time almost constantly in service in some of the town offices.

 Olive (Estabrook) Averill, b. Nov. 17, 1777; d. Dec. 31, 1865.

John Averill was born and raised in Westminster, Vt. In 1810 he went to Swanton, in the northern part of Vermont, where he lived two years. In 1812 he purchased a tract of about one thousand acres of land in the neighboring town of Highgate. This domain bordered on Lake Champlain, and as it abounded in game of all sorts was much frequented by hunters. On coming into possession of this property, Mr. Averill found a number of fishermen and hunters having cabins and settled upon portions of it, claiming "squatter-rights." Instead of resorting to law and ejecting these squatters, the new proprietor purchased their improvements and commenced improv-

† His first wife was his cousin, Anna, d. of Asa Averill.

¹²⁸ i John Averill; removed from Northfield, Mass., and located in Township No.
 1, Vt., which was re-granted Nov., 1752, by Gov. Banning, of N. H., and its name changed to Westminster. "At that time there were but two houses in Number One.
 One of these, occupied by Mr. Averill, was situated on the top of Willard's or Clapp's Hill." He was one of the proprietors of Westminster. He held a military commission under the Crown of Great Britain. His daughter, Anna, was the first white child born in that settlement. One of his children was:

ii John Averill. He inherited from his father a large tract of land in Westminster, on which he lived. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He m. Olive Estabrook.
 One of their children was:

ing the land on an extensive scale, and eventually converted a wild and almost uninhabitable forest into a beautiful area of arable and fertile land.

Mr. Averill not only reclaimed the wilds of this northern forest, but he also proved himself to be a friend and benefactor to its people. His influence, which was naturally very great, was most wholesome. His counsel was sought, his opinion was respected, and he was looked up to as a model of integrity and virtue. Nor was he good and generous in words only; his deeds of charity were many and great, and he was an un-failing friend of the poor and the unfortunate.

He was three times elected a member of the Vermont Legislature, and he served with honor in other public positions.

In religion, Mr. Averill was a Quaker, or Friend. Though none of his neighbors, and but one or two of his immediate family agreed with him in his religious views, he was steadfast in his opinions and had no fear of appearing odd or singular. He dressed in the peculiar garb of the Friends and strictly observed their manners and forms of address.

ii Abraham Gale, b. —, 1643; d. Sept. 15, 1718. He was Selectman of Watertown;

Dr. Humphrey Gould, soon after the death of Mr. Gale, wrote as follows:

"A notice of the death of Luther Gale, Esq., of Heath, Mass., has already appeared in the Heath papers. We are not willing he should pass away without a slight tribute to his memory. He belonged to a class of talented, active, influential men who early settled in our hill towns and who are rapidly passing away.

"Mr. Gale was born in Webster, Mass.; removed to Heath in 1806, where he lived fifty-eight years, leading the life of an active, intelligent, industrious, farmer. For a long series of years, he was among the most trusted and respected citizens of the town. He was early, and almost constantly, employed in town affairs; filled the important trusts committed to him with rare ability. He represented the town in the Legislature, and was a member of the Convention to revise the Constitution in 1853. Since then he has retired from public life.

"He was an intelligent and well-read man; social in an eminent degree; generous, considerate and kind, beloved as a neighbor and revered as a father of a large family; and true in his friendships. He took an interest in public affairs to the close of his life.

"In politics he belonged to the Federal or Whig school, but early went over to the Republican party, to which he adhered with unwavering fidelity.

ham. He removed with his father to Heath, where he married and continued to live for some years. From Heath, he went to Woodford, Vt., and thence, in 1814, to Albany, New York, where, ten years later, he died.

He was a man of good, though not commanding abilities. He seems, however, to have placed an unwarrantably high estimation upon the importance of his intellectual capacities,—a misunderstanding of himself which caused him much unhappiness in life. He aspired to heights of excellence which he was not enabled to reach, and his life, instead of being moderately successful and useful, was made up of vain ambitions and regrets. He was unsuccessful in his business undertakings,—not so much from want of capacity to succeed as from his unfortunate view of life, which unfitted him for things practical and rendered him infirm in purpose and will.

His good traits have been happily described by his nephew, Dr. Whipple Spooner: "He possessed amiable and redeeming qualities and was not destitute of generous impulses. He had a buoyant temper, a genial and companionable disposition, a persuasive manner; was humorous and agreeable in conversation, stable in friendship, and a good neighbor. He was peaceful and obliging, and negatively at least, was a good husband and father,—that is to say, he was not ill-tempered and was not severe or harsh." To conclude, Daniel Spooner was a man of very fair parts, which, however, by greatly over-estimating, he was unable to put to much profitable use. His character seems to have been good, as were certainly his intentions and impulses; but, by judging himself and the world incorrectly and extravagantly, his fine abilities and noble qualities came to naught, and he had the misfortune to be his own worst enemy.

v PAUL SPOONER, b. July 24, 1767; d. July 2, 1842.

He was a son of Shearjashub Spooner, of Heath, Mass. Like his father before him, he was a house-carpenter and joiner by trade. He was a very expert workman, and his services were constantly in demand to design and construct the better classes of private dwellings and public edifices.

About 1797, he removed from Heath to Orwell, Vermont, and thence, in 1810, to Brandon, Vermont. At this last place he passed the rest of his life, and here, with his wife and three of his children, he lies buried. Five uniformly wrought slabs mark the spot. On his is the simple sentence: "My spirit hath rejoiced in God My Savior."

Well might a man like Paul Spooner, honest in thought and action, charitable in his feelings toward, and dealings with, his fellow men, and consistent in his strivings for a higher life, deserve that words like these should be written on his tombstone. We know nothing of him personally—that is to say, from our own knowledge or intercourse; but, from the testimony of his sons and neighbors, we know that he had no dark or uncertain traits in his character, and that he lived and died a good man and Christian. During his long life he was never known to have an altercation, or to have been in a suit at law. He was a man of peace in this world, and we can not but think that his faithful and religious life secured for him that "peace which passeth all understanding," in the next.

He was a young man of remarkable sprightliness and intelligence; a ripe scholar, a man of fervid religious zeal. He was cut down and taken to the future life, just as he was about prepared to enter upon his Master's work in this.

v LEMUEL SPOONER, b. Jan. 25, 1777; d. Aug. 4, 1864:

Lemuel was the youngest son of Shearjashub Spooner. He learned the trade of house-carpenter and joiner, and worked at it in Vermont and eastern New York, until 1806, when he located at Sempronius, N. Y., engaging in the manufacture of carding machines. After a time, he disposed of his business and removed to Auburn, N. Y., where he established a similar business, which he prosecuted with good success several years, when he was burned out, losing nearly all that he had.

In 1814, Mr. Spooner located in East Aurora, N. Y., where he purchased property and erected flouring, carding and saw-mills. These varied branches of business he conducted until 1823, when he exchanged all of his property for a large tract of land in the same neighborhood, where he afterward lived, a farmer in easy circumstances.

The aims and aspirations of Mr. Spooner were confined to the enjoyment of domestic and social life. He m. Nov. 8, 1807, Dorcas Strickland, d. of Roger and Lydia (Millard) Strickland, b. Nov. 17, 1787.

v RUGGLES SPOONER, b. Apr. 18, 1765; d. June 2, 1836.

Ruggles Spooner was the second son of Capt. Wing Spooner, of Petersham. His father was a zealous and an active Whig, and in 1775 enlisted in the Revolutionary Army. His two eldest sons, Stevens and Ruggles Spooner, aged respectively twelve and ten years, were thus left in charge of his family and farm. In the course of a short time Stevens, inspired by military and patriotic ardor, also enlisted, and the heavy burden of responsibility which the two brothers had for awhile borne in common, thus devolved on young Ruggles.

Ruggles, in time, left the farm, and following his brother's example, enlisted in the army. He was assigned to duty at a fort near Newport, R. I., where he served until the close of the war. In October, 1781, the news of the surrender of Cornwallis was received, and on that joyful occasion Ruggles Spooner "fired his gun and drank his gill of rum" with the older soldiers of the garrison.

After his return home, Ruggles went to Vermont and spent a year working for his uncle, Lieutenant-Governor Paul Spooner. In 1786 he settled in what is now Cherry Valley, Otsego Co., N. Y. He lived there and in the neighboring town of Springfield until 1793, when he took up his residence in Plainfield, in the same county. In 1805 Mr. Spooner was made a Justice of the Peace, which office he held for twenty-two years. He was the first Postmaster of Plainfield, and was appointed in 1809 by Postmaster-General Gideon Granger. He continued in this office until 1832.

In politics Ruggles Spooner was a Democrat, but notwithstanding the bitter political antagonisms of the time, he served with such general acceptability to all political parties that he was never disturbed in his official positions, and held them as long as it was his pleasure to do so.

He was a member of the Congregational Church. He maintained an unexceptionable character in all the relations of life. He was unpretending, and did not seek or desire notoriety, and for forty-three years lived a quiet and useful life on the farm which he had himself cleared and brought into a state of cultivation.

v JOEL SPOONER, b. Apr. 26, 1771; d. Feb. 14, 1850.

Joel Spooner was born and brought up in Petersham, Mass. Soon after his marriage, (some time in 1798,) he removed to Gill, Mass. In 1811 he removed to Keen, Essex Co., N. Y. After a residence of twenty-six years at Keen, he went to Ogdensburg, N. Y., where he lived during the rest of his life.

Joel was a house-carpenter by trade. Shortly after his removal to Keen, he is said to have been thrown into very destitute circumstances, being obliged for want of employment at his trade, to depend for a livelihood on the products of the forest and stream. But he bore adversity with a stout heart, never asked or accepted assistance, and wrought for himself as best he could. He died in comfortable circumstances.

For a person of his position in life, Joel was very intelligent and well-read, and though he had a slight impediment in v CHARLES SPOONER, b. Jan. 13, 1773; d. Sept. 23, 1816.

Charles Spooner was born on the farm of his parents in Petersham, Mass. He continued to live in that town until 1812, when he removed to Eddington, Me., where he purchased land four miles from the river Penobscot. His life had no marked points; it was one of hard labor and close application to his calling of a farmer. His satisfactions and pleasures were in his family.

v ASA SPOONER, b. Feb. 20, 1778; d. Apr. 14, 1851.

Asa was the sixth son of Capt. Wing Spooner, of Petersham. He was a farmer; lived from early manhood in Athol, Mass.

He was a man of great independence and individuality of character. He is noted chiefly for the advanced ground which he took on the subject of total abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors at a time when temperance societies had not yet begun to be formed, and when little was thought and still less said in support of temperance principles. As early as 1811 he became a promoter, both by precept and example, of the cause which he had so much at heart; but he was far ahead of his time, "Temperance fanatics" were not wanted, and it is worthy of remark that in the town in which he lived he found but one supporter of his doctrines.

But though Asa Spooner's advocacy of the "good cause" was not attended with much success, his influence and example were not wholly lost. If he did not spread the light abroad among men, he at least spread it in his immediate family. In this connection it is sufficient merely to indicate this fact; in another place we shall speak more at length concerning the great and good influence exerted by his son, W. B. S., an influence which must be accredited, in great part, to Asa Spooner's Christian example and fatherly influence.

v ALFRED SPOONER, b. Nov. 24, 1780; d. about 1834.

Alfred Spooner was born in Petersham, Mass. His father, Eliakim Spooner, removed to Vermont, and was a very prominent man in that State.

Alfred received every educational advantage. He was a man of fine ability, of easy address, and started in life with every hope and promise of success. He lived in Westminster, Vt., where he kept a public house until his wife's death. Soon after the loss of his companion, he closed up the hotel, sold his effects, and sent his children to his father. The children found a kind and excellent home and the best of guardians with their grandparents.

Alfred, himself, went, as was understood, to the South. No reliable information has been had of him since then. He m. Dec. 15, 1800, Hannah Harlow, d. of Eleazer and Rhoda (Alexander) Harlow, b. Aug. 10, 1778; d. Aug. 3, 1816.

v ALDEN SPOONER, b. Mar. 13, 1750; d. Sept. 28, 1844.

Alden was the son of Hon. Walter Spooner. He inherited the homestead at Long Plain, Mass., and built for himself a house in the same door-yard, where his grandfather's log-house stood. The aged grandfather was taken into the family of Alden and tenderly cared for in his old age.

Alden had better advantages in boyhood and early manhood than his father enjoyed. Careful attention was given to his education. He availed himself of his advantages, and entered upon manhood's estate prepared for all the duties of life.

He continued through life to live on the old farm. His early training, however, had been such, and his education so superior, that he was from necessity much employed in public business.

He served his townsmen almost constantly in Town offices; was a Justice of the Peace many years, and frequently represented the town and county in both branches of the State Legislature. He m. Dec., 1769, Elizabeth Rounseville, d. of John¹⁴² and Mrs. Sarah (Waite) (Spooner, No. 65,) Rounseville, b. Mar. 17, 1750; d. Dec. 14, 1813.

- v WALTER ALLEN, b. Dec. 1, 1759; d. June 23, 1845.

Mr. Allen was born in Sandwich, Mass., where he learned the trade of house-carpenter, which he followed until his removal to Smithfield, R. I. On locating here, he lived on a farm near the village.

He was possessed of more than ordinary ability as a business man and financier. For many years he was engaged in mercantile business, and for near thirty years he was President of the Union Bank of Smithfield.

As a friend and neighbor, Mr. Allen was kind and reliable; as a husband and parent, he was true to all that is most dear in those relations,—of a genial and companionable temperament, with a high order of intelligence, he was a favorite of all,—his companionship was sought, and made him a very useful man in society.

v SARAH SPOONER, b. Sept. 4, 1764; d. Feb. 1, 1867.

She m. ELISHA NORTON, s. of Elisha and Sarah Norton,
 b. ———; d. ———.

Mr. Norton was a respected citizen of Newport, R. I. He was a man of modest and retiring disposition, though alive to all the duties of life and active in their discharge.

His wife was a remarkable woman; she lived past her one hundred and second year. Born in 1764, she was a witness of the stirring scenes of the Revolution, watched the wonderful development of our country in territory and in the arts of civilization, and lived to see the purification of our political and social systems and to hail the birth of a regenerated nation.

Mrs. Norton was a woman of many accomplishments,—sprightly and amiable. She was a conversationalist of unusual gifts, and a narrow observer. She had a particular knowledge of all the events of the Revolution in her native State, and was thoroughly conversant with American history in general. She had a minute knowledge of all that related to the early history of Newport and its society, and in narrating incidents in local history was particularly happy and pleasing.

Mrs. Norton retained the possession of all her faculties, as well as the exercise of all her physical powers, until her death. The writer of this notice has a pleasant recollection (when on a visit to Newport,) of meeting her on the streets of Newport, making calls, while in her ninety-eighth year. She then walked erect, and with a step as sprightly as is usual with persons of half her age.

During the war of the rebellion, she spent a large part of her time in knitting stockings for the soldiers of the Union army.

The following is taken from a Newport, R. I., paper:

“Under the appropriate head will be found the announcement of the death of Benjamin Weaver, Esq., who, in his day and generation, filled many offices of honor and trust. He joined the Artillery Company of this city in 1814. He was elected a member of the General Assembly from this city in April, 1819; in 1834 he was elected a delegate to represent Middletown in the convention which was held to form a constitution for the State. In 1837 he was elected a Representative to the General Assembly from Middletown; he continued to represent that town until 1843. In 1844 he was a Presidential Elector, and voted for Henry Clay. In 1845 and 1846 he was elected Senator from Middletown; he held other important positions, and for many years was one of the prominent and active politicians of this part of the State. In all the relations of life he discharged his duties faithfully and well, and now, at a ripe old age, he has passed away from earth honored and respected and much lamented by all who knew him.”

v THOMAS SPOONER, b. —, 1757; d. Nov. 5, 1803.

Thomas Spooner was born at Providence, R. I., to which place his father, Joshua, had removed, from Middleboro', Mass. He learned the trade of painter, which he followed, after the close of his adventurous career, during the Revolutionary war.

Soon after the outbreak of the Revolution, Thomas, then in his minority, entered the privateer service, in his country's cause. Soon the ship on which he sailed was captured by the enemy. The officers and crew were taken into New York as prisoners of war. Thomas, with others of the crew, were forced into the English service and retained on a man-of-war. From this ship Mr. Spooner escaped, and was for a period hidden in New York by friends. No way presenting itself for him to leave the city, he was forced to remain closely within-doors,—wearying of this seclusion, he, at times, ventured out, usually in female garb. Tiring of this deceptive dress, he boldly appeared, at night, in his own proper costume. The result was that he was seized by a Press-gang and taken to the same ship that he had escaped from. Having been on his parole of honor, owing to his semi-liberty on the ship's deck when he escaped, he was now answerable for the breaking of that parole. To avoid the penalty, and believing that he would not be recognized when returned, he gave his name as Westcott, his mother's family name. This answered him for a time, but soon, one of the officers recognized him; but instead of dragging him to punishment, said to him: "Spooner, I know you, do your duty, I will not expose you." The officer kept his word, and Spooner, finding no opportunity to again escape, went forward with the best heart he could, and performed the routine of ships-duty, under English colors, during the remainder of the war, retaining the name of Westcott on the ship's rolls.

Soon after the declaration of peace, Mr. Spooner was released from his forced service, and returned to Providence, R. I., where he afterward lived a useful and honored life. He m., 1784, Sarah Rogers, d. of Thomas and Sarah (Langsford) Rogers, b. Oct. 3, 1761; d. Apr. 21, 1842.

William was born in Middleboro', Mass. In early life he was a mariner, sailed with Capt. Hathway. He was married at New Bedford, and soon after went to the new country in the State of New York, going from New Bedford to the city of New York by water, thence up the Hudson River, and located in Dutchess county, where he purchased "a claim" On this claim, his four older children were born. He sold his interest in the claim for $100, "in silver," and removed to Cairo, Green county, N. Y., where he purchased a "life lease" in 100 acres of land, and here three other of his children were born. In 1809, he disposed of the "life lease" and removed to Yates county, N. Y., where he purchased land and afterward lived.
At Milo he connected himself with the "Society of Friends," and passed his remaining years, happily, as a farmer, in the enjoyment of the high regard of his neighbors.

v ELIZABETH SPOONER. b. June 14, 1764; d. June 26, 1831.

She m. Nov. 9, 1786, BENJAMIN BRIGGS, s. of Nathan and Sarah (Perry) Briggs, b. Mar. 3, 1755; d. June 19, 1826.

Mr. Briggs was a master-mariner. The story of his early life is quite romantic. After the evacuation of Boston by the British troops, Benjamin, with his brother Jesse, went to that city with a view to enlisting in the American service. Benjamin enlisted as a seaman on board an American privateer. His ship followed the British fleet out of the bay, in the hope of falling in with and capturing some supply ships of the enemy which were expected from England. Pressing too close, however, they were themselves captured and taken to New York. Here Mr. Briggs, together with others of the ship's crew, was confined in the famous Jersey Prison Ship, and there exposed to the ravages of disease. Finally, at the instance of his uncle, Mr. Perry (a Loyalist), he was released, and permitted to live unconfined in New York, on condition that he would observe the laws of war and not leave the city.

If the accounts which we have of Mr. Briggs are true, he did not observe to the letter the conditions which his parole imposed. Thinking that the patriotic end justified the dishonorable means, he became involved in the conspiracy of Col. Ogden to abduct the young Prince William Henry (afterward William IV,) who, with Admiral Digby and other naval officers, was then living in the city mansion of Gerardus Beekman, on the north-west corner of Sloat Lane and Hanover Square. The scheme was unsuccessful, and Briggs, in order to avoid apprehension, was obliged to forfeit his bond and escape from New York. He made the best of his way to Massachusetts and returned to his father's home, where he lived until the close of the war. He was afterward a master-mariner.

He was a violent Tory; was proscribed and banished, and his estate was confiscated. In addition to his judicial station, he was a Mandamus Councillor. He went to Halifax at the evacuation of Boston

The Olivers were among the wealthiest and most prominent families in New England. They owned a large estate at Middleboro', where they were near neighbors of the Spooners. The families seem to have been drawn to each other more by sympathy and fellow-feeling than interest. Judge Oliver and Ebenezer Spooner were both enthusiastic Tories and Loyalists, and were both persecuted for their opinions; and it was, probably, this more than any other worldly consideration which brought the young people together.

Phebe Spooner's marriage to Andrew Oliver appears to have been a strangely unfortunate one. In less than three years after their union, Mr. Oliver died, and his young wife was left with three small children to rear and provide for. Misfortunes never come singly, and soon afterward, by the confiscation of the Oliver estate and possessions, she was thrown from affluence to a state of comparative dependence. She took up her residence in the home of Mr. Morton, a relative and neighbor; part of the house and property belonged to her by right of inheritance.* She lived in the Morton house during the rest of her life. A writer in a Boston newspaper, speaking of the old Morton house and its historical associations, says of Mrs. Oliver:

"She lived far into the present century, and many pleasant stories are told of this old lady, who was born and bred in all the aristocratic notions which prevailed 'when George the Third was King.' * * * * She, following the good old Saxon custom, which has come down from the reign of King Alfred, of dining before noon, and taking her tea at four, had a long evening for friendly visiting. When she went abroad in the winter, she always wore a bright red cloak, trimmed with fur, a picturesque relic of a fashion now so ancient that none remember it.

in 1776. Subsequently he embarked for England. "He died in Birmingham. He was a writer of some talent, and contributed to a Tory paper, called the 'Censor.' He was an enthusiastic antiquary, carrying away with him records and papers which he had collected concerning the early settlement of Plymouth Colony." He m. Mary, d. of William and Hannah (Appleton) Clarke. One of their children was:

v Andrew Oliver, b. Sept. 15, 1746; d. Jan., 1772. He m. Phebe Spooner, No. 657.

* From her grand-father, Ebenezer Morton, father of Mrs. Mary (Morton) Spooner, No. 259.

"The old house saw grand visitors in her day. She was an honored guest in the families of Governors Winthrop and Bowdoin, and of Lady Temple. She met Lafayette in the old Hancock house on Beacon Hill, and ever afterward his name was a household word on her lips. Her daughter married Dr. Waterhouse, a pillar of Harvard College, and the chief introducer of vaccination into this country. Sometimes Governor Bowdoin came to dine with the old lady. * * *

Ah, then was the time when one man was as good as another, and better, too. * * * Mrs. Oliver died in 1832, aged 84, one of the last of the ladies of the old school who grew up with Washington and Jefferson in the childhood of the Republic."

- v NATHANIEL SPOONER, b. Oct. 24, 1758; d. Feb., 1826.

Nathaniel was the eldest son of Thomas Spooner of Plymouth. He was apprenticed to learn the trade of cabinet-maker, but before the term of his apprenticeship expired, he enlisted as a private in a company (commanded by Capt. C. Rider,) "raised in the County of Plymouth for the purpose of filling up and completing the fifteen battalions of Continental troops directed to be raised in Massachusetts, for the term of nine months from their arrival at Fishkill, agreeably to a resolution passed Apr. 20, 1778."

Nathaniel's service in the army was not of long duration. He became a sailor, was rapidly promoted, and in a wonderfully short time was placed in command of a vessel. On April 4, 1781, the ship "Luzen," commanded by Capt. N. Spooner, was captured by the enemy, and its officers and crew, twenty-two in number, were confined in "Old Mill Prison." Capt. Spooner, after having made several fruitless attempts to escape, was exchanged. He left an account of his capture and imprisonment, which is in possession of the family. Returning to Plymouth, he again sought his fortunes at sea, became a ship-master, and led a sea-faring life for some years. He was a man of considerable wealth, being at one time one of the largest ship-owners of Plymouth. Upon retiring from ocean-life, he engaged in mercantile business at Plymouth; was one of the most highly respected and honored citizens of that town; served his townsmen in many of their municipal offices, and represented them in the General Court of the State.

1912 iii Margaret, b. July 7, 1808; d. Feb. 11, 1883.

There appears to have been a very close intimacy, and a remarkable degree of friendship existing between the Plymouth Spooners and the New Bedford branch of the family, represented by Hon. Walter S., No. 179, from the very earliest date, and which has continued to the present time.

Hon. Walter S., and Hon. Ephraim S., (No. 266) were life long friends; and, since, from generation to generation, the families have sustained the most intimate relation by friendly visits and social correspondence.

And, on the death of Miss Margaret S., No. 1912, she, by her will, bequeathed to Miss Martha Spooner, (of New Bedford,) d. of Hon. Nathaniel S. Spooner, No. 1495, a silver pitcher, an heir-loom, for which Miss Martha expressed her gratification, and which she placed in custody of James Walter S., nephew of Miss Margaret, and executor of her estate.

was a man of superior natural ability, which had been given the right direction by an excellent parentage and by a good education in the schools of Abington. These abilities, his reliable honesty and faithfulness, were soon taken notice of by his townsmen, and he became one of the most favored and popular men of his town. He was called early to serve the town in its offices, often serving in two and three at the same time; among those held by him were Overseer of the Poor, Assessor, Selectman and Town Clerk. During the Rebellion, he was enrolling officer for Abington. This imposed upon him the duty of looking after the welfare of the families of those who had volunteered in their country's service, providing for the needy, counseling and aiding all, in every way and on all occasions, as best he could. He had the rank of Major, in the militia of his county.

iv RUGGLES SPOONER, b. Mar. 24, 1737; d. —, 1831.

Ruggles Spooner was a farmer, and lived in Petersham and Dana, Mass.

He was on "scouting duty," 1757, between the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers, in the company of Captain Zadock Stone. Subsequently, during the same war, (the French and Indian) he served in the company of Captain Timothy Houghton.

In April, 1775, Ruggles joined the "Minute Men" and enlisted in the company of Captain John Wheeler (Colonel Ephraim Doolittle commanding.) Afterward, he was a volunteer in the company of Captain James Elliott, (Colonel Luke Drury) and finally, (Jan. 28, 1777) he joined the company of Captain Woodbury, (Colonel Cushing) which was sent to reinforce General Stark. He was involved, to some extent, in Shay's Rebellion, but, for this offense, he was not brought to trial.

It is said that Ruggles Spooner was of a very stubborn and contentious disposition; that he was constantly in trouble, and but seldom free from a law-suit; "a notable instance of which was his suit against Sarah Peckham for breach of promise of marriage, tried at Worcester, and a verdict rendered for the defendant, Oct. 16, 1782. His old age was dark and dreary; he became entirely blind, lost all his property, and would not acknowledge any expectation of a future existence. He retained his mental faculties, which were naturally strong and active, until extreme old age, and until near the close of life often walked from Dana to Hardwick."

iv DAVID WING, b. Oct. 8, 1729; d. ———.

Mr. Wing removed, about 1790, from Rochester, Mass., to Montpelier, Vermont, and located on a tract of land adjoining what is known as the old Clark Stevens place, in the eastern part of the town. The first tavern in Montpelier, and in the county of Washington, was located on the east bank of the Branch, was built, 1793, by Col. Davis, and was kept several of the first years by Mr. Wing, who, on retiring from this business, returned to his farm.

When living in Rochester, Mr. Wing was an active and influential man in town affairs, and during the Revolutionary struggle, was a zealous patriot. At a town meeting, Dec. 28, 1772, a committee of seven was appointed, "to consider of the approaching struggle and report at an adjourned meeting." Mr. Wing was a member of this committee, whereof Deacon Seth Dexter was Chairman, and made report Jan. 11, 1773 in part as follows:

"RESOLVED, that we are entitled to all the Rights of natural-born subjects of Great Britain, and have not forfeited said Rights.

"That the Acts of Parliament raising a revenue in America, with the extended powers of the Board of Commissioners and Court of Admiralty; and the stationing a part of the many troops here, are in variance of our Rights, established by charter."

"The town," on the same date, "further voted that if our Representative, or any other person in this town, either has, or shall basely desert the cause of Liberty for the sake of being promoted to a post of honor or profit, or for any other mean view to self-interest, he shall be looked upon as an enemy to his country and be treated with that neglect and contempt that he justly deserves."

v DAVID WING, b. June 24, 1766; d. Sept. 13, 1806.

The following is taken from Thompson's History of Montpelier, Vermont:

"David Wing had doubtless received a rather superior common-school education, though the educational accomplishments, which he almost at once exhibited after coming into the settlement, were probably mainly the fruits of his native tastes of scholarship, which is strikingly conspicuous in all the memorials, social or civil, that he has left behind him. He taught the second school of the town, which was opened, it is believed, in the same year in which he became one of its inhabitants. Within about two years after his arrival, he was elected Town Clerk. And during the next dozen years, the offices of Town Agent, Town Representative, Judge of the County Court and Secretary of State, seem to have been crowded upon him in regular and rapid succession. As an evidence of his great popularity among his townsmen, the fact may be cited that while he was holding the office of side Judge, and chief Judge of the County Court—ten-fold the best office held by any other inhabitant of the town—he was elected the Town Representative four years previous to his election as Secretary of State; and not content with that, for the several years during that time, they threw their entire vote for him as State Treasurer.

“He was elected Secretary of State in the fall of 1802, and while still holding the office, and in the midst of his usefulness and high promise, was suddenly swept away by a malignant fever. And rarely, indeed, has ever a death occurred in this section of the State which produced so profound a sensation in community. His death was mourned as a great loss, not only to the town but to the whole State; and the remark was then everywhere made that, had he lived, no man within its limits was more sure than he of soon being promoted to the highest offices within the gift of the people.

v WALTER SPOONER, b. ———; d. ———.

Walter Spooner was a mariner, and lived in Newport, R. I. Very soon after the outbreak of the Revolutionary war, he enlisted in the marine service of his country, and had the honor of serving under Commodore John Paul Jones, and, as is seen below, had the recognition of that distinguished officer, as a man of reliability and an officer of merit.

It is learned, in Force's "American Archives," that the "Alfred," commanded by Paul Jones, sailed Nov. 2, 1776. On this ship Walter Spooner sailed, with the rank of Lieutenant. The cruise was a successful one. When a very few days out, the "Alfred" captured the brigantine, "Active," whereupon the following order was issued:

ALFRED, 12 November, 1776, }
OFF THE COAST OF CAPE BRETON. }

"SIR:—You are hereby appointed commander of our prize, the brigantine 'Active,' from Liverpool to Halifax. You are directed to proceed with all possible dispatch for the State of North Carolina, and deliver your charge (the brigantine 'Active,' with my letters) unto Richard Smith, the agent at Edenton. I request you to be very careful to keep a good look out to prevent your being surprised or retaken; and must by no means break bulk, or destroy any part of the cargo or stores, except what may be absolutely necessary for your subsistence during the passage. If you find it impossible to reach and get into North Carolina, you are at liberty to go into any other of the U. S. of N. A. I wish you a safe and speedy passage, and am, Sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

JOHN PAUL JONES.

"TO MR. WALTER SPOONER, Lieut. of the ship of war, the 'Alfred,' and commander of the 'Alfred's' prize, the brigantine 'Active.'

"N. B.—When off the bar of Oekicock, you are to hoist the jack or ensign under port of your jib boom, as a signal for a pilot, and hoist your ensign Union down."

The prize was taken into an "Eastern port." Lieutenant Spooner arrived in Newport, Nov. 25, and reported that "the prize had on board a cargo of stores, cloths, etc., to the amount of £6,000 sterling, at prime cost, mounting six carriage guns."

What was the further life of Lieut. Spooner is not known. As no more is learned of him, it is supposed that he soon after sickened and died.

vii DEODATUS DUTTON, b. Dec. 22, 1808; d. Dec. 16, 1832.

He was educated at Brown University and Washington College, Hartford, Conn., and studied for the ministry in New York City. And, after having prepared for his chosen calling and written his first sermon, he was suddenly stricken with sickness which quickly terminated fatally, and on the day that his first discourse was to have been delivered, Dec. 22, 1832, his funeral sermon was preached and he was borne to his grave.

He was a young man of scholarly attainments, of an amiable and loving character. He was finely cultivated in music, and had been, for some time, the organist of Dr. Matthews church, Hartford, Conn.

He was one of the authors of the "American Psalmody," a collection of church music, and he was the author of the melody called "Woodstock," which was set to the hymn:

"I love to steal, a while, away
From every cumbering care,
And spend the hours of setting day
In humble, grateful prayer."

This hymn was written by Mrs. Phebe Browne, a near neighbor of the Duttons at Monson, Mass.

A sister of Mr. Dutton writes:

"Wherever I have roamed, that sweet melody has fallen on my ears. Unbidden tears and the sweet recollections of childhood's home; of the dear departed ones, have cheered and sweetened the pathway of the wanderer, bidding her look through the 'Gates Ajar,' to that blessed world, where earth's pilgrims will find sweet home at last.

"Yes, music was in his heart, and fast entwined, and closely knotted with its infant strings, were the rich chords of melody."

Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney, on the death of Mr. Dutton, wrote:

DEATH OF A YOUNG MUSICIAN.

Music was in thy heart, and fast entwin'd,
And closely knotted with its infant strings,
Were the rich chords of melody. When youth
And science led thee to their classic bower,
A pale and patient student, the lone lamp
Of midnight vigil found thee pouring out Thy soul in dulcet sound. In memory's cell Still live those thrilling tones, as erst they broke, Beguiling with sweet choral symphonies
The festal hour.

But, lo! while thou didst wake
The solemn organ to entrancing power, Tracing the secret spells of harmony,
On through deep rapture's labyrinthine maze Devotion came, and breath'd upon thy brow,
And made her temple in thy tuneful breast.
So, music led thee to thy Savior's feet,
Serene and true disciple, and their harps
Who fondly hold untiring guardianship O'er frail man's pilgrim path, were tremulous
With joy for thee.

Nor vainly to thy soul
 Came heaven's high message wrapp'd in minstrelsy,
 For to its service with unshrinking zeal,
 The blossom of thy life was dedicate.
 Thy hand was on God's altar, when a touch, Sudden and strange and icy cold, unloos'd
 Its fervent grasp. Thy gentle heart was glad
 With the soft promise of a hallow'd love,
 But stern death dash'd it out. Now there are tears
 In tenderest eyes for thee.

Yet we who know
 That earth hath many discords for a soul
 Fine-ton'd and seraph-strung, and that the feet
 Which fain would follow Christ are sometimes held In the dark meshes of a downward course,
 Till strong repentance urge them back with tears,
 Do feel thy gain.

'Tis well thou art at home,
 Spirit of melody and peace and love.

vi URIEL SPOONER, b. Apr. 11, 1784; d. June 8, 1864.

Uriel Spooner was born in Hardwick, Mass., and, in common with his brothers and sisters, had the advantage of a good education. For some years, he was employed during the winter months in teaching, and at other seasons in land surveying. He finally settled as a farmer in Brookfield, Mass., and in this occupation most of his life was passed.

Mr. Spooner, writing to the compiler of these records, Aug. 23, 1860, said: "It has been my privilege to be united with a Congregational Church since I was 27 years of age, and I trust that I have a good hope, through grace, when I shall be called to leave this world, of an entrance into the rest which remaineth for the people of God."

"My natural inclination has been for retirement rather than publicity; although I have sometimes been drawn out of the shell, yet I have always been glad to return."

He was a volunteer in a Massachusetts regiment, in the war of 1812-15.

Having no children of his own, he adopted his nephew,

vi OWEN C. SPOONER, b. July 29, 1805.

The subject of this sketch was born near New Bedford, Mass., at what was termed "The-Head-of-the-(Acushnet) River." His father, Jeremiah Spooner, who was a farmer by occupation, died when Owen was in his seventh year, leaving his mother, with four children, in quite destitute circumstances. She removed to Nantucket shortly after, where, with the assistance of friends, she supported herself and children until the latter were able to care for themselves.

At the age of fifteen years, Owen was apprenticed to a boat-builder, but failing to develop an aptitude for the trade, he relinquished it after about a year and shortly after shipped on board a whaler, working his way up step by step until he attained the position of second mate of the ship Atlantic, from Nantucket.

It was during this voyage that he made an important discovery, which proved a valuable acquisition to the science of navigation. To convey to the ordinary reader, not possessing a knowledge of navigation, an idea of the importance of this discovery, it will be necessary to briefly describe the various methods of obtaining the longitude of a vessel at sea. About the middle of the forenoon or afternoon, the position of the sun is ascertained with the aid of an instrument called a quadrant, which designates the exact angle of its relative position to the earth's parallel. At the same instant the time by the chronometer (designating Greenwich, Eng., time,) is noted, and knowing what the angle of the sun's position is at Greenwich at the time denoted by the chronometer, the vessel's position, (after making allowances for the elevation of the ship's deck above the water level, the refraction of sun's rays, etc.,) is ascertained by calculation. Longitude is also obtained by noting the hour on the chronometer (set to Greenwich time) at which the sun crosses the meridian, and deriving the solution by certain rules. Still another method of ascertaining the longitude is by lunar observation, or computing the moon's distance from certain fixed stars at night or from the sun by day, noting the local time and comparing with the Greenwich time, at which, according to the nautical almanac, the same astronomical conditions exist. The latter method necessitated a vast amount of figuring.

The circumstances of Mr. Spooner's discovery of what is now known as "sunset longitude," are thus described by the Nantucket Journal of December 1, 1881:

"On the voyage previous to that of the discovery, the 2d. mate, Mr. Charles Clark of Maine, remarked, in presence of the mate, Mr. Hoeg, and Mr. Spooner, that he believed sunset longitude could be obtained. On the following voyage, in the ship Atlantic, December 16th, 1840, when in latitude 4:18:S. just before sunset, Mr. Hoeg, then captain, said to Mr. Spooner, note the time by the chronometer and let us see about this sunset longitude. The captain, mate, and Mr. Spooner worked upon the knotty problem until dark, when the two former gave it up. Not so Mr. S. He persevered three hours longer and finally obtained the longitude, 116 W., which corresponded with that of the afternoon. That night he forgot to write up his journal. The next morning they got a sunrise longitude, which agreed with the forenoons, and so they continued to test it, thus proving its correctness beyond a doubt. They informed every ship they spoke of the discovery and it soon became very generally known and used."

"The Atlantic touched at Tahiti after the discovery, and among the vessels at that port was the ship Columbus, of Nantucket, Capt. William B. Gardner, which had three men sick on board. As there was no doctor at Tahiti, the Columbus proceeded to Callao, where an American frigate was stationed, that the sick men might have the benefit of medical treatment from the physician attached to the frigate. Commander Maury, to whom the credit for this discovery has been generally ascribed, was a Lieutenant on this man-of-war, and then and there for the first time heard of the discovery of sunset longitude from the first officer of the Columbus, now Capt. Henry F. Coffin, Brooklyn, N. Y., who had learned it from Mr. Spooner. Lieut. Maury saw through the whole thing in a moment, and expressed great surprise that it had never been discovered before. He also said he would use his best endeavors to obtain for Mr. Spooner some substantial recognition from government of the service he had rendered navigation, but Mr. S. never heard anything more from him."

The advantages of "sunset longitude" are numerous. No quadrant is used, and it does away with a vast amount of the work which the other methods require, for there are no vertical angles to be computed, since the sun is on a level with the plane of the observer. The longitude can be very quickly found by the formula devised by Mr. Spooner, which has been in practical use for over forty years. It may be stated, in this connection, that whatever is said of sunset longitude is equally applicable to sunrise. One great advantage of this discovery lies in the fact that it often happens that thick or stormy weather prevails for several days, rendering it impossible to get an observation, but just at sunset the clouds are rifted and a glimpse is obtained of the sinking sun.

Having no influential friends to interest themselves in his behalf, Mr. Spooner never received from government any recognition of the service he has rendered the maritime world. Too busy in the days of his prime in providing for those dependent upon him, and too modest to make any effort in his own behalf, the opportunity from which many would have reaped a golden harvest, has been allowed to slip away unheeded, and instead of receiving honor and emolument for his achievement, others have appropriated the credit due him, the world has reaped the benefit, and his declining years are spent in poverty and comparative obscurity.

His residence is on the Island of Nantucket, and though now nearly eighty years old, he lives alone and contributes what he can by his own labor towards a scanty support. His has been an exemplary life. Many years ago he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been a class leader, and the vicissitudes through which he has passed have never caused his faith to waver.

vi PHILIP WING, b. July 6, 1789; d. Feb. 15, 1852.

It was said of Mr. Wing, by a Worcester, Mass., paper, of Feb. 18, 1852:

"The sudden removal, by death, of one so much esteemed and beloved, has thrown a sadness over the community. Few men leave their scenes of activity more deeply mourned than he. For many years he filled offices of trust and honor in the town, and in all of them his duties were discharged with unerring faithfulness and integrity. The church of which he was a member has lost one of the brightest ornaments of the Christian profession. In the little family circle where he was so tenderly loved, where his presence was ever a source of happiness, and where his example was always one to be followed and emulated, his loss will, indeed, be a sad one."

vii HENRY F. WING, b. Sept. 16, 1825.

The following is taken from The Wing Family Genealogy:

"Henry F. Wing was educated at Leicester and Worcester Academies, and resided with his father, in Grafton, Mass., to whose estate he succeeded, and on which he resides. From Sept., 1862 to 1870, he was assistant United States Internal Revenue Assessor. In 1864 he became cashier of the National Bank of Grafton, and in 1869 the treasurer of the Grafton Savings Bank, both of which positions he now holds. He has held many town offices, has been a Representative in the General Court, and is one of the most public-spirited citizens of the town."

vii LOWELL SMITH, b. Nov. 27, 1802.

On Oct. 2, 1882, Dr. and Mrs. Smith celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, at the residence of their son-in-law, Mr. Benjamin F. Dillingham, in Honolulu, capital of the Sandwich Islands. The occasion was one of great pleasure to all concerned. Congratulatory letters were received from relatives and friends in America, and numerous testimonies to the value and faithfulness of their labors in the Sandwich Islands, expressed in appropriate terms, were received by the aged couple from their co-laborers on the Islands.

On that occasion, Dr. Smith said:

"Just fifty years ago to-day, my wife and I were married in Brandon, Vermont. And on the 23d. of November we embarked on board the whale-ship Mentor, Captain John Rice, from New London, Connecticut, as missionaries of the A. B. C. F. M., for the Sandwich Islands. We had a long and tedious passage of 159 days around Cape Horn, arriving here on the first day of May, 1833.

“ Among our fellow passengers were Rev. Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Parker, who resided many years as missionaries at Kaneohe; Rev. Mr. and Mrs. John Diell, the first Seaman's Chaplain for Honolulu; Mr. Charles Burnham, who came to erect the Seamen's Chapel, and John Toohane, a native of these islands.

“ Leaving a good cool climate in New England, for a residence in the tropics, I, for one, expected to wilt down and pass away in the course of ten years. But having had a three-fold conviction on the subject of my duty to go and preach the gospel to the heathen, we took our lives in our hands, and came to live, labor and die at the Sandwich Islands.

“ The first year we were located by the mission on Molokai, with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock. The second year we were removed to Ewa, a new station, where we labored two years, teaching, preaching, building a dwelling house and school house, and commenced the work of building a large adobe meeting house.

“ In 1836 we were removed to Kawaiahao, to superintend the schools of that station. In the spring of 1837, the large reinforcement of school teachers arrived, and during the general meeting in June, Mr. and Mrs. Cooke were appointed to take charge of the schools at Kawaiahao, and we were requested to commence a second church and congregation at Kaunakapili. There we labored during the years of the great revival, from '37 to '40, and gathered many souls into the church of Christ; yea, and for more than 30 years, during the prime of our lives, we rose up early and sat up late, teaching, preaching, and trying to do the people good in both soul and body, as we had opportunity. And I am happy to say that our success in discipling the people, and winning souls to Christ was far greater than we had ever anticipated. And we wish now to honor our Lord and Master by saying that He has abundantly fulfilled His promise, to be with and bless us even unto the present time.

“ You are all aware that Mrs. Smith has devoted most of her missionary life to teaching children and youth in our parish and neighborhood. For many years she taught none but Hawaiians; some adults, but principally children and youth. And she has the satisfaction of knowing that most of her pupils have turned out well. Some of them have died in the faith of the gospel; some of them are now good, honest mechanics; some of them are good, efficient school teachers; and one or more is now an officer of Government. Hon. Mr. Kapena, our present Postmaster-General, is one of her scholars.

“ But revolutions of some kind have always been the order of the day in Honolulu. So, during the period of Rev. Mr. Armstrong's superintending the government schools, it was thought wise to remove all the small native schools in Honolulu to Kekahuna, and place them under one principal teacher, to be supplemented by several assistant teachers. Mrs. Smith was requested to become one of said teachers. This, of course, she declined, for being mistress of a family, she could not go away from home to teach school. She then opened the doors of her school-room for the children of some of our foreign neighbors residing in Nuuanu; and for many years had quite a large school. Numbers of her pupils have graduated from time to time into Punahon College, to receive the superior advantages of that institution."

Rev. Dr. Smith, wrote the compiler of these records, Feb. 25, 1868:

"We have disciplined, baptized and gathered into this Second Native Protestant Church, in Honolulu, on profession of faith in Christ, 2,782, and have received by letters from other churches, 1,132, in all, 3,914. Of this number 1,734 have died, 749 have been dismissed to other churches; only 780 are now in regular standing, and many of these are on the other islands, or have gone to California, or have shipped as sailors."

vi EBENEZER CHILDS, b. July 2, 1787, d. Sept. 1, 1874.

Capt. Childs wrote from Farmington, Me., some years since:

"In the Spring of 1806, I came to Thomaston, Me., was employed in a store and teaching school 'till the attack on the 'Chesapeak,' June 22, 1807, by the English ship 'Leopard,' the autumn after which I enlisted in the army; was employed until March, 1812, when I marched with a company of my recruits from Sackett's Harbor. I was in the 9th. U. S. Infantry, campaign of 1814, Scott's Brigade; was slightly wounded near Fort George; was wounded in the head during the siege of Fort Erie; and in the sortie, was wounded in the thigh with a bayonet: I was laid for dead on the field, but a kind Providence sent help just in time to save my life.

I was retained Captain on the Peace establishment; had a furlough of eighteen months, when, seeing no prospect of ever being able to do duty again, I resigned. I have since then resided in this town and have been a pensioner of the Government."

vii JAMES U. CHILDS, b. Oct. 19, 1840.

He was a volunteer in the 16th. Maine V. I., war of 1861-5. He was commissioned second lieutenant, and was soon promoted to be first lieutenant. He was taken prisoner at Gettysburg, and was successively confined in seven Southern prisons; on his fourth attempt, (after having been re-captured three times,) he succeeded in escaping from the enemy; he traveled (mostly by night,) 450 miles in forty-four days, through the enemy's country, and rejoined his regiment before Petersburg; from that on, he was engaged in all the subsequent battles in which his regiment took part, until the surrender of Lee.

vi LEMUEL SPOONER, b. Sept. 15, 1788; d. May 5, 1855.

Lemuel learned the trades of painter and chair-maker, but soon after attaining his majority, on the solicitation of his uncle, Thomas Spooner, he gave up work at his trades and returned to the old home of his grandfather, where he afterwards lived, as a farmer, looking to the comfort and happiness of his uncle and aunts, who lived out their days, unmarried, on the old homestead. This property, Lemuel inherited on the death of his uncle, and retained possession of it until early in 1855, when he sold it to a Mr. Dillingham. The sale was made with the expectation of purchasing a village home in Fairhaven, Mass., and the hope of passing a tranquil old age with his wife, in the enjoyment of his inheritance and what had been gathered by a life of frugality and industry. But, a few weeks after the sale of his farm, and before he had taken a permanent place of residence, he was accidentally drowned, by falling from the Fairhaven dock.

vi CHARLES C. SPOONER, b. Aug. 8, 1808.

Charles C. was born on his father's farm in New York State, and lived at home until his 17th. year, when he started into the world to build for himself a home and a character. He worked as a farm hand for some years, and then learned the trade of wagon-maker, which he followed until 1844, in Munroe Co., N. Y., when he lost, by fire, his whole property, the gatherings of twenty years of toil. Soon after this loss he emigrated to Ohio, and there located in Lorain county. By industry and prudence he soon accumulated enough to enable him to purchase a farm; from this time on he was a farmer. By good investments of the product of his labor, he became comfortably independent. His habits have been industrious and studious. Although he had few early educational advantages, by close application, observation, and proper use of his good sense, he has become a well informed, intelligent and useful man.

In New York, Mr. Spooner, besides town positions, held the rank of Captain in the State Militia. In Ohio, he often served his townsmen as School Trustee and in other trusts, and was an influential man in politics; as an old Whig and as a Republican, he was frequently a delegate to county conventions.

In 1865, Mr. Spooner removed to Adrian, Mich., where he is yet living in a green old age, and in the enjoyment of the gatherings of a life of industry and frugality.

vi PAUL RUGGLES, b. Dec. 14, 1772; d. May 11, 1820.

Mr. Ruggles was born in Hardwick, Mass., and lived there until the Spring of 1798, when, in company with his brother Abel and his family, he moved to Maine and settled in Township No. 2, in the second range north of the Waldo patent, now Carmel, but then an unbroken wilderness. With his brother, he erected the same year a saw-mill and made other improvements. He was in service for a time, in the war of 1812-15, as captain of a Maine company.

We are indebted to the "Memorial Paper" of Rev. C. G. Porter, of Bangor, Me., read at the Semi-Centennial meeting of the Maine Baptist Missionary Convention, held at East Winthrop, Me., June, 1874, for the following sketch of the Ministerial life of Mr. Ruggles:

"Elder Paul Ruggles was one of our early pioneer preachers. He was one of the constituent members of the church in Etna, organized in 1807, and its deacon till 1811, when he was ordained to the work of the ministry at his own house in Carmel. Revs. Daniel Merrill, Otis Briggs, and John Chadborn assisting in the services. He at once entered upon his great work with the ardor of an apostle, which was unabated till closed by his death.

"I have his journal here with me to-day, in which is found a record of all the places in which he preached, and the texts used from the time of his ordination till a few weeks before his death. I find, upon examination, that in a little more than nine years he preached more than 1,200 sermons, principally in the Penobscot region, varied with visits as far east as the State line, and west to what is now Somerset county, and that he was chiefly instrumental in gathering five churches, viz: at Newport, Stetson, Exeter, Hermon (now Second Hampden,) and Charlestown. In January, 1815, he made a preaching tour as far east as Eastport (then Moose Island,) preaching in all the towns on the way, and officiating a number of times on the Island, at the house of Deacon Aaron Hayden. Returning, on his arrival at Lubec, February 15, he received the joyful news of the proclamation of peace with Great Britain, and immediately calling the people together at the house of Capt. Norton, he preached from Luke 2:14, 'Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will to men.'

"Mr. Ruggles was very popular as a preacher, as much so as our most popular ministers of the present day. The old men and women who remember him speak of him as having been very smart, and very able, and very ingenious! He was a great favorite, particularly in Bangor and Hampden, and was sometimes pressed into service at very short notice. He preached the first sermon preached by a Baptist in what is now the city of Bangor, on the evening of the 2d. of November, 1817, and this was his text: Matt. 21:10, 'And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, who is this?' Mr. Case followed him in December, and baptized two persons. Mr. Ruggles had preached some years before, within the town limits, at the house of a Mr. Hosey, about four miles out on the Pushaw road, but this was the first Baptist sermon in what is now the city proper. It is told of him, that being in Hampden one day with his ox-team, he was besought to remain and preach to the people in the evening, and consented, taking for his text the story of that Shamgor, who slew so many of the Philistines with an ox-goad. He was regarded, in that very straight day, as a very close preacher, and, as they used to say, 'hewed by the line, let the chips fly where they might.' A young man, old, however, when he told me the story, heard him preach a sermon in Frankfort, in 1815, on 'Christian character,' in which he made it so exalted, that the young man said 'it tore him all to pieces' and left him without any foundation to stand on.' He said he feared to do it, but felt so alarmed that he did not dare to let Mr. Ruggles go without asking him 'if it was not possible for one to be a Christian without being just so exalted a character as he had set forth in his discourse?' 'O, bless you, my dear young man,' was the Elder's reply, 'we ministers have to preach what people ought to be, not what they are. Christ is the standard, and there must be a striving to be like Him, but the best of saints will come infinitely short.' His journal shows that Mr. Ruggles, like many of our earlier ministers, was fond of preaching from prophecy, and figurative and quaint passages, such as are found in the prophetic books and in the songs of Solomon. Such as these: 'And the river was divided into four heads'; 'And the cherubim spread forth their wings'; 'And I saw three unclean spirits, like frogs, come out of the mouth of the Dragon'; 'A lump of figs'; 'A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse'; 'And as a lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.' In running over the records, I was a little puzzled with what at first I thought was a text, it reads thus: '1818, Sept. 27, preached at the upper school house, in Carmel, from Luke 3:8, 'And the devil came from No. 4.' As I said, I thought, at first, it was a text, and I knew the devil came from a great many places, but I didn't remember about No. 4; but I found, upon examination, that it was simply a record of the fact that a wicked man came down from No. 4 (now Etna,) and disturbed the meeting. Mr. Ruggles died at the early age of thirty-eight, much lamented. His last sermon was preached at Newport, but a little time before his death, from one of those texts he loved so well to handle, Songs 3:6. 'Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness, like pillars of smoke, perfumed with myrrh, frankincense and all powders of the merchant'? I thought how fitting it was that the spirit of that gifted man should exhale in the aroma of such a text as that. His widow, who was loved and honored as a mother in Israel, survived him for the long period of fifty years, deceasing at the residence of her son Hiram, at Carmel, June 8, 1870, at the great age of ninety-three years."

vii HIRAM RUGGLES, b. Oct. 14, 1813.

The following sketch of Hon. Hiram Ruggles is taken from the "County History of Penobscot County, Maine," published 1882:

"This venerable gentleman, now a retired farmer and lumberman, in comfortable circumstances, at Carmel Village, is of an old Massachusetts family, his parents and their ancestors residing the last century in Hardwick, Worcester county, in that State. The Rev Paul Ruggles, his father, a Baptist minister, was born there in 1772, and in 1796 was married to Miss Mercy Dexter, of the same place. They came to Maine two years afterward, an ox sled bearing to the wilderness their stock of furniture. They came to Hampden, in this county, but shortly pushed up into Hermon, where they stayed some time with a family named Garland. About the first of May, 1798, finding no road cut into the tract called Carmel, Mr. Ruggles made a dug-out and, with his family and effects, paddled up the Sowadubcook, to a point near the mouth of the beautiful stream, called from him, Ruggles' brook. They were the first white settlers in the town. Here, in the wilderness, they built their rude cabin, in the locality now known far and wide as the Ruggles place.

"Hiram was born in Carmel. The sixth son and ninth child of Paul and Mercy (Dexter) Ruggles. His early education was received altogether in the schools of his native town, where his formal training began and ended in the plain, simple "College of the People." He has always had an ambition for learning, however, and, by diligent reading and study, has so improved his later opportunities as to become a well informed and thoroughly intelligent man. At an early age the family came to depend, in some measure, upon him, and he was called to much hard labor upon the farm in his boyhood and youth. He remained steadily at home with his widowed mother, being the main business manager of the household after he was seventeen, and making no change in his relations with it when he became of age. He never abandoned the hope of further education in the schools, until he was about twenty-five years old, when he married and finally settled down upon the old place as its proprietor, his mother residing with him then and to the day of her death. He remained a farmer here, except as he was summoned from time to time into more public life, until 1853, when he decided to remove to the village. He disposed of his farm, and engaged as a lumber operator, cutting and manufacturing, with a general store at the village in connection with his business. He became quite largely employed thus, finally coming to own an interest, entire or partial, in almost every mill in town. He pursued his various operations very successfully, winning by industry and integrity a moderate fortune, upon which he retired in 1877.

"The abilities and popularity of Mr Ruggles, early prompted his fellow citizens to call upon him for public service. He was not much more than of age when he became an official participant in the affairs of his native town. He was Chairman of the Carmel Board of Selectmen when but twenty-three years of age, and has ever since been in the town business. In 1839, when he was but twenty-six years old, he was appointed by Governor Fairfield, a Justice of the Peace and of the Quorum for a term of seven years, and in 1860, he was made a Trial Justice for three years; 1850-53 inclusive, he served as one of the County Commissioners of Penobscot county. In 1846, he was elected a member of the State Legislature, as a Representative from Carmel and Hampden, and served seven years; thereafter, in 1853, he was chosen State Senator, from the Ninth District, which returned him in 1854 to the same body; in 1863, he was elected by the Legislature a member of the Executive Council, and enjoyed the unprecedented, and since not repeated, honor of four successive re-elections to that distinguished post.

"On Oct. 10, 1865, he received the unsolicited appointment of post-master at Carmel Village, and served three years. In 1867, he was appointed a member of the very important commission, on the assumption, by the State, of the municipal war debts. Upon the organization, in 1862, of the fourth U. S. Internal Revenue District, which included Penobscot county, he was appointed Deputy Assessor for the district, this office he resigned upon his election to the State Executive Council; but in 1869, April 7, he was recalled to more responsible duties in the same office, by an appointment as Assessor. On March 25, 1873, he was appointed Collector of U. S. Internal Revenue, in the same district. Upon the consolidation of his district with another, he was made Collector of the consolidated district, with his office, in each instance, in the government buildings at Bangor. Upon a subsequent further consolidation of districts, he was legislated out of office, and upon his retirement, the 'Bangor Whig and Courier,' of July 3, 1877, said: 'It is safe to say, that the Government of the United States retains in its service no officer who stands higher in personal character, integrity, and public respect, than the gentleman whose official relations were terminated on Saturday last.'

"This closed Major Ruggles' official life of nearly forty years. Besides the positions named, he had often been nominated by his fellow-partisans to similar or other public places. He was a Democrat down to the administration of President Peirce; but was among the earliest in Maine to break with his party on the slavery question, and he aided to organize the Republican party in the State, with which he has since steadily and consistently acted. His return to the Senate, in 1854, was upon an independent ticket, as a pronounced anti-slavery man, and he then carried out his principles, casting the one decisive vote which finally made the Hon. W. P. Fessenden United States Senator.

"It may here be mentioned that Maj. Ruggles' military title is due to his faithful service with the old time militia, in which he was Ensign, 1837, subsequently Adjutant, Captain in 1841, and Major, 1843.

"Major Ruggles has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since 1838; has since then been in its official boards almost the whole time. And, when the system of Lay representation was introduced, he was made a delegate to the Baltimore Quadrennial Conference in 1876. He has taken a very cordial interest in denominational education, and is a trustee and treasurer of the East Maine Conference Seminary at Bucksport, to which he has been a liberal benefactor. He also gave a large sum in one amount to the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Connecticut, and has otherwise and in many ways been generous in his benevolence. He is, also, a Free and Accepted Mason, a member of the Lodge at Carmel, and of the Chapter in Bangor."

"Gardner Ruggles enlisted as a private, Aug. 21, 1862, in Company F., 18th. Regiment, (afterward 1st. Maine Heavy Artillery) and was appointed sergeant. His promotion to a lieutenantcy soon followed. He was about 23 years of age, when, on the 18th. of June, 1864, while nobly cheering his men in the charge upon the fortifications of Petersburg, he fell at the head of his company, pierced by an enemy's bullet.

"Lieut. Ruggles was a young man of unusual promise. Having graduated with honor at the East Maine Conference Seminary, he became a teacher, and remained in that occupation for more than a year, until impelled by patriotism he entered upon military service. He rose rapidly from the ranks, through the several subordinate positions, until he won, without solicitation, his commission as a Lieutenant.

"During all the weary months that his regiment was stationed in the fortifications around Washington, his activity for the welfare of his men knew no abatement, and when the order was issued for the command to advance to the front, he, with his comrades, most gladly responded, that they might thus enter upon active service.

"At Spottsylvania, on the 19th. of May, in a sharp rencountre, he was slightly wounded. From this time, however, until his death, he was frequently engaged with the enemy. The boldness and determination of the attack in which Lieut. Ruggles fell, may be readily inferred from the fact that of the large and well appointed Company F., after the assault of the 18th., but 13 men were left able to perform duty.

"Lieut. Ruggles was a good scholar, a true gentleman and a brave soldier. Gallant, cool and reliable, he enjoyed the confidence of his superior officers, and the love of his men. Although buried in an unknown grave, his deeds and character are embalmed in the memories of mourning relatives and a grateful people."

vi ABEL RUGGLES, b. Mar. 26, 1776; d. June 18, 1860.

A Carmel, Me., paper of July, 1859, said:

"On the 26th. June, last, there was a social and interesting gathering at the house of Abel Ruggles, Esq., in this town, consisting of his children, grand-children, great-grand-children and a few neighbors. This meeting was sixty years and twenty days after the marriage of Mr. Ruggles and his present wife. Mr. and Mrs. Ruggles were born in Hardwick, Massachusetts, and five days after their marriage they started for Carmel, and settled on No. 3, R. 2, north of Waldo patent, where they now live. He, with his brother, Rev. Paul Ruggles, and their wives, were the first settlers of Carmel. They both built a saw-mill the first year they came here, in 1799. He and his wife soon after made a profession of religion, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In this church Mr. Ruggles was a class leader over thirty years, and the recording steward about ten years. After the town was incorporated, he was one of the selectmen and assessors for ten years in succession; and, after two years, he was elected first selectman and assessor for several years. He was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention in Portland to form the State Constitution, and was once a member of the State Legislature. Very frequently he has been a referee to settle vexing questions of disagreement between neighbors, and acquired a wide reputation for intelligence and for his strict sense of justice between man and man. He is upright in all his dealings, and has not been behind the foremost in all public enterprises, and to promote the settlement and welfare of this town."

v ELIHU H. THOMAS, b. Oct. 30, 1802; d. Feb. 8, 1876.

Mr. Thomas wrote the compiler of these records, from Chinese Camp, California, May 15, 1867:

"I was reared as a carpenter and machinist. About 1828 I invented the first power printing press known in our country, except perhaps one made by professor Treadwell of Boston, who had a press in operation about the same time, carefully concealed from outsiders by high walls and locks.

"My press was successfully used for book work for about five years by many large publishing houses, when it was surpassed by Adams and others, who adopted many combinations of mine and produced a more perfect press.

"My next invention was one of the most valuable. It removed the great obstacle to the successful making of paper by machinery. Thomas Blanchard, a man known to fame, as an inventor of gun stocks and other machinery, was, in 1820 and '30, engaged in making machinery for the manufacture of paper, he despaired of success, because of knots in the paper-pulp; these knots are made by the seamstress and are never ground by the engine, and consequently appear on the sheet, and in passing the rollers are crushed, making an ugly blotch, besides ruining the roller as well as the felt cloths, thus producing much waste and a defective paper. To remove these knots was long deemed an impossibility. I conceived it possible to make a strainer that would do the work and not clog. I got a quantity of paper-pulp and diluted it thin with water, and held a glass up to the sunlight and saw that the length of the fibres were less than one-fourth of an inch long; so I constructed a metallic screen of brass so wide as to prevent any fibre straddling; the interstices were fine enough to keep back all knots and let all the pulp flow through when diluted properly with water. This invention was a perfect success and completely revolutionized the paper manufacture, and is absolutely indispensable to the successful use of machinery for the manufacture of paper. I sold an undivided one-half interest at once for a large sum to Naham Woodcock, and the patent was issued to Thomas & Woodcock; we supplied all the mills then in the country and realized a profit of about $30,000. I went to Europe to secure patents there, and found that one Ibbotson, of England, had recorded a Caveat for an improvement in the manufacture of paper and was experimenting. It was the same principle as mine, and his Caveat was dated fourteen days after the date of our patent, and as this was before the days of crossing the ocean by steam, the invention was doubtless original with him as well as with me. Simultaneous inventions have occurred before by parties residing widely distant.

"This led to the establishing of extensive works for the manufacture of paper machinery, where were made the first iron-drying machines in the United States and now generally used. These works are at Brattleboro. Vermont, and now owned and carried on by F. Tyler & Son.

"I made many other inventions, some of which were quite lucrative. I was largely engaged in paper manufacture; and, also, in the manufacture of boxwood rules. My partner in this last was Spencer M. Clark, since Superintendent of the Printing Bureau at Washington, D. C., where all the bank notes, U. S. bonds, etc., are printed.

"I employed a large number of people, built numerous mills and houses, some of them first-class, opened up an addition to the village, which is dignified by the name of Thomasville. But I failed to get rich myself, whilst I enriched many others, and now, after twenty years absence from that place, on a recent visit, I was nearly unknown and forgotten, except by a few contemporaries and old friends.

vii LEMUEL HALL, b. Aug. 17, 1794; d. Apr. 9, 1864.

The following is taken from the Racine (Wisconsin) Democrat:

"It seems fitting that the death of so good a man should be noticed by special words of remembrance and affection. On the 9th of April, there passed from our presence and fellowship, the spirit of a holy man, whose gentleness of manner, nobility of character, and modest worth endeared him to us all beyond the power of common men.

"Mr. Hall was born in Sutton, Mass. He graduated at Brown University in 1820, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1824. He was licensed to preach by the Haverhill (Mass.) Association, Aug. 10th, 1824. Ordained as a Home Missionary by the Association of St. Lawrence, N. Y.

"Mr. Hall was never installed as Pastor of a church, but ministered faithfully and successfully to the following churches, and at the times named, as Stated Supply:

"Presbyterian Church, DeKalb. N. Y., 1826-28; Arminville, N. Y., 1828-29; Holland, N. Y., 1828-30; Hamburg, N. Y., 1830-32; Bethany, N. Y., 1832-33; Sparta, N. Y., 1833-34; Mount Morris, N. Y., 1834-35; Centerville, N. Y., 1836-38; Geneva, Wis., 1838-39; Virginia Settlement, Ill., 1839-46.

"It was sometimes his privilege, as at Geneva, Wis., to organize these little churches to which he afterwards ministered, and which have since become strong and self-sustaining.

"We have often thought that the crown which awaits in Heaven, our self-denying and faithful Home Missionaries, who were willing to labor on in darkness and trial, in faith of a coming harvest, when, from those small beginnings, should grow large and influential churches, must be bright above the lot of others, and to the possession of such a crown has this pure and good man gone.

"For twenty-two years before his death, he was unable, from a difficulty of the throat, to continue the work to which he was so sincerely attached.

"The three years of his residence in Racine have been a fitting close to his devoted life. He has walked among us, a man of God, in whose spirit there was no guile, and upon whose character there was no stain or shadow. To those who knew him best, he appeared as one who, while faithful to the duties of the present, has ever wistfully been looking for the dawn of Heaven and the summons that should call his waiting spirit home. The event of death was so fearfully sudden in its nature, that to one less prepared than he, it would have been a painful surprise, but it found him ready, without a regretful look at the past, or a distrustful look into the future, he entered upon the glorious realization of the better and immortal life."

vii ALFRED HELM, b. July 7, 1817.

Mr. Helm wrote from Carson City, Nevada, May, 1867, as follows:

"I came to this coast in 1853; settled in Sierra county, California, at Gibsonville, then a prosperous mining town of some 1,200 inhabitants, and in the Spring of 1854 commenced the publication of the "Mountain Messenger," a weekly independent paper, as editor and proprietor.

"In the Fall of 1854 I sold out my paper, which has ever since been continued, and is now published at Downieville, Cal., and went into the employ of Adams & Co., at La Porte, Sierra Co., Cal., and was, at the same time, a partner in a provision and general supply house.

"In 1855 I was elected Clerk of the County of Sierra, which office then comprised the ex-officio offices of Clerk of the District Court, County Recorder and County Auditor, and was worth some $10,000. per year. This position I held from June, 1856, until October, 1858.

"In March, 1860, I came to this State, then Territory of Utah. I first held the office of Treasurer of Carson county.

"When the Territory of Nevada was organized, in 1861, I received the appointment of Clerk of the United States District Court, and, in 1863, was appointed to the additional office of Clerk of the Supreme Court of the Territory.

"When the State was organized and admitted into the Union, in 1864, I was elected, by the largest majority given for any candidate, Clerk of the Supreme Court. In 1866 I was re-elected Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State. In February of last year, our Legislature made me Reporter of our Supreme Court."

vi SPOONER RUGGLES, b. Aug. 4, 1795; d. Mar. 7, 1874.

In September, 1809, young Spooner Ruggles went from Hardwick, Mass., to live with his sister, Mrs. Timothy Wells, who was then living in Washington county, N. Y. Subsequently he took up his residence in Schoharie, N. Y.

He served in a New York drafted regiment of infantry in the war against England, 1812-15. In March, 1817, he was commissioned a Lieutenant in the New York State Militia. The following September he removed to Richland county, O., where he located on a tract of land, and where he lived for nineteen years, a life of toil. Whilst living in Ohio—April, 1821—he was elected a Justice of the Peace, which office he held twelve years. In October, 1824, he was elected County Commissioner for Richland county, notwithstanding his politics were the opposite of those of a majority of the voters in the county, and he was continued in that office four years.

In 1836, Mr. Ruggles removed to Ogle county, Illinois, where he purchased a large tract of land and erected a homestead; on this farm he lived thirty-one years. In August, 1840, he was elected County Commissioner for Ogle county, which office he resigned in 1842, and was, the same year, elected, by the district composed of Ogle and Winnebago counties, a member of the Illinois State Senate, and was continued, by re-election, a member of that body four years. In 1849 he was elected County Judge of Ogle county and declined a re-election on the close of his term of four years service. In 1851, he served as Supervisor of Pine Creek township, in which he lived; and, from that time, afterward, he declined all offices, except the one of School Treasurer of his township, which office, by annual elections, he continued to hold until his removal to Rockford, Ill., in 1867.

In the discharge of the duties of the many and varied offices and public trusts, both in Ohio and Illinois, Judge Ruggles was never charged with any deficiency in the old Jeffersonian standard of qualification,—honesty, capacity and faithfulness to the Constitution and laws of his country.

In politics, Judge Ruggles was in opposition to the Democratic party. In religion, he was a liberal conservative—he was for a long time attached to the Free Will Baptists, but afterwards worshiped with the Congregationalists.

In the beautiful Forest City of Rockford, Ill., Judge Ruggles chose a fitting home for his declining years—retired from busy toil and strife. He died in peace and faith in his seventy-ninth year.

vii JAMES M. RUGGLES, b. Mar. 7, 1818.

James M., the second son of Hon. Spooner and Lydia (Drown) Ruggles, was born two miles north of Mansfield, Ohio. At that time Mansfield had but few inhabitants, and most of them occupied rude block houses erected during the last war with Great Britain. In 1819, his father settled in Plymouth, in the north end of Richland county, where James spent that portion of his life extending to the age of sixteen, working on the farm and going to school, sometimes at home and sometimes in distant neighborhoods, where educational facilities were better. During the last winter of his schooling, he was in the habit of getting up at two to three o'clock in the morning and going into the forest to chop cord-wood by moonlight, in order to pay his way at the academy he was attending in Peru, Huron county, and so well did he appreciate this, his last opportunity for schooling, that his progress in the studies he was pursuing was very rapid.

In the Spring of 1834, having for some time contemplated and admired the character of the printer-philosopher, Franklin, James determined to learn the art of printing, which he believed would furnish opportunities for further improving the mind and storing up useful knowledge for future use, and he went, like Franklin, with his little bundle under his arm, to the town of Norwalk, Ohio, and agreed with the editor of the "Huron Reflector" to remain three years, to learn "the art preservative of all arts" and for his services he was to receive his boarding expenses and $30. for the first, $35. for the second, and $40. for the third year. So well did this apprentice practice the lessons of economy and thrift taught by his great ideal, that clothing himself tastefully and comfortably, and going in the best society of the town during his apprenticeship, he found himself in possession of the sum of $42. of his hard earnings at the end of the three years.

In the autumn, before the expiration of his apprenticeship, James' father sold his farm in Richland county and made arrangements for moving to Ogle county, Illinois.

In the month of May, 1837, having served out his time, and wishing to join the family in Illinois, a horse was offered him on credit with which to make the journey, and accepted, and, with what effects could be packed into a pair of saddle-bags, James mounted his steed and bade farewell to the town in which he had formed many ties that have never been severed. At the place of his birth he made a short stop, and then bidding a final adieu to all, he left his native state to seek his fortune in that of his adoption.

During the summer he visited Chicago, (then a town of near 4,000 inhabitants,) Galena, and other places in search of employment, but finding none, went to St. Louis in October, 1837, and got a situation in the office of the "Missouri Republican," where he was employed at the time of the death of Lovejoy, the martyr. This bloody murder of a man for the expression of honest and truthful convictions, and the terrible condition of the public sentiment, that would not allow the indignant soul to cry against

Was too much for the liberty-loving spirit of the young printer, and he determined to go where he could speak his mind on political questions, without endangering life, and soon departed for Naples, Illinois, to take charge of a paper which had a brief existence there. From that, our printer went to Jacksonville, and soon had charge of the "Illinoian," an influential paper of that day, filling the place of foreman and furnishing most of the editorials, which were "set up" without writing, until the winter of 1840, when he went to Springfield to spend the winter where were congregated the great men of the state. In the spring he returned, and went to Winchester, Illinois, and entered upon the study of the law, but soon got hold of a small printing office and added to his studies, type setting and editorial writing, (in the same room occupied by Senator Douglass six years before,) until May, 1844, when he was admitted to the bar after passing an examination before Judges Lockwood and Treat, since U. S. District Judge of Northern Illinois.

In 1846, Mr. Ruggles sold his printing office and law library and removed to Bath, Illinois, where he went extensively into mercantile and other pursuits, which were continued until the breaking out of the war in 1861. The vicissitudes of trade, at this period, somewhat impaired the fortune which he had amassed in fifteen years of successful business, but still leaves him a large landed estate.

In politics, Mr. Ruggles took a deep interest, from the date of the presidential election in 1836, down to that of 1864, always laboring in opposition to the Democratic party. In the days of the old Whig party, he was a great admirer of Webster and Clay, and from 1838 to 1864, was a co-worker with Abraham Lincoln, often meeting as delegates in convention. In 1843 both were delegates to the Congressional convention that nominated the lamented Gen. Hardin, and, at his instance, was made secretary of the convention. At this convention the contest between Gen. Hardin and Col. Baker (the personal friend of both delegates,) was so close that the vote of Mr. Ruggles decided the contest, but he at once offered a resolution recommending Col. Baker for the next term, which was supported by Mr. Lincoln and carried; and at the next convention, in 1844, both again met as delegates, and Mr. Ruggles again acting as secretary, when Col. Baker was nominated by acclamation. In 1846, Mr. Ruggles was a delegate to the convention that nominated Mr. Lincoln as a candidate for Congress. Whilst publishing his little paper in Winchester, the Whig vote of the Illinois Legislature was at one session cast for Mr. Ruggles for state printer, as a compliment to his abilities. Mr. Ruggles and Col. Baker, above alluded to, remained fast friends during all his eventful political career, to the time of his tragic death at Ball's Bluff, early in the war of the Rebellion.

In 1852, at the expiration of the term of Hon. John J. Stuart in the State Senate, Mr. Lincoln, and other prominent men in Springfield, united in a call upon Mr. Ruggles to be the Senatorial candidate of the district composed of the counties of Sangamon, Menard and Mason, and without a convention, or without leaving his home, he was triumphantly elected and served until 1856. Mr. Ruggles' father also served four years in the State Senate, preceding him just ten years.

In 1854, Mr. Lincoln was elected a member of the Lower House of the Legislature, but, concluding to become a candidate for U. S. Senator, he resigned. When the contest came on, Senator Ruggles was lying low with a fever which had kept him down all the winter, but he insisted on being carried to the State House, where he balloted for his old friend, Mr. Lincoln, until it became manifest that he could not be elected, and then, at Mr. Lincoln's own request, the vote was cast for Mr. Trumbull, who was elected by a single vote.

At a meeting of the members of the legislature and others opposed to the Democratic party, Mr. Ruggles, Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Peck were appointed a committee to draft resolutions for adoption as a platform of principles, and Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Peck being engaged in Supreme Court, the duty devolved on Mr. Ruggles to draft the resolutions, which was done in so satisfactory a way, that in submitting them to Mr. Lincoln, he suggested but the single alteration of a word. These resolutions embodied the principles which soon after formed the basis of the great Republican party, since then become the most powerful political organization that has ever existed on this continent.

In 1856 Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Ruggles again met as delegates in the Bloomington convention—the first delegate Republican convention ever held in the United States. At this convention Mr. Ruggles was the choice of the convention for Lieutenant-Governor, but gave way to a German candidate, to conciliate the German element and carry the state election.

In 1858, during the great contest between Lincoln and Douglass, Mr. Ruggles accompanied Mr. Lincoln a part of the time during the campaign, and at his solicitation came to Bath (a town that Mr. Lincoln laid out as surveyor in 1836,) and made a characteristic speech on the premises of Mr. Ruggles, and was his guest whilst in town.

In 1860, both again met in the State convention at Decatur, and from thence Mr. Ruggles went to Chicago to labor as a delegate for the nomination of Mr. Lincoln, which resulted in his first election to the presidency.

In April, 1861, Mr. Ruggles went, at the request of his friend, Governor Yates, as the bearer of important dispatches to Mr. Lincoln, at the time of the troubles at Baltimore, when it was not known how any northern man could get to Washington—all means of communication being closed. Without anything but the apparel he wore and his dispatches, he started, and going to Philadelphia, went from there to Perryville, and from there by steamer, with a gun-boat escort, to Annapolis, and thence through to Washington by the first train on this route, where he arrived late in the evening and was at once escorted to the White House, where Mr. Lincoln was overjoyed to meet his old friend, and to again hear from his old home and friends. Mr. Ruggles was introduced to the members of the Cabinet then present, and Mr. Lincoln read aloud, with deep interest, the dispatches, which contained information of the capture of Camp Jackson, the removal of the public arms from St. Louis Arsenal to Springfield, and other important news of the day. Before leaving Washington, Mr. Lincoln tendered to Mr. Ruggles a very desirable appointment, but he had made up his mind to go into the military service, and so informed Mr. Lincoln. This was the last earthly interview of these old-time friends—the last time they met, until the martyred corse of the immortal Lincoln was sent to his beloved Illinois for a final resting-place.

Returning to Illinois, Mr. Ruggles was, on the 17th. of July, 1861, commissioned as Lieutenant and Quartermaster of the Illinois cavalry volunteers, and immediately went to the front, in Missouri, where he spent the first Sunday in the service in the company of Gen. (then Colonel) Grant, at the house of a mutual Illinois friend, in Mexico, Mo. He soon discovered that this branch of the service did not suit him, and, applying to Gen. Grant, then in command at Jefferson City, Mo., obtained leave to return to Illinois to be transferred to some position that would bring him more nearly in contact with the enemy, and was kindly furnished transportation by the General back to Illinois. Lieutenant Ruggles was tendered the command of an infantry regiment, but preferring the cavalry service, was promoted Major, and transferred to the 3d. Illinois cavalry volunteers, on the 11th. of Sept., 1861, and soon departed to Missouri with his regiment, and marched under Fremont from Jefferson City to Springfield, Missouri, and, after his removal, back to Rolla, and thence again, in February, back to Springfield, where Major Ruggles, at his own request, was sent forward to drive in the enemy's outposts. Here was the first engagement any part of the regiment got into. The conflict was a sharp one, a battalion of cavalry contending with a full regiment of the enemy for nearly an hour, when they beat a hurried retreat, and Major Ruggles was highly complimented by the Colonel of the regiment and General Curtis, (who came upon the ground after the conflict was over) for his gallantry on the occasion.

At the battle of Pea Ridge, Major Ruggles was actively engaged during the three days on which the battle was fought. On the 6th. of March he was sent with his command to the support of General Siegel, who was retreating from Bentonville, and fighting his way through a largely superior force. On the approach of the reinforcements the enemy fell back and marched round during the night to the rear of our forces to cut them off from retreat. Major Ruggles was complimented by being selected on this day as "officer of the day," and during the entire night was on the alert, posting pickets and videttes, and repeatedly visiting them, and saving the camp from a night attack, which was attempted and thwarted by the vigilance of the officer of the day. On the morning of the 7th. he led his command, at the rising of the sun, to the attack of the main body of the enemy in the rear of our position, and all day long was in range of the enemy's guns, supporting the infantry and protecting the left flank of the center division. Twice during the day he was sent to the crown of the high hill to the left of Elk Horn Tavern, to draw the fire of the enemy from the center, which was driving our forces back into camp, and, on the second time, he received a galling fire from a large force of Indians and sharpshooters in ambush, behind the brow of the hill, which sent the cavalry back in confusion, causing them to leap over the steep declivities, which were from three to thirty feet perpendicular, and in doing which, many men and horses were bruised and wounded. For his services on this occasion, Major Ruggles was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment, his commission bearing date March 7th.

After this engagement, the Colonel marched with his command, under General Curtis, to Batesville, and from thence to Helena, Arkansas, where the command arrived on the 14th. of July, 1862, after having been cut off from all communications for over a month. Remaining here until the 20th. of December, suffering most of the time from most painful disease, and also annoyed by the intrigues of ambitious and unprincipled officers who tried to get him out of the service on complaint of physical disability and other false and malicious charges, which were repelled and resulted in driving several officers out of the service, the Colonel got permission to take his regiment on board of transports and to go forward with the army to make the attack on Haines' Bluff, near Vicksburg, under General Sherman. Of all the cavalry at Helena, this was the only regiment permitted to go forward into active service at that time.

After the repulse at Haines' Bluff, the regiment went to Arkansas Post and there participated in the reduction of the Post and the capture of five thousand prisoners. A company of the regiment, consisting of 40 men, captured 60 prisoners

(the first brought into our lines,) on the night before the surrender of the Post.

Returning to the siege of Vicksburg, and remaining there until the first of February, Col Ruggles was, by order of Gen. Grant, sent up to Memphis with a part of the regiment, and there, and in that vicinity, he remained on duty, a part of the time in the field and a portion of the time on a Military Commission and on Court-Martial, until the last of August, when the non-veterans of the regiment returned to Illinois to be mustered out of the service. Col. Ruggles returned also to the State he had not seen for three years, and, worn down with disease and hard service, he was mustered out with other officers of the regiment, and a portion of the enlisted men, on the 5th. of September, 1864. On the 20th. of March, 1866, Col. Ruggles was brevetted a Brig.-General for "faithful and meritorious services," to date from the 13th. day of March, 1865, and thus terminates the military record of the subject of this brief biography, in the war for the suppression of the great American Rebellion.

In religion Gen. Ruggles, naturally sustaining liberal views, was never strictly orthodox. With his ideas of the God-head, it seemed unreasonable that the Deity should exist in three characters, or persons, unless it be in the three characters of Love, Justice and Wisdom, and as he believed in the Unity of God, and at the age of 24 years joined the Christian (or Campbellite,) Church, as the nearest approaching his views at that time of life., Since his removal to Bath he has not united with any religious congregation, though feeling a lively interest in all that pertains to the well being of society here, and the happiness of all God's creatures in the hereafter. He believes that the idea of a veritable devil, or a veritable hell, is inconsistent with both the justice and goodness of the laws by which God governs the universe, but thinks there may be a spirit of evil, and that there may be a punishment growing out of that spirit, both here and in the hereafter. But, above all, he has an abiding faith in the wisdom, goodness and justice of God, and that in accordance with His economy, all men, women and children of the earth belong to God's family, and that they will eternally exist in a self-conscious, personal identified state, eternally progressing toward a higher state of existence.

vii EDWARD RUGGLES, b. Apr. 15, 1823; d. July 30, 1854.

The following was published at the time of Mr. Ruggles' death:

"He entered upon the work of the ministry some three months before his death, in the Congregational Churches of Nettle Creek and Big Grove, Illinois, and had just removed with his family to his new field of labor, where he heard a voice from God, saying unto him, 'come up higher.'

"Mr. Ruggles entered Illinois College in September, 1852. He succeeded his beloved brother, Spooner Ruggles, in a tutorship, in which he continued for one year, greatly beloved and respected both by his pupils and fellow-instructors. His Master's oration, delivered at commencement in 1853, is still remembered by many as a rare specimen of vigorous thought and classic elegance of diction.

"His character was distinguished for unpretending, even shrinking, blushing modesty, clearness and vigor of thought, a rare felicity in the use of language, and the choice of imagery, great purity of moral taste and emotion, and unusual strength and elevation of Christian principles. Though on ordinary occasions his modesty gave him the appearance of timidity, where his religious convictions were concerned, his moral courage never failed him. Such was the dignity and consistency, the deep humility of his religious character, that he was not more loved by the good than revered by the wicked."

He was a graduate of Illinois College, and held a tutorship in that institution at the time of his death. It was said of him at that time:

"Several years before his death, he is known to have devoted his life to the Christian Ministry, and was directing all his energies to secure the speediest and most complete preparation for the duties of that responsible office. When he was invited to accept a tutorship, a place which his distinguished scholarship and his excellent social and religious character pointed him out as peculiarly qualified to fill with usefulness an honor, he was very reluctant to accept it, because it would delay his preparation for the ministry. He, however, finally accepted it, from a sense of duty to his Alma Mater and the cause of learning."] vi JAMES BELL, b. Dec. 4, 1776; d. Apr. 17, 1852.

Mr. Bell settled at Walden, Vermont, in 1804. In 1815, and 1818 to 1828, he represented his town in the Legislature of Vermont. He was a member of the State Council of Censors, 1848. Prior to locating in Walden, Mr. Bell lived in Hardwick, Vermont, where he was Deputy Sheriff. While holding this office, he became entangled with a lawyer for whom he had official business; there being some official error on the part of the Deputy Sheriff, he was sued on his official bond. The litigation likely to prove ruinous to him, through the lack of a right understanding of the case by his attorneys, he became his own counsel and managed his own case, and by his natural wit, eloquence and perseverance, he finally triumphed, protected his reputation and saved himself from a financial reverse. He then entered upon a course of reading, and soon after was licensed to practice law in the courts of Vermont, and afterward devoted himself to the legal profession, and was ranked with those of the most prominent and successful lawyers of the State.

vii TAYLOR G. WORCESTER, b. Apr. 6, 1799; d. Sept. 7, 1879.

Mr. Worcester was a graduate of Harvard University and of Andover Theological Seminary. Owing to a change in his religious views during the last year of his theological course, he then becoming a "receiver" of the doctrines of Swedenborg, and consequently out of place in the "Old Church." His life for a number of years was devoted to teaching the doctrines of his new faith, and to the translation of Swedenborg's works. These callings he was forced to give up by reason of impaired health, and he soon afterward retired from active business life and settled down as a farmer upon his paternal homestead, at Hollis, N. H., which had been in the family for more than a century, where he lived for about forty years.

viii CURTIS H. BILL, b. Jan. 2, 1835.

The following is taken from the Bill Family Genealogy:

"In 1854, he commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Charles B. Chandler, of Montpelier, Vermont. After this he attended two courses of medical lectures at Dartmouth College, one at the University of New York, at the last of which he received the degree of M. D., in the Spring of 1859. At his final examination in anatomy and surgery, he was highly commended by the Faculty. He soon settled in Tennessee, and entered upon the practice of his profession, which he continued up to the time of the breaking out of the late civil war in 1861. The condition of public sentiment in Tennessee was at that time more or less chaotic, and it being well known that he was by birth a northern man, he felt it to be the course of prudence to withdraw for a time from public duties. He was, however, soon offered a commission in the Rebel army, this he very respectfully declined, and the result of this declination was, that he found himself obliged to leave that section of the country. He proceeded northward by way of Louisville, Ky. While here, he met and was introduced to Gen. W. T. Sherman, who had command of that department, and through his influence he obtained a commission as Surgeon in the United States Army. He was assigned to the 15th. regiment U. S. Infantry, and continued in the service, of this regiment during 1861-62 and '63, and received, during all this period, the respect and confidence of both officers and men.

"The General under whom he served paid him the high compliment: 'Dr. Bill could always be found on the field, and conducted himself the most bravely of any surgeon in my command.' The regiment presented him with a beautiful and expensive case of surgical instruments, in token of their appreciation of his valuable services rendered to them. He was in the battles of Shiloh, Murfreesboro, Nashville, and many other minor engagements, doing active duty in those fields.

"He was, at his own request, relieved from active duties and assigned to the Department Head-quarters, as examining surgeon for discharges, forming one of a board of three surgeons. This medical board, we are informed, passed upon more than 7,000 applicants for discharge in the space of three months.

"He was afterward detailed as Surgeon-in-chief of 'Howard Hospital,' at Nashville, which post he held for nearly one year, having, during this time, the care of many wounded and disabled soldiers; he here performed many capital operations in surgery with marked success. His health failing him, he was compelled to resign, but after a brief respite among his relatives he returned to Nashville, and at the solicitation of Andrew Johnson, then Military Governor of Tennessee, he accepted an appointment as Surgeon of the Fifth regiment of Tennessee Cavalry, and he continued to act in that capacity till the close of the war in 1865, being mustered out of service in August of that year.

"Subsequent to the close of the war, Dr. Bill lived some years at Fayetteville, Tenn., engaged in the practice of his profession and in cultivating a cotton plantation. The past few years he has been living at Bridgeport, Conn."

vii GEORGE A. MERRILL, b. ———.

Mr. Merrill was born in Plymouth, N. H., where he lived seventeen years; subsequently, for eight years, he was a clerk in a dry-goods jobbing-house in Boston, Mass., two years a merchant at Franklin, N. H. From 1849 to 1854, he was master of transportation, and from 1855 to 1860, he was Superintendent of the Connecticut and Passumpsic Rivers Railway Company. During this time he lived two years at Wells River, Vermont, and from that date, until within a few years, his residence was in St. Johnsbury, Vermont.

His has been an active life, and one of great usefulness. He was early called to fill most important official trusts under the State and National Governments. Among those he has held, were those of Aide-de-camp to the Governor of Vermont, 1852; Representative to the State Legislature, 1857 and '58; Secretary of Civil and Military affairs of Vermont, under Governor Fairbanks, 1860 and '61; Postmaster of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, and Collector of U. S. Internal Revenue for that district during the Presidency of Abraham Lincoln.

He was a member of the Board of Commissioners, appointed by the Governor, to settle the war claims of Vermont against the United States. And he was a member of the State Senate of Vermont 1869 and '70. He removed, some few years since, from St. Johnsbury to Rutland, Vermont.

vi GARDNER RUGGLES, b. Feb. 16, 1782; d. Aug. 5, 1853.

Mr. Ruggles was born in Hardwick, Mass., and removed from that town to Barre, Mass., (where all his children were born.) He was a successful farmer, a Justice of the Peace, and represented that town in the General Court of the State a number of years.

Politically he was a Democrat. In every relation of life he was active, influential and much respected, as well for his ability as for his integrity.

He was for many years a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and devoted much of his time, during his maturer years, to the duties and interests, and as a lecturer of that Order.

For military life, Mr. Ruggles possessed decided talents and marked enthusiasm, and for many years he commanded the Barre Artillery Company and a fine Battalion of Artillery to which it belonged. It was never his fortune, much to his disappointment, to be called into active service.*

He was a ready writer, but most of his writings have perished—some of the most important (which were in the keeping of his son, General Daniel R.,) having been destroyed in the sacking of Fredericksburg, Va., during the war of 1861-5.

His was a positive existence. Few men have possessed a more self-reliant, energetic and effective manhood; few have exercised a more beneficial influence on those in whose midst their fortunes have been cast.

He wrote his own epitaph, as follows:

“ With enough of life’s joy and sorrow,
Contented I die,
And wish for no stone on the morrow,
To tell where I lie.”

vii DANIEL RUGGLES, b. Jan. 31, 1810.

Daniel was born at Barre, Mass. He was the second son of Major Gardner Ruggles.

In March, 1829, on the nomination of Hon. John Davis, M. C., (of the Worcester, Mass., District) the President, John Quincy Adams, appointed young Ruggles a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy, at West Point, where he entered with his class in the following June. Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel S.

* The Governor of Massachusetts refused to send troops for the war against Great Britain, 1812-15, beyond the jurisdiction of the State; and this decision was sustained by the judges of the Supreme Court of the State. See Kent's Commentaries, v. i, and Massachusetts Reports, v. viii.

Thayer, a distinguished officer of Engineers, and virtual founder of the Military Academy, was then Superintendent; and Captain Ethan A. Hitchcock, (1st. Infantry) was the able instructor of tactics and commandant of the corps of cadets.

Cadet Ruggles passed through his arduous academic course with credit, and in June, 1833, graduated No. 34, in a class of 46 members; many of whom have since been the victims of disease, or fighting bravely have fallen on the battlefield; others have acquired scientific and literary fame, while, yet others have won ever-verdant laurels of military renown.

On the 1st. of July he was commissioned by General Andrew Jackson, then President, a Brevet Second Lieutenant of the 5th. regiment of infantry, U. S. Army. This regiment was then stationed on and near the great north-western lakes, and about the end of October, Lieutenant Ruggles reported to Brevet Brigadier-General George M. Brooke, its then distinguished commander, at Fort Howard, Green Bay, Michigan Territory, who assigned him to company "C," at Fort Winnebago. On temporary duty with a detachment of recruits commanded by Brevet Major Owen Ransom, he ascended the Fox river, and on the 11th. of November reported to Lieutenant-Colonel Enos Cutler, then commanding Fort Winnebago. During the night of the 13th.-14th., the memorable "star-shower" illuminated the heavens with its magnificent beauty. Fort Winnebago was in the midst of the Winnebago Nation, which was reputed as one of the most warlike on the north-western border. The warriors were tall, of strong physical development, and enterprising, and participated with Black Hawk's "Sacs and Foxes," in the then recent defeat by troops commanded by Brevet Brigadier-General H. Atkinson, at the battle of Badaxe, August 2, 1832.

In 1834, Lieutenant Ruggles proposed uniting the waters of the Mississippi and the lakes by a canal at the "portage" of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, and published an estimate and geological outline in the American Journal of Science. In 1835, he built, with troops, a substantial causeway across the portage—a deep morass—for the transit of heavy river boats. In 1837, he proposed, for the navigation of these rivers, light freight barges, or boats, towed by light draught steam-tow-boats.

This plan did not, as has been claimed, originate in Europe. In September, 1835, Lieutenant Ruggles obtained a leave of absence for the benefit of his health.

In November—then in New York—he received orders, in accordance with his wishes, to conduct a detachment of recruits to Florida, having in view to avail himself of the benefit of that genial winter climate. His first orders were for Tampa Bay to join Major Dade's command, then under orders for Fort King, Florida. From unexpected delays, his destination was changed to the St. John's river. On the 22d. of December, with fifty recruits he sailed on the schooner, "Davenport," Ensign Baker, Master, and after having been tossed by squalls, driven by storms, and wrapped by fogs off Cape Hatteras, some ten days, through the special interposition of Providence, he landed at Jacksonville, on the 8th. of January, 1836. The schooner was reported lost on her return voyage. Finding that the Seminole war had broken out, he armed his recruits, and on the 16th. marched ninety miles through the enemy's country to Camp Drane, and on the 19th. reported to Brevet Brigadier-General D. L. Clinch, commanding the troops in the field, who expressed surprise at Lieutenant Ruggles's unexpected arrival. On the 22d. of January. General Clinch received from the Governor of Florida, notice that Major Dade and his whole command had been massacred by the Seminole Indians, which fell like a thunderbolt from a clear sky.

On the 18th. of February, 1836, Brevet Second Lieutenant Ruggles was promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant, in the 5th. regiment of infantry, company "H," stationed at Fort Howard, Green Bay, and he reported for duty to General G. M. Brooke, commanding, on the 16th. of July, 1836. At Green Bay, Lieutenant Ruggles had a series of critical observations taken of the ebb and flow of the waters of the great northern lakes, and by reducing these into form as a diagram, determined a degree of regularity strongly sustaining the belief in the existence of regular tides. See American Journal of Science and Arts, 1843. In September and October, 1837, Lieutenant Ruggles conducted a large detachment of recruits down the Ohio and Mississippi to New Orleans and Fort Pike, and then had charge of the recruiting service at New Orleans, until the 1st. of June, 1838, when he rejoined his regiment, first at Fort Winnebago, and then at Fort Sulling, by promotion, as First Lieutenant, dated May 24, 1838, where he reported the last of September following. In December he was assigned to duty in charge of regimental recruiting service in St. Louis, and prosecuted it until December, 1839. From January until June, 1840, First Lieutenant Ruggles served as Assistant Adjutant General in Middle Florida, in the campaigns against the Seminole Indians, under the command of Brigadier-General Taylor. A thankless service of endurance and privation devoid of military honors.

On the 23d. of June, 1840, he rejoined his regiment at Fort Crawford, Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, and on the 30th. of July, was ordered as Assistant Inspector-General to muster and inspect the Iowa militia called out in 1839 to defend the southern border against invasion from Missouri. In April, 1841, he aided, with his company, in the concentration of the Winnebago Nation, at Lacrosse, and then in their removal west of the Mississippi river under treaty stipulations. In September, the 5th. regiment of infantry received orders for service in Florida, and on arriving at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., its destination was changed, on account of critical relations with Canada, to the Michigan border. At Detroit, First Lieutenant Ruggles sent to the "National Institute," of which he was a member, a plan of organization for the "Smithsonian Institute," which was published.

In May, 1844, First Lieutenant Ruggles was ordered to Copper Harbor, Lake Superior, where he aided in building Fort Wilkins, and was Assistant Commissary at that station. He discovered a mine of black oxide of copper near that station, the first conclusive evidence that the mines had not been destroyed by igneous action, and the metallic copper precipitated into the abyss below. He also located, for his brother and himself, under the rules for the mines, eighteen square miles on the north bank of the Portage Lake, on which the Secretary of War, Mr. Marcy, subsequently refused to grant leases. He was thus robbed of several of the most valuable mines on Lake Superior, which have been since sold for several "millions." He published, in the American Journal of Science and Arts, for May and June, 1845, a carefully drawn outline of the mine of black oxide of copper, in connection with a condensed view of the mining characteristics of that region.

In September, 1845, the 5th. regiment of infantry was concentrated at Detroit, and proceeded by water to Corpus Christi, and landed on the 11th. of October, 1845, and encamped with Gen. Taylor's army. The concentration of U. S. troops at Corpus Christi was an important incident pending the negotiation for the annexation of Texas. These troops were carefully instructed in tactics, military duties, and kept under rigid discipline, and about the 8th. of March commenced their march for the Rio Grande. On the 20th. of March, Brevet Brig. Gen. W. J. Worth led the advance in crossing the Colorado in the face of a Mexican force under General Canales, and his ponderous pronouncement. General Taylor's army reached a point opposite Matamoras on the 28th. of March, and built Fort Brown and garrisoned it; and on the 3d. of May, the enemy's batteries opened on it. On the 5th. of May the battle of "Palo Alto" was fought, 1st. Lieut. Ruggles in command of company "A," *also commanded the first front of the 5th. Infantry square, which received the charge of, and aided in the repulse of the Mexican Cavalry. He also participated, with his company, in the battle of "Resaca De La Palma," on the 9th. of May. At dawn on the 18th. he crossed the Rio Grande with the advance, which received the surrender of Matamoras.

On the 18th. of May, 1846, First Lieutenant Ruggles was promoted to the rank of Captain of Co. "A," 5th. regiment of infantry, and in December conducted a detachment of 250 recruits from New York to Saltello, where he arrived on the 1st. of January, 1847. On the 9th. of January, in command of company "E," † 5th. infantry, with the regiment as a part of Gen. Worth's division, he proceeded to the mouth of the Rio Grande, and embarked with his regiment on board the transport ship "Huron," about the middle of February, for the island of "Lobos."

Capt. Ruggles, with his Co. "E," landed with the first line at Vera Cruz, Mexico, near the island of Sacrificios, on the 9th. of March, 1847, and served with Worth's division through the siege until the surrender on the 26th., having been eighteen days and nights under the fire of the enemy's guns.* He marched with his regiment on Tlacotalpam, to obtain animals for the transportation to the interior. He proceeds with the advance from Jalapa to Perote, and thence to Puebla, participating in "the affair at Aurazogue," occupied the "Loretto Castle" at Puebla, and in bad health, on the 9th. of August marched for the valley of Mexico, and entered it with the advance division, passing from Chaleo to San Augustine under the scattering fire from the enemy's skirmishers. On the 18th. of August, Gen. Scott's army was concentrated near that village. Early on the morning of the 20th. the victory at Contreras was won; Worth's division having marched to make a diversion. Immediately Col. Clark's brigade, of Worth's division, the 5th. regiment of infantry leading, right in front, Captain Ruggles' company "A" (which had been reorganized with 100 recruits before marching from Puebla,) in advance, turned the enemy's fortified position at San Antonia, led by him in person, under a scattering fire from concealed skirmishers, and having gained a position on the flank of the enemy's retreating column, ordered the opening fire, and then led in person the charge on the enemy's column, cutting it in two and dispersing great numbers in the adjoining fields. Without delaying to secure prisoners, Captain Ruggles pursued the enemy in his retreat, captured one 18 pounder iron gun,—"El nata de los Yankees"—and a considerable amount of ammunition at the village of Cherubusco, and with companies "A" and "F," 5th. infantry, and the regimental colors, gained possession of the stone bridge and drew the first fire from the defences at Cherubusco; and then, in conjunction with the 6th. infantry, charged the enemy's works and participated in the final capture of these entrenchments.† President James K. Polk conferred on Captain Ruggles the rank of Major by Brevet, to rank from the 20th of August, 1847, "for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Contreras and Cherususco."

At the battle of "Molino del Rey," Captain Ruggles commanding Cos. "A" and "F" and the regimental band, (armed with muskets,) held position on the right of Clark's brigade (commanded by Brevet Col. McIntosh,) in close action at the "Casae Mata," a strong stone citadel with bastions and ditches, where McIntosh's brigade charged the enemy, who behind walls and parapets poured upon the charging column a continuous and deadly fire. Here one-half of the officers of the 5th. regiment, including Colonels McIntosh and Scott, fell, killed or wounded, and about one-third of the rank and file, and the survivors, repulsed and bleeding, unsupported, finally fell back, and while still under the enemy's fire, the 5th. regiment was rallied by Captain Ruggles,—on its colors—whose clothes were riddled and torn by the storm of shot, and who had received a contused wound on the right hip, from a random grape shot, early in the action. This battle disclosed judicial murder resulting from unskillful generalship.

On the 13th. of September, 1847, as a field officer and second in command of McKenzie's battalion of "stormers," Captain Ruggles was among the first to pass among the mines, which failed to explode, and to scale the walls of the castle of Chapultepec; and raised the U. S. flag over its summit, carried by Sergeant John Henry, 5th. infantry, by his orders. General Worth detailed this storming party of regular troops from his division. It stormed and captured the castle. General Pillow ostentaciously groaning under "a greivous wound," depreciated their services. Captain Ruggles, with the storming party, then participated in driving the enemy from the English cemetery, the small church, and the San Cosme Garito (gate), just at twilight, and at that point, directed, in person, two captured guns turned by prisoners taken near them, against the retreating enemy, and then took position in a house some five hundred yards within the city gates, where General Worth received the city authorities, about 11 o'clock P. M., and referred them to General Scott, then outside of the city walls, to negotiate the surrender of the city of Mexico. How General Scott could have falsified the history of that event, by assuming that General Quitman's division first entered the city by the "Belen Garita," on the morning of the 14th. of September, remains a mystery among military men. On the morning of the 14th., Captain Ruggles, with his surviving stormers, rejoined their regiment. His associate, Second Lieutenant J. P. Smith, Adjutant of the stormers, had fallen at his side, in the midst of the unexploded mines, near the castle walls, and five of the nine officers of the party, and many gallant men, had been either killed or wounded.

Worth's division awaited, at the Alameda, the arrival of Quitman's division from the garita Belen, and then marched toward the National Palace, driving the enemy's skirmishers before them. The 5th. regiment routed the skirmishers from the summit of the Convent of San Francisco, silenced a sharp fire from the surrounding houses in that section of the city, and were then stationed within the Convent walls.

Captain Ruggles was promoted by President Polk, to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, by brevet, in the U. S. Army, "for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Chapultepec on the 13th. day of September, 1847."

On one occasion at the regular division drill, after the troops arrived on the field in the vicinity of the city, the Assistant Adjutant General, reported to Captain Ruggles, as the senior officer on the ground, who assumed the command and drilled the division in the various evolutions of the line. During January and February, 1848, Captain Ruggles, in command of a strong battalion of troops, escorted an army train from Mexico to Vera Cruz, and, in returning, to the city of Mexico:

In January, 1849, Lieutenant-Colonel Ruggles assumed command at Fort Washita, Choctaw Nation, in the midst of the Chickasaw section.

On the 14th. of May, 1852, he arrived at Fort Belknap, and in 1853 served with his company as mounted infantry among the Indians of the Texan border. In September, 1853, he marched with his regiment to Fort McIntosh, on the Rio Grande, and participated in building an earth-work, and also in scouting after Indian and Mexican raiders.

In March, 1856, being in command of the troops at the station, he sends a courier to Monterey, Mexico, with a letter to Governor of Vedarurrie Neuvo Leon, asking his co-operation in restraining the Sippam Nation, and other Indians, and outlaws, and preventing them, while on Mexican soil, from committing further depredations on the settlements on the Texan border. The Governor complied immediately with this request, and directed his military commanders to remove these Indians, without delay, to the remote missions in the interior. These commanders seized the different bands of Sippams simultaneously; a small body of only about one hundred escaping across the Rio Grande into Texas, who were pursued by a squadron of mounted riflemen, vigorously, so that several were captured, and the remainder dispersed among the chaparral thickets along the head-waters of the Nueces river. The Mexican commanders employed the Kickapoo and Mescalero Indians, in conjunction with their troops, who killed most of the Sippam warriors. The Sippam Nation ceased to exist, and peace and safety reigned once again along the Rio Grande border, where for several years the settlers had been harrassed and driven from their ranches, many slain, their stock carried away or scattered, and their homes destroyed and desolated.

In January, 1858, Lieutenant-Colonel Ruggles was in command of Jefferson Barracks and superintendent of the recruiting service in the Mississippi valley, and in May proceeded with a detachment of recruits and joined his regiment in Utah. There he commanded detachments, and for several months the fifth regiment of infantry of Brigadier-General A. S. Johnston's Utah forces.

In 1861, Colonel Ruggles, finding war inevitable, adhered to the Constitution and advocated a call on all patriotic citizens of the respective States, and the army and navy, to unite in defending the flag. The call of President Lincoln, for seventy-five thousand State troops to coerce the Southern States, soon caused Virginia to make common cause with the Southern States. The issue was thus squarely made. Colonel Ruggles had, in 1859, established his fire-side at Fredericksburg, Virginia, and when that State withdrew from the Union, he gave in his adhesion and assumed citizenship, determined to defend the doctrines of government inherited from his ancestors. In the defense of these rights common to all the States, he promptly resigned his commission in the army of the United States, on the 18th. day of April, 1861.

On the 22d. of April, 1861, Colonel Ruggles was commissioned by the Governor and confirmed by the convention, a Brigadier-General of volunteers in the army of Virginia; and was the first officer commissioned by the State who resigned from the army of the United States. Governor Letcher assigned him to the command of the department of Fredericksburg with instructions to "do whatever is necessary to be done."

General Ruggles organized the volunteer forces throughout his department, and established batteries to defend the Potomac border, and on the 28th. and 29th. of May, and June 1st., 1861, defeated the Federal gun-boat fleet in its attack at Acquia Creek, and routed it disastrously, and caused him to turn his attention to Bull Run. By way of diversion, the Federal flotilla again made an attack and landed a force at Matthias Point, on the 27th. of June, and were again repulsed by newly enrolled troops under the direction of General Ruggles in person.

On the 9th of August, 1861, he was commissioned a Brigadier-General in the Army of the Confederate States, and ordered to Pensacola, where he joined, about the 25th. of August, and commanded the first brigade of the army of Brigadier-General Bragg, and disciplined it for the field. He participated in the organization of the attack on the Federal Colonel Wilson's Zouaves, under the walls of Fort Pickens, on Santa Rosa Island.

About the 18th of October, in compliance with orders from the C. S. War Department, General Ruggles reached New Orleans to report to General D. E. Twiggs, and was seized with illness from typhoid fever before his arrival, and remained extremely ill until the end of November, when he entered upon the duty of organizing and disciplining the volunteer forces of the State of Louisiana, established Camp Benjamin, and commanded the interior line of intrenchments for the defence of New Orleans. He organized a brigade comprising the 16th., 17th., 18th., 19th. and 20th. regiments of Louisiana Volunteers and Semmes' and Gibson's light batteries of field artillery, and disciplined and prepared them for the field.

Early in February, 1862, General A. S. Johnston called on the Governor of Louisiana for reinforcements to resist the enemy at Bowling Green, Ky., and on consultation, General Ruggles suggested the expediency of sending his brigade as a reinforcement, which was promptly directed by the then secretary of war, and on, or about, the 16th. of February, General Ruggles advanced with his brigade to Grand Junction, Miss., and having learned that General Johnston was retreating, and that Fort Donaldson had fallen, he recommended Corinth as a strategic point, on which to concentrate the Confederate defence against impending invasion, which was adopted. He organized the army as the troops rapidly concentrated at that point, employing the term "corps" instead of "grand division," and brought these under a rigid system of instruction and discipline. He caused his engineers to reconnoitre and sketch the district adjacent, embracing the Tennessee river from below Pittsburgh; and early in March sent a force—the 20th. Louisiana Volunteers and a light battery of guns, under Colonel A. Mouton—to Pittsburgh, to attack and impede the enemy's gun-boats, then ascending that river to commit aggressions; which service Colonel Mouton's force gallantly executed. Soon afterward he sent a strong force on the railway between Corinth and Jackson, mounting a light battery of field guns on freight cars, for the defence of that line of communication and resist the enemy then reported advancing on Purdy; but which proved only a reconnoitering party, and soon retired toward Pittsburgh landing. Soon after the completion of the organization, General A. S. Johnston assumed the command of the army, and General Ruggles was assigned to the command of "Ruggles' Division, 2d. Corps," which was a part of Major-General B. Bragg's command.

vanced at dawn of day, on the 6th. of April, 1862, and attacked the enemy's advanced positions. The conflict at Shiloh was one of the most memorable of the war, and among the great battles of the world.

At about 2 o'clock, p. m., on the 6th. of April, in the midst of the conflict, the available strength of the Federal army was apparently concentrated against the Confederate right, then directed by General Johnston, the commander-in-chief, in person.

The Confederates were then hotly pressed, and had lost ground. when the General led an impetuous charge, turned the tide of battle and repulsed the enemy. In this conflict General Johnston fell mortally wounded. Governor Harris, of Tennessee, who received the dying General in his arms when falling from his horse, notified General Ruggles immediately of this sad event.

The Confederate forces were soon again fiercely assailed by the enemy, who had recovered from the stunning blow which had just been dealt him, and apparently gained ground vigorously contested.

From a central point overlooking the Tennessee, General Ruggles had obtained an extended view of the battle field. The enemy had been swept from the left and center front, along the line of his greatest resistance, in a series of sharp conflicts in which the Confederate troops displayed undaunted bravery.

Impressed with the conviction that his troops then held an important strategic position, General Ruggles, aided by his staff, concentrated battery after battery from various parts of the field, where the conflict had ceased, (comprising more than fifty guns belonging to eleven batteries) which opened fire in rapid succession under his direction—poured a storm of shot and shell—enfiladed from the right the enemy's left wing, commanded by General Prentiss, which withered under this tremendous fire, silenced his batteries, and forced a precipitate retreat from that portion of the field. About 2,400 surrendered with General Prentiss, to Colonel Marshall J. Smith, at the head of the Crescent regiment of Ruggles' Louisiana Division. The prisoners were immediately dispatched to the rear under the General's orders.

The field was won. The Confederate troops were then concentrated on their colors along a grand crescent-line-of-battle, encircling the approaches to Pittsburgh.

Under the authority of General Bragg, the chief of staff, General Ruggles, then collected his division, somewhat separated, with promptitude across the main road, to strike the final blow.

The sun "stood still" an hour above the horizon.

At this crisis, Colonel Augustine asked General Ruggles for General Bragg, and stated privately that he was the bearer of orders from General Beauregard, then in chief command, to that General, to draw off the troops for the night; and asked for a staff officer to guide him, but as all were absent directing the concentration of troops, he accepted the services of an intelligent "courier," who had been with General Ruggles, when, a moment before, he had met General Bragg.

Under the then existing circumstances, General Ruggles felt constrained to believe that General Bragg would fail to appreciate the wisdom of such an order, and redoubled his efforts to advance. To his surprise, a brief moment afterward, the Confederate colors on his right and on his left were borne backward on that victorious field. The moment to strike the final blow was forever lost. Subsequently, it appeared, that orders had been sent simultaneously to the corps commanders to suspend the conflict. This movement, so precipitately made, forced Ruggles' Division to fall back, soon afterward, under a brisk fire from the enemy's gun-boats and some batteries then just planted upon the river's bank.

In the closing scenes of the battle on the 7th. of April, General Ruggles commanded the Confederate rear in withdrawing from the field, and after that movement of about a mile and half was accomplished, was succeeded by General Breckenridge's Reserves, who established his line of defence for the night, about two miles distant from the field of conflict.*

* In the report of General L. Polk, of the 4th. of February, 1863, of the services of his, the First Corps of the Confederate Army, at the battle of Shiloh on the 5th., 6th. and 7th. of April, 1862, he erroneously attributed to General Ruggles an error which he

On the 9th. of May, 1862, General Ruggles, in chief command, and with his division supported on the right by General Van Dorn's division, and on the left by the division of General Trapier, attacked the advance of General John Pope's Federal corps, at Farmington, Miss., defeated and routed it with disaster.

About the 20th. of May, under the malicious and vindictive action of Jefferson Davis, then provisional President, General Ruggles was assigned to the command of a special department, comprising Mississippi, Alabama; a part of Tennessee and east Louisiana, thus depriving him of his troops, organized by him and proved, by trial, irresistible on the battle-field. General Ruggles then declared himself as one of the proprietors of the Confederate cause, and that he should continue to fight for it wherever found. He directed the improvement of the defences of Vicksburg; organized troops and met the enemy's demonstration at assailable points. About the end of June he gave attention to the regulation of intercourse with the enemy under General B. F. Butler at New Orleans. Then he recommended that batteries should be established at Port Hudson to obstruct the ascent of the Federal gun-boats, and to maintain the unobstructed navigation of the Mississippi between that point and Vicksburg, as well as that of the Red river as a channel of communication between the East and the West. In the organization of partisan rangers, he came in conflict with himself committed, in the march on the 5th. of April, 1862, in the concentration of troops on the line of battle preparatory to the commencement on the following day.

The misrepresentation derived significance from the assumpti on that an unexpected delay in the march prevented the commencement of the action on the 5th., and thus precluded, for the want of time, a completed victory before night closed upon the conflict on the 6th., during which, General Johnston fell on the field. (See notices on concentration of the army of the Mississippi on the 5th. of April, 1862, preliminary to the battle of Shiloh, life of General A. S. Johnston, and exposition of the subject in the Southern Hist. papers for 1880, 1881, Richmond, Va.)

General Bragg, in his report of April 30th., 1862, says, that "as promptly as my troops could be brought up in a narrow road, much encumbered with artillery and baggage wagons, they were formed according to order of battle." See "Battles" pub. Confed. Doc., 1862, p. 196. General Bragg, at p. 200, also states that: "Brigadier-General D. Ruggles, commanding second division, was conspicuous throughout both days for the gallantry with which he led his troops."

The posthumous report, dated at Richmond, ten months after battle, in violation of a stringent military rule requiring that it should be submitted to the commanding general on the field, deprived General Polk's slanderous allegation of official or individual credence.

General Butler, who attempted to treat them as outlaws, and he induced him to abandon that policy.

In the movement against Baton Rouge, subsequently made by the orders of General Van Dorn, the ironclad ram, Arkansas, was sent, at the instance of General Ruggles, to cooperate in the attack. In the battle of Baton Rouge, on the 5th. of August, 1862, General Breckenridge commanded the forces, and General Ruggles commanded the second division, on whom the brunt of the battle fell, and who drove the enemy under the shelter of his gun-boats. Soon afterward an explosion of the "Ram Arkansas" was heard above the town; having become unmanageable through treason of an engineer. Thus treason modified the victory at Baton Rouge, and probably prevented the recapture of New Orleans. General Ruggles immediately established batteries at Port Hudson and checked the enemy's ascending gun-boats. General Van Dorn, having previously defeated the enemy at Vicksburg, concentrated his army in the field and marched against Corinth.

About the 1st. of September, General Ruggles succeeded General Van Dorn in the command of the department of Mississippi and Louisiana, with headquarters at Jackson, and directed the improvement at Vicksburg and Port Hudson, and was constantly occupied with important interests of an active administration. On his recommendation, the State of Mississippi enacted a law holding ten thousand slaves subject to the requisition of the President of the Confederacy for the various labors incident to the military administration. He also recommended to the Secretary of War, a similar employment of slaves, and by selection, their gradual incorporation in the armies for service in the field.

On the 11th. of September, 1862, General Ruggles transmitted to Adjutant General Cooper, an "outline plan of a proposed expedition for the recapture of New Orleans," and on the 30th. of September, he received in reply, under the instructions of the Secretary of War, and as was subsequently stated, by direction of the President, Jefferson Davis, a barefaced and insulting reprimand, in which it was declared that "Major-General Taylor has already been assigned by the President to the very responsible duties referred to therein."

This referred to Major-General Taylor, the brother-in-law of Mr. Davis, to whom he had assigned the command of the Trans-Mississippi Department. New Orleans was under General Ruggles' exclusive jurisdiction, and he was planning to recover that city, which through river-raft strategy and military incapacity Major-General Lovell had lost. In repelling the allegation, he replied, that "these plain facts ought to have protected him from the reproach conveyed in the Secretary's letter, and he now submits that his sense of justice should induce its prompt recall."

Soon afterwards, General Ruggles was relieved from the command of that department by the assignment of Lieutenant-General Pemberton, who was reputed to have been withdrawn from Charleston, on his declaration that it was indefensible; whose army, at Baker's Creek, Miss., was defeated in detachments; who surrendered Vicksburgh, as the enemy had predicted, on the 4th. of July (!), and who brought discredit and disaster upon the Confederate arms.

The Secretary of War stated to General Ruggles, subsequently, on his demanding in person a retraction of the offensive letter, that an ample apology had been sent him in Mississippi, though it was not received until subsequently.

About the 23d. of January, by assignment, he assumed command of the Eastern District of Mississippi, headquarters at Columbus, and defended its exposed northern border by organizing and disciplining volunteer and conscript troops. He might have enjoyed military exile, imposed by a vindictive Confederate Executive, but for the distant clash of resounding arms, as his fortunes were then cast in the midst of a refined and generous people. He protected the settlements and the Mobile and Ohio railroad against Colonel Grierson's noted raid, so far as it was made within his jurisdiction; and notably the Noxubee river bridge near Macon, by an improvised railroad field gun battery, dispatched in time to meet the crisis.

In the midst of alarms of constantly recurring enemy's raids, many of which had no substantial foundation, there were several which required prompt strategy to meet and repel them. "The battle of the Cane-brake," at Muddy Creek, ("Atch-chubby-pahah,") near the Tallahatchie river, on the 20th. of September, 1863, was not only among the most notable, but one of the most decisive. Colonel Phillips, with about two thousand cavalry, artillery and mounted infantry was there beaten and disastrously routed by about one thousand Confederate troops commanded by General Ruggles in person. This was one of two columns of invasion, and it having been routed, the other column recoiled without risking an action.

In 1864, at Macon, Georgia, General Ruggles co-operated with General Cobb in the capture of General Iverson, and his raiding Federal force; and at Augusta, Georgia, he served as Inspector-General with General Bragg, in defending it against General Sherman's raiding march.

On the 25th. of March, 1865, General John C. Breckenridge, the Secretary of War, assigned General Ruggles as Commissary-General of prisoners of war, entitling him, under the then existing laws, to rank as Major-General in the Confederate army. He entered upon the important duties of this office with great reluctance on account of its generally reputed maladministration, and immediately instituted the most liberal interpretation of the customs of war, and inaugurated a thorough reorganization of the military department, and designated Augusta, Georgia, a central point, as his headquarters. On account of ill health he was detained at Richmond, until abandoned, on the night of the 2d. of April, by the President and other public functionaries. At Charlotte, N. C., he witnessed the dispersion of President Jefferson Davis and most of his cabinet, which proved virtually the dissolution of the government of the Confederacy; and it is a veritable fact that each and all had the sagacity to escape pursuit with the exception of the Executive.

On arriving at Augusta, in the midst of embarrassment, he learned that the convention between Generals Johnston and Sherman had provisionally terminated the war, and then accompanied by his staff officers accepted the prescribed terms. General Ruggles then returned by sea to his home at Fredericksburg, Virginia, a home desolated by war.

viii EDWARD S. RUGGLES, b. July 10, 1843.

He was born at Detroit, Michigan; was raised in the army; studied at Georgetown College, D. C., and at Hollowell's, Alexandria, Va.

He was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, in 1858, and resigned from the U. S. Navy March 12, 1861, to enter the Southern service.

He went to Montgomery, Alabama, in March, 1861, with a recommendation for appointment in the Confederate service, and was selected by President Davis for special service, and ordered to proceed with dispatches to General Albert Sidney Johnston, at Los Angeles, California. On his return, by way of New York city, he was arrested as a spy, by detectives, on a state warrant from Secretary of State, William H. Seward, and was turned over to the military authorities, and sent first to Governor's Island, and from there to Fort Lafayette. He was the first prisoner in Fort Lafayette. In May, 1862, he was sent South and exchanged. Soon afterward he was appointed Assistant Commissary, with the rank of Major, and ordered to New Orleans, where he was placed on the staff of his father, General Daniel Ruggles, and with the army corps, which General Ruggles commanded, he was engaged in the battle of Shiloh, April 6, 1862, where he was wounded. He was engaged in the battle of Baton Rouge. Subsequently, he was a commissioned officer in the Confederate Navy, and in command of the steamer Morgan at Mobile. This position he resigned, and was detailed to the signal service, when on this service, near Bayou Sara, Louisiana, he was captured by the U. S. troops and sent to Fort Warren, where he was held as a prisoner until the close of the war.

Since the war, Major Ruggles has been engaged in farming in King George county, Virginia.

viii MORTIMORE B. RUGGLES, b. Dec. 1, 1844.

He was born in the U. S. Army, at Fort Wilkins, Copper harbor, Lake Superior. He was raised from infancy by a maiden aunt, Miss George A. S. Hooe, in King George county, Virginia, and instructed by private tutors until the age of 15 years, when he was appointed a cadet at the U. S. Naval Academy. At the commencement of the war, however, he entered the Confederate navy as an acting midshipman, and, in June, 1861, he was appointed by Captain Lynch, C. S. Navy, as his Aide-de-camp, while serving on the Potomac border.

In October, 1861, he was appointed an Aide-de-camp with the rank of First Lieutenant of cavalry, on the staff of his father, General Daniel Ruggles, when commanding the interior lines of Confederate defence at New Orleans, and organizing the volunteer troops of Louisiana. He served in that capacity in the battles of Shiloh, Farmington, Baton Rouge, Muddy Creek, and until the close of the war, with the exception of a brief period, when he served as a midshipman, at Mobile Bay, under Admiral Buchanan.

He has recently, for some years, been engaged in business in New York city.

vi MOSES PAIGE, b. Feb. 6, 1800; d. Mar. 6, 1872.

Mr. Paige was born in Hardwick, Mass. He was engaged a number of years in teaching schools in the State of New York, and for a time was a trader at Troy, N. Y. In 1844 he permanently located at Bennington, Vermont, where he has served his townsmen as Overseer of the Poor, Town Agent and Selectman. His calling has been that of a farmer.

In 1861, Mr. Paige wrote the compiler of these records:

"I have not been sick a day since my remembrance. The first money I made was chopping wood at $8 per month. I never bought a bill of goods on credit. I never borrowed a dollar to buy goods with. I never paid a cent of interest. I never paid a lawyer a dollar for advice. I have been successful in all my undertakings. I have never been out of money since my first earnings; never seen the time that I could not give a person in need a quarter, or food and lodging for the night."

vi ANSON RUGGLES, b. Dec. 17, 1793; d. Nov. 5, 1881.

Mr. Ruggles was a farmer, Hardwick, Mass. The fiftieth anniversary of his marriage was described as follows by a friend:

"It was an exceedingly pleasant and interesting occasion; the company embracing nearly two hundred persons—sembled from far and near—of various ages, from the gray-headed old gentleman of eighty winters down to the smiling grand-child just beginning to walk, and over whose head only one summer had passed; and all, both old and young, entering with a hearty good zest into the enjoyments of the occasion. It is a remarkable fact that two brothers and one sister in this family have already lived an average of over fifty years each in an uninterrupted marriage state. These three couples all reside in Hardwick, their native town. In this connection we may add that Daniel Ruggles, father of Anson, lived with his wife fifty-nine years, and Constant, brother of Daniel, some fifty-three years of uninterrupted married life! The family are remarkable for their generous hospitality and fondness for social intercourse with their friends, and no doubt their indulgence of this propensity has had much to do with keeping alive and in active operation with them those social qualities which are the best safeguards against the approach of the infirmities of age. In the early part of the evening, while the convivialities of the occasion were at their height, they were suddenly, and very agreeably, interrupted by the stirring strains of music in front of the house, from the Barre Cornet Band, who had voluntarily come over to pay their respects to the host and hostess of the occasion. They performed several fine airs in a manner which reflected great credit upon the musicians, and drew from the party many complimentary remarks. After a very appropriate and fervent prayer by Rev. Mr. Sawyer, and remarks by other gentlemen, at a reasonable hour the company separated, with the expression of many kind wishes for the long life and future happiness of their respected friends, whose golden anniversary they had met to commemorate."

vii WILLIAM MIXTER, b. Apr. 5, 1809.

The following is taken from Paige's History of Hardwick:

"William entered Harvard College in the famous class of 1829, but, by the failure of his health, was prevented from completing the prescribed course; he received the customary degree, however, from his Alma Mater in 1876, and his name was assigned to its proper place in his class. He was a merchant for several years, in the store formerly occupied by his father, from which he retired with a plentiful estate. He purchased a residence in Beacon street, Boston, where he spends his winters, but retains his homestead and his legal residence in Hardwick. He was a member of the School Committee, 1831 and 1832; Selectman, 1841 to 1843; Town Clerk, 1849 to 1857; Town Treasurer, 1846 to 1862, except in 1850; Representative to the General Court, 1854, 1856, 1858; and State Senator, 1857. He has been a Justice of the Peace since 1845; and in 1866 was appointed to the office of Harbor Commissioner."

vi FRANKLIN RUGGLES, b. Mar. 21, 1786; d. Aug. 16, 1865.

Franklin Ruggles was a farmer, Hardwick, Mass. He was often called to serve the town in its various offices, and represented it in the General Court of the State.

On the occasion of his death, the "Boston Post" said:

"In the death of Mr. Franklin Ruggles, of Hardwick, the community has lost one of its most intelligent and upright citizens. As a member of the State Legislature he was highly respected for his wisdom and correct action, and in all the various offices he was called upon to sustain during a long life, he acquitted himself in a manner that commanded the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. He was a close observer of passing history; as a true patriot and devoted friend of his country, he was diligent in the acquisition of knowledge, and in a thorough understanding of the great events of his day; this always rendered his judgment valuable and worthy of deference. His memory will be cherished with respect by all who knew his worth."

vii HENRY RUGGLES, b. July 12, 1829.

His father, Franklin Ruggles, was a New England farmer, who brought up his boys to work in the field, though, like those of his class who have "leavened the lump" from the

The sketch of Hon. Henry Ruggles was furnished us for publication by Hon. W. T. Adams of Boston, better known as "Oliver Optic," who, for many years has been a personal friend of Mr. Ruggles, and many years ago made the tour of Spain in his company.

Atlantic to the Pacific, he had a proper appreciation of the value of an education. Henry was the youngest son, and like most farmers' sons, worked on the farm in the summer, and went to the village school in the winter. Early in his childhood, and during his school course, he developed a taste for reading, and a strong inclination for study. When it appeared that the boy desired to obtain a thorough education, his father sent him away from home to attend school.

Before town high schools became as general as they are to-day, the incorporated academy, fostered by the state, was an important agency in the education of young men and women who desired to advance beyond the sphere of the common school. Before he had reached the age of seventeen, young Ruggles had made a good record as a scholar at the academies in Southbridge and New Salem, Mass., and at Chester, Vermont. At the latter he fitted for college, but impaired health compelled him to abandon his cherished purpose to devote the next four years to the higher branches of learning, though he has never ceased to be a student.

Instead of going from Chester to the university, as he intended, his physical condition obliged him to seek a more active life in business pursuits, and for two years he served as a clerk in Providence, R. I., learning the detail of trade and laying the foundation of a successful commercial career. In 1848, he established himself in business in Norwich, Conn., where his sound judgment, well-trained mind, and close and careful attention to his own affairs, realized their legitimate results. After a successful business career of twenty years in Norwich, he retired with a competency.

Having laid down the cares of business, and being in condition to gratify his artistic and literary taste, as well as to realize the benefits of foreign travel, in 1868 he went abroad, spending several months in making the usual round of the American tourist.

In April, 1870, President Grant appointed him United States consul at Barcelona, Spain, one of the best consulates in Europe. In June, following, he proceeded to his new field of labor, taking his family with him. He settled down in his new home, prepared to represent his country faithfully, while he improved his opportunity to study the history and literature, as well as the commercial character and resources of an interesting country and people. He acquired the Spanish language and became familiar with the manners and customs of the country. He remained in Barcelona nearly five years, and discharged the duties of his office to the entire satisfaction of the United States and the Spanish governments.

On sending his resignation to the President through the Legation at Madrid, General Sickles, who was then Minister to Spain, forwarded the following dispatch to the State Department, bearing evidence of his faithful services while in charge of the consulate.

UNITED STATES LEGATION IN SPAIN, }
MADRID. }

“SIR:—I have the honor to forward, herewith enclosed, a dispatch dated 20th inst., addressed to the President by Hon. Henry Ruggles, who therein tenders his resignation of the office of United States Consul at Barcelona. It is to be regretted that the consular service thus loses an accomplished officer, to whose ability and fidelity during the time he has filled his present post, I take much pleasure in bearing witness.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

Your most obedient servant,

D. E. SICKLES,

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.

Secretary of State, Washington.

During his term of service, Spain was “making history” quite as rapidly as in the days of Charles VI and Philip II. Mr. Ruggles heard the peals of artillery that announced the election of Amadeus as king of Spain, and saw him, after his resignation, sail for his home in sunny Italy. He witnessed the arrival of Alfonso the present king, at Barcelona. During his residence in Spain, the country was frequently disturbed by civil discords, Carlist wars, and by incipient revolutions fomented by the various factions, each struggling to grasp the reins of government. Within the space of two years of his official term, he saw the government changed from a monarchy to a republic—the latter having four presidents in this brief period—and finally go back to a monarchy again.

While holding his official position, Mr. Ruggles traveled quite extensively in Spain, visiting all the principal points of interest, extending his tour at one time to Gibraltar, and from there visiting Morocco, in Africa.

Though in office "few die and none resign," the latter was Mr. Ruggles' method of retiring from the position he had held with honor to his country and himself. He returned to his native land, and again resided in Norwich. But in 1878, President Hayes appointed him United States Consul at Malta, in the Mediterranean. He held this position for four years, and then resigned it.

With his wife and daughter, he then went to Germany, residing for a considerable length of time each in Stuttgart, Dresden and Heidelberg, in order to afford Miss Ruggles the opportunity to study art and the German language. Even as a boy, Mr. Ruggles developed a taste and talent for composition, which he cultivated by writing for the press. Before he was seventeen he became a regular contributor to several New York and Boston papers, and afterward to two or three magazines. During his residence abroad, he was the foreign correspondent of several American papers, among which were the "Springfield Republican" and the "Boston Herald."

Mr. Ruggles' letters from Germany to the "Republican" were exceedingly popular with the people, and were extensively copied by the press throughout this country and in Europe. Messrs. Lee & Shepard, of Boston, have just published a book written by him, entitled "Germany Seen Without Spectacles," which was largely compiled from the author's letters to the press from Germany.

In person, Mr. Ruggles is of full height, and a little inclined to grow stout as his locks grow grey with increasing years. He is what all would call a very pleasant and agreeable gentleman. At present he resides in Norwich, Conn.

vi STEPHEN W. PAIGE, b. May 3, 1785; d. Feb. 24, 1871.

Mr. Paige was an inn-keeper for a few years at Hardwick, Princeton, Shutesbury and Greenwich, Mass., but for much the larger part of his life he pursued the quiet vocation of a farmer in Hardwick. He was a Representative to the General Court of the State, 1843 and '44, and was commissioned a Justice of the Peace, 1843. In early manhood he commanded a company of cavalry.

The fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Paige was celebrated at their residence. Rev. Mr. Whittemore, of Cambridge, being present, "was requested to offer such remarks as he deemed appropriate, and invoke the Divine blessing." He said: "That he felt that thankfulness to God must fill the hearts of the happy couple, and therefore considered it unnecessary and unwise even to go through the ceremony of marriage, for the parties did not meet to be married again. Fifty years ago that night they had entered into the indissoluble bonds of the marriage covenant, yet an occasion so rare should be suitably noticed. The hand of a kind parent had led the aged pair through all these years, been the source of their joys and their strength in the hours of sorrow. After alluding to the uncertainty of any that were present, personally experiencing a like occasion, he fervently invoked the blessing of God to rest upon the aged couple."

vii GINERY TWICHELL, b. Aug. 26, 1811; d. July 23, 1883.

Mr. Twichell had a career of great usefulness and activity, and more than common distinction. We gather the following facts of his life from the "Biographical Records of Congress," the "Boston Evening Transcript," and private sources.

Mr. Twichell was born in Massachusetts. His educational advantages must have been very limited, for he began active life when a lad.

His first occupation was the carrying of mails and transportation of passengers by stage, between Worcester, Fitchburg and Greenfield, Mass., and Brattleborough, Vt. He established the earliest stage line between Boston and Brattleborough, and seems to have been one of the most energetic and successful men in his part of the country engaged in the important business of ministering to the welfare of the traveling public. He made important mail contracts with the government, and, in these contracts was, at one time, connected with Hon. Chester W. Chapin.

Mr. Twichell and his express were celebrated in the days of anti-Jackson agitation. Those were the days before railroads and telegraphs, when the lumbering coaches were the only dependence of the traveler, and brought to the rural multitudes the only intelligence from the outside world. In 1840, following the close of the bitter contest between Van Buren and Harrison for the Presidency, Mr. Twichell signaled himself by a novel enterprise. He established horse expresses to bring election returns from various points in Massachusetts to Boston. For the promptitude with which the returns were received, as well as the news of the result spread throughout the State, great praise and thanks were given to Mr. Twichell.

Mr. Twichell followed the path of civilization. Very soon after the first application of steam to locomotion, he left the staging and mail-carrying business and went into the new and more active field. In 1847, on the completion of the Boston and Worcester railroad, he accepted a position as station agent at Worcester, and from this time on his life was a most energetic and prominent one, devoted entirely to the railroading business.

The high intelligence and great enterprise of Mr. Twichell made his services so valuable to the company that, one year after the opening of the road, he was promoted to be Assistant Superintendent. Two years after this (1850) he became, upon the resignation of William Parker, Superintendent, and finally, in the course of two or three years more, he was elected President, which position he held through life.

Mr. Twichell's administration of the Boston and Worcester road was characterized by a very high order of business ability, as evidenced by the partiality shown toward it by the traveling public and its most excellent financial condition. During his presidency the road was consolidated with the Western Railroad—the result of a controversy, memorable in the railroad history of Massachusetts, with reference to pro-rating of freights.

Mr. Twichell's public career was brief, but highly honorable. By the unanimous wish of the Republicans of the Massachusetts Third Congregational District, he, in 1866, accepted the nomination for Congress. He was returned by a very large majority, and was twice re-elected, thus serving terms in the Fortieth, Forty-first and Forty-second Congress. Mr. Twichell's six years in Congress were characterized by prudence and entire devotion to the interests with which he was entrusted as a representative of the people and as a servant of the government. He served, during his first term, on the committees of National Affairs, and Expenditures in the Interior Department, and during his second and third terms, on various other committees more or less important.

At the close of his public life, Mr. Twichell returned to railroading and business, though he was now rapidly declining in years. Upon the solicitation of a number of Boston capitalists and merchants, he consented to become a party to the establishment of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad; he was elected President of the company, and under his energetic management, 360 miles were completed in the space of nine months—an unprecedented achievement. Mr. Twichell soon, however, resigned the presidency of the road, and lived the last years of his life in retirement.

The character of Mr. Twichell was marked by positive traits. His activity was without limit; his judgment and prudence were at the same time sound, or he could not have been a successful railroad superintendent and president, and the discreet Congressman. His name and life have a highly honorable place in the annals of Massachusetts. He lived in Brookline, near Boston. His death was from typhoid fever.

vi JOHN BISBEE, b. May 12, 1794; d. Mar. 8, 1829.

The following is taken from "Ammedown's Historical Collections:"

"Mr. Bisbee was a graduate of Brown University. His father intended him for a Calvinist minister, but while in college he heard Rev. Richard Corrigue preach Universalism, which called his attention to the merits of that doctrine. He abandoned for a time the idea of being a minister of the Gospel, and commenced the study of the law at Taunton, in the office of Hon. Marcus Morton. But this profession was not adapted to his taste and inclination. He abandoned the law and gave his attention to theology. His studies in this direction were mostly without a teacher; he was an apt scholar, and soon became learned in the Scriptures.

"He joined the Universalist denomination at their general convention held at Claremont, N. H., in the year 1818, and received ordination and license to preach according to that order.

"His first sermon was preached at Dana, and the next at Hardwick. He then preached for the Universalists at Western (now Warren), and at Brookfield, in the parish of Podunk. At both places he gained many hearers, and soon created such an interest with the people in his behalf and the cause of Universalism, that a meeting-house was erected for him at each of those places. These houses were dedicated to the worship of God, and he ordained as pastor over the two societies, on Nov. 14, 1821.

"During this period he established a high school at Podunk, which soon became of high repute.

"In 1824, he became pastor of the Universalist Society at Hartford, Conn., where he remained until 1827, when he accepted a pastoral charge in Portland, Me., and in this place he continued until his death.

"His advance as a preacher, and the brilliancy of his powers of elocution, caused his death to be greatly lamented throughout this denomination, and felt that a great hope had been disappointed.

"He was remarkable for the purity and beauty of his diction, and so familiar was he with the meaning of words, and so choice in their use, that a critic once said of him:— That he never used a word when there was a better one in the English language to express his meaning.' "

vi MRS. MERCY (RUGGLES) (BISBEE) JACKSON, b. Sept. 17, 1802; d. Dec. 13, 1877.

Mercy Ruggles, daughter of Constant and Sarah Ruggles, was born in Hardwick, Mass.

Her father was a farmer, a man of more than ordinary education as compared with his townspeople. He was well known as a man of good judgment, clear and logical in argument, and as he was one of the early converts to Universalism, he was also known as a controversialist of more than common ability.

He was remarkable for his temperance principles in the days when that subject had scarcely begun to excite attention. He never drank any kind of spirituous liquor, nor even tea or coffee, and often spoke of his power of endurance of cold or fatigue as a proof that people were much better off without stimulants. He was widely known for his skill in judging of people's character by their faces, and was often appealed to by his townsmen for his opinion of strangers.

Her mother was a religious woman, and early united herself with an orthodox church, and was an active christian; but after her marriage to Constant Ruggles, she was led by him to read and study the Universalist doctrines, and became an ardent believer in the final salvation of all men. She was a devoted christian woman, ready on all occasions to lend her help in sickness in the neighborhood where she lived, a tender, judicious nurse, a cheerful helper and comforter in sorrow, and a most industrious wife and mother, laboring early and late for the comfort of her family, giving much to others, and requiring little for herself. She lived to the great age of eighty-six years and six months beloved by all who knew her, and in full possession of all her faculties except that of hearing, which had been somewhat impaired for many years. She was sick only twenty-two hours, thus receiving a complete fulfillment of her most earnest desire, that she might not outlive her usefulness.

Born of such parents, it was not strange that their daughter should early have received a sincere faith in the Divine goodness and wisdom, and that this faith should have given direction to all the labors and aspirations of her youth, and have been the comfort and support of her age.

From childhood she had a great love for books, and eagerly improved all the opportunities for acquiring knowledge within her reach.

She was a zealous scholar at the public school in her neighborhood, also receiving valuable help from her father. Subsequently a private teacher was employed in the family, whose instruction she made the most of, and later she was sent to a private school kept by the Rev. John Bisbee, whom she afterward married. This school was of great service to her, the instruction being far better than any before enjoyed, and stimulating her to greater acquirements than any yet made.

In 1819 she taught a public school in Plainfield, Mass., and in 1820, in Greenwich, Mass., and during that year became engaged to the Rev. John Bisbee, a promising young minister of the Universalist faith. They were married on the ninth of June, 1823. Mr. Bisbee was a fine scholar, a terse and beautiful writer, an eloquent preacher and a devout Christian; and talents like his were not to remain in the obscurity of a country village.

In 1824 he was invited to become pastor of the First Universalist Society of Hartford, Conn. He accepted the invitation and remained there for three years, when he received calls from three societies, one in New York, one in Philadelphia, and the third in Portland, Me.

He accepted the last, and removed with his family, consisting of wife and one child, in July, 1827. He remained in Portland until his death, which occurred in Mar., 1829.

Thus suddenly bereft of the loved companion of her youth, with two little girls, the youngest only nine months old, looking to her for support; the income of the family cut off, far away from her family friends, with only $1,600 left, the stern realities of life for the first time presented themselves before her, and the necessity became urgent for some plans by which support for herself and her children could be provided. Her father wrote, that if she would go home, he would do what he could for her; but she knew his means were limited and that such an addition to his family would be burdensome, and the thought of dependence on him was not to be cherished while she had health and strength.

She wrote to her father that his offer was gratefully received, and if sickness should overtake her, she would gladly accept it; but that, while a good Providence continued her health and faculties, she would earn her own and her children's living without depending on any one. She had had some experience in teaching before her marriage, and a school for young ladies presented itself to her mind as the best method for her to adopt to earn her living.

She immediately set about finding a less expensive house than the one she occupied, and yet one which should be large enough to accommodate her school. The city must be canvassed to secure pupils, her sister engaged to take charge of the children while their mother was in school, and all these arrangements were completed, and the school opened two months after her husband's death, on the first Monday in May, 1829. The duties of the school, the care of the family, the making of their clothes, the work of the household, (except the washing), was all done by the two sisters.

The school prospered, and was carried on for two or three years, when Mrs. Bisbee found her health failing under her constant and great labors, and a change of occupation seemed imperative. She, therefore, after much deliberation, decided to engage in the millinery and fancy goods business. A store was rented, a stock of goods purchased, and the business begun some time in 1832. It promised well, but was brought to a sudden termination by her marriage on April 8, 1833, to Capt. Daniel Jackson, of Plymouth, Mass. Mrs. Bisbee was, at this time, in her thirty-first year with one child, the youngest having died about a year before. Capt. Jackson was fifteen years her senior, a widower with six children, the youngest of whom was a year older than her remaining child. During her second marriage she bore eight children, having at one time twin daughters, at another twin sons.

During the years of her life with her second husband, it is easy to see that her labors must have been great. Mr. Jackson's eldest daughter was married soon after her father's marriage, but there was always a large family at home, and the management of table, wardrobe and house, at the same time that the duties of maternity were occupying so much of her time and strength, made her labors arduous for many years.

She, however, gave herself to them with zeal, and was known among all her friends as a notable housekeeper and as a woman having uncommon skill in all branches of woman's work. In 1840 she first heard of the Homœopathic system of medicine, and finding that it answered what seemed to her the necessary requirements for a perfect system of medicine, she became greatly interested in it, and procured books and remedies, and began to treat her own family and friends and neighbors. She gave both medicines and services for three years, and at that time her patients came from all the adjoining towns, within a distance of fifteen miles, and often numbered as many as fifty. She then felt obliged either to give up practice or charge a fee for her services. She was so deeply interested in her practice that she could not think of giving it up, and so began to charge the same prices as the other physicians in the town.

She continued practicing in this way for eighteen years, greatly desiring a regular medical education, but no opportunity presented itself for her to acquire one. In the fall of 1858, her husband having died several years before, (in 1852) and her children having all married or gone into business, except the two younger ones, who were fourteen and seventeen years, respectively; she closed her house for two winters, boarded the children in Plymouth and went to Boston to pursue her medical studies in the New England Female Medical College. She was at this time 56 years of age. She spent two winters at the college, (the length of course then required) returning to her home each spring. In 1861, she graduated and removed to Boston.

Her practice there soon became large and remunerative. She continued in practice there for seventeen years, winning hosts of friends who regarded her with the greatest esteem and confidence, both as a woman and as a physician. She gave up her practice only six months before her death, which occurred December 13, 1877. She had thus practiced thirty-seven years, twenty in Plymouth and seventeen in Boston. For four years previous to her death, she had been professor of diseases of children in the school of medicine of The Boston University. She was the first woman admitted to membership in the American Institute of Homœopathy. Her admission took place at a meeting held in June, 1871, after having made unsuccessful applications for seven consecutive years! The Massachusetts Homœopathic Society admitted her to membership in 1873, and the Boston Society of Homœopaths in the same year.

She was greatly interested in all the reformatory movements of the day, and drew up a constitution for a temperance society and circulated a pledge, the first which was ever offered for signatures in the city of Portland, in 1827. She was deeply interested in the effort to procure suffrage for women, and frequently wrote in favor of it, and several times addressed large audiences on the subject.

The seventy-five years of her life were filled with as much earnest, useful work for her fellow creatures as it often falls to the lot of any one to accomplish.

vi PHILANDER CHASE, b. Dec. 14, 1775; d. Sept. 20, 1852.
The following is taken from "Appleton's Encyclopedia:"

"Mr. Chase was born in Cornish, N. H. His parents were plain, pious farming people, and young Chase expected to follow in the footsteps of his father, but the course of events seemed plainly to indicate that a different life was before him. A severe injury to one of his limbs confined him for a long time to the house, and after much reflection upon his position and prospects, he resolved to prepare himself for college and the ministry of the Gospel. He entered Dartmouth College in 1791, and graduated in 1795. His religious views had been those of his family, who were Congregationalists; but having met with a prayer-book of the Episcopal Church, he examined and studied it with great care, and was led to the conviction that he ought to enter the ministry of that church. Leaving his home in New Hampshire, he set out for Albany; was kindly received by the Episcopal minister there, and after a course of study on theology, he was ordained in St. George's Church, New York, in May, 1798. For several years he devoted himself, amid many privations, to missionary labor in western New York. In 1805, on account of his wife's health, he went to New Orleans, and occupied himself zealously in organizing the church there; in 1811, he returned to the North, and for six years was Rector of Christ Church, Hartford, Conn. Deeply interested in the religious condition and prospects of the great West, and full of missionary zeal and enterprise, Mr. Chase, in 1817, went to Ohio, and set about planting and enlarging the Episcopal Church in that state. A diocese having been formed, he was elected its Bishop, and was consecrated at St. John's church, Philadelphia, Feb. 11, 1819. Amid many and peculiarly severe trials, Bishop Chase persevered in his work, but it soon became evident that measures must be taken to educate men on the ground for the service of the ministry. Accordingly, with the approbation of his convention, although opposed by many of his own church in the older states, he resolved to visit England and solicit donations toward founding a college and theological seminary in Ohio. He embarked in October, 1823; at first met with opposition, which he soon overcame; was unusually successful; collected about $30,000 for his object, and on his return, in 1824, purchased 8,000 acres of land, giving the names of the two English noblemen, Gambier and Kenyon, to the site and the college, which was now established. For a time everything went on prosperously, but difficulties and disputes having arisen between the Bishop and some of his clergy about the disposal of the funds received from England, and other matters connected with his administration of the college and the diocese, he resigned his jurisdiction in 1831, and the general convention the next year gave their assent to this step. Bishop Chase now removed into Michigan, still intent upon the life of a missionary pioneer Bishop. In 1835, he was chosen Bishop of the new diocese of Illinois. Again he visited England in behalf of Christian education in the West, and collected about $10,000 toward purchasing land and founding a college. Jubilee College, at Robin's Nest, Peoria county, owes its foundation, in 1838, to this second effort, and here the venerable prelate spent the remainder of his life. The first commencement of the college took place in July, 1847, and its subsequent career has evinced the perspicacity of Bishop Chase in providing for the future needs of the Episcopal Church in the West. A severe injury, caused by being thrown from his carriage, hastened the aged Bishop's decease, and a few days after he sank quietly to rest. Keenly sagacious in reading character, quick to avail himself of opportunities, full of zeal and determination, unwearied in laboring for the cause of religion and the interests of the Episcopal Church. Bishop Chase left his impress upon the western country, and deserves honorable mention as the pioneer Bishop. His "Reminiscences," 2 vols. 8 vo., display his character in various lights; and apart from their historic value, these volumes are among the most entertaining productions of the present day."

vi NATHANIEL EVANS, b. Jan. 17, 1773; d. June 26, 1825.

Mr. Evans was a merchant and farmer, Middlebury, Vermont. When in the seventh year of his age, Nathaniel Evans was taken prisoner by the Indians, at the time of the burning of Royalton, Vermont. Among the children taken and carried off, was one belonging to the family of a Mrs. Handy, who followed up the Indians to their camp, and inquired for their chief. She earnestly begged the life of her child; also, for the other children. She asked what they intended to do with the children, and was told in reply: "We intend to amuse ourselves with them for a while and then scalp them." Mrs. Handy continued to urgently plead for the children, until finally she succeeded in obtaining their release, and then proceeded to return with nine of these young children who had been taken by the Indians. Nathaniel Evans was one of the number. Mrs. Handy and the children had to walk several miles before she could find a place to ford the river. She forded White river five times, carrying the children across on her back.

Mr. Evans was employed, for a time, as a clerk by his uncle, Cyrus P. Fay, at Columbus, Ohio. Subsequently, he left with intimate acquaintances, who were resolved upon trying their fortunes in Texas. Shortly after arrival in this "favored land," Evans joined a company of twenty other persons, at San Antonio, who went out as a trading party among the Indians, and set out for Santa Fe, New Mexico, in 1838, sanguine of success. Soon after reaching the Comanche country, the party were plundered of their entire effects and all were supposed to have been massacred by the Indians. Not one of those who left San Antonio, on this expedition, ever returned or has since been heard from.

"Marcus Tullius Cicero Wing graduated at Middlebury College, in Vermont, in the class of 1820; studied divinity at Alexandria, Virginia, in the class of 1826; was ordained a deacon and a priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church by Bishop Chase, and went at once to Worthington, Franklin county, Ohio, where the Bishop was then establishing a Theological Seminary in connection with the diocese of Ohio. In 1828, when pupils in elementary studies had increased, an act of the Legislature was obtained by which the president and professors were constituted the faculty of a college under the name of Kenyon College, and the institution thus modified and enlarged, was transferred from Worthington to Gambier, Knox county, Ohio, but remained in the same ecclesiastical connection. To the interests of this institution he devoted himself with all his heart.

Bishop McIlvane said of him, that 'To him, more than to any man living, the subsequent success of these institutions was due. On him the college relied for the conduct of its embarrassed and complicated interests. To his eminent faithfulness, wisdom, self-devotion, patience and constancy, the diocese and its college and seminary are deeply indebted. His outward labors were severe, but the interest and anxiety which he felt were greater than could be expressed. Not more than once in the history of any institution does a friend appear like him, entirely disinterested and thoroughly devoted to its welfare, willing to spend and actually spending his last and all his days in its behalf.' For four years (1826-29) he was tutor in the college, a clerical trustee from 1831 to 1840, a professor of the Latin language and literature from 1838 to 1846, of Ecclesiastical Polity in the seminary from 1846 to 1856, and of Ecclesiastical History from 1837 to 1863, and by an honorary appointment to the time of his death. During nearly all this time he was the secretary, treasurer and the financial agent of the college. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity in acknowledgement of his literary scholarship and profound theological learning. One who sat under his instruction says of him: 'We well remember how much we admired the refined beauties of his style of composition in his sermons; every thing was simple, polished and graceful, breathing ever the most devout piety and christian humility.' His declining health compelled him, a short time before his death, to present his resignation of his professorship to the board of trustees, and their acceptance of it was accompanied with an honorary appointment which still secured his name and counsels for the seminary, and he lived long enough to rejoice in the success that attended the introduction of his successor."

viii CHARLES T. WING, b. Jan. 14, 1836.

Mr. Wing graduated at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, in 1853. On the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, he volunteered in an Ohio regiment of infantry, and was commissioned Quartermaster, with the rank of Captain. He was engaged in the battle of Stone river, and was with the army during its march through Tennessee, and was subsequently stationed at Nashville, Tennessee, where he remained in discharge of the duties of his office until the close of the war. He was breveted Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel, for faithful service. After the close of the war he was engaged some years at Nashville as a banker and broker, and for some years since then he has been engaged in the same business in New York city.

viii WILLIAM S. WING, b. Nov. 21, 1837.

He is a farmer, and an active and useful citizen of Gambier, Ohio. In the civil war of 1861-5, he was a volunteer in the 96th. Ohio infantry, in which he had the rank of Lieutenant. He was on constant duty during his term of service, which was closed soon after the first attack on Vicksburgh, by Sherman, in which he took an active part. He was forced to resign his commission and return to his former life at Gambier, by reason of prolonged ill-health.

viii SAMUEL M. D. CLARK, b. Jan. 6, 1840.

Mr. Clark is a native of Louisiana, and was living at New Orleans at the time of the outbreak of the civil war, when he promptly volunteered in the Washington artillery, Confederate army. He was engaged in the Port Hudson fight, and to avoid being taken prisoner by the Union forces, he swam the Mississippi river past the U. S. gun-boats, the night previous to the surrender, and, soon thereafter, he joined Lee's army in Virginia. He was taken prisoner at Petersburg, and was held at Point Lookout until the close of the war.

Mr. Clark is a graduate of Kenyon College; for some years he has been the principal of Montgomery-Bell Academy at Nashville, Tennessee.

vi JAMES REMINGTON, b. Aug., 1799.

A number of years of Mr. Remington's boyhood and early manhood were passed as a clerk in the postoffice and mercantile houses at Buffalo, N. Y.

He united at an early age with First Presbyterian Church of Buffalo, of which Rev. Miles P. Squire was then the pastor. And soon after he turned his attention to the preparation for the ministry. He pursued his studies, preparatory to entering college, at Dr. Cooley's classical school in Granville, Mass.; graduated at Williams College in 1826, and studying at Andover Theological Seminary, he was licensed to preach, and was ordained by the Buffalo Presbytery in 1829. The whole term of his ministry (about forty years) was spent among the people of Lancaster and Alden, towns adjoining one another, in Erie county, N. Y., on the line of the Erie railway.

The pastoral relation of Mr. Remington with these churches was dissolved, at his request, by the Presbytery of Buffalo City, January, 1867. And upon that occasion the Presbytery adopted the following minute, and ordered it to be placed upon their records:

“The pastoral relation of Rev. James Remington with the church in Alden having been this day dissolved, Presbytery feel called to express their views of the long and faithful services of Mr. Remington. For nearly forty years, he has labored in this vicinity, and for the greater part of the time with the church in Alden. In the darkest period, our brother has been faithful to the doctrines and order of the Presbyterian Church, in good report and evil report he has stood by the word of God and the standard of our church, having souls for his hire and seals of his ministry. Having served his generation so long, we hope it may please God to spare his life for future usefulness, and that as a Presbytery, we may continue for many years to have his valuable services as Stated Clerk of our body.”

viii CHARLES W. REMINGTON, b. Dec. 3, 1835.

After a clerkship of some years, in the store of his uncle, Dwight Stone, at Columbus, Ohio, Mr. Remington commenced a course of study in preparation for the ministry. He graduated at Princeton College, 1862, and entered the theological department of the same college. After having completed the full course of theological studies, he was ordained to the ministry and installed pastor of the church at Bethany, N. Y., by Buffalo City Presbytery. Since May, 1874, Mr. Remington has had pastoral charge of the Presbyterian church, at North Bergen, N. Y.

viii GEORGE L. REMINGTON, b. May 24, 1839.

At the commencement of the civil war, inspired by the spirit of patriotism which so generally pervaded the ranks of our young men, George L. Remington volunteered in company "C," 21st. New York infantry. He went out as Orderly Sergeant. After some months service, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant, and soon after was promoted to First Lieutenant, and after the Captain was killed in battle, Lieutenant Remington was commissioned Captain, and had command of his company during the remaining period (two years) of the term of enlistment. He was engaged in the second battle of Bull Run, and the battles of South Mountain, Antietam and Fredericksburg, and the many other battles in which his regiment took part.

After having been mustered out of service with his regiment on the close of the term of enlistment, Captain Remington and his brother, James G., were employed until the close of the war in the Quartermaster's department at Nashville, Tenn. While thus employed, he was called out and placed in command of a company, when Nashville was threatened by the Confederate forces under General Hood.

viii JAMES G. REMINGTON, b. June 3, 1844; d. Apr. 24, 1882.

At the commencement of the secession movement, James G. Remington was pursuing his studies at the seminary of Alden, N. Y., with a view to entering college. With several of his fellow students, he resolved to enter the service of his country, and at once enlisted in company "C," 21st New York infantry, in which his brother was an officer, and shared with his comrades the fatiguing marches; and was engaged in most of the severe conflicts in which this regiment took part.

When the regiment had served out its full term of enlistment, and the few that survived returned to Buffalo, they were received with unprecedented demonstrations by the citizens. Most of those who first went out to defend their country's rights, had fallen in battle or by sickness. Such was the public enthusiasm manifested on that occasion, that it was difficult for the regiment, as it marched through the principal streets of the city, to preserve order; fathers, mothers and sisters broke through the ranks to lay hold of and embrace sons and brothers, while others gave utterance to their deep sorrow and grief for the loss of dear ones that had been cut down in battle or by disease.

At the time of Mr. Remington's death, he was engaged in business at Attica, N. Y.

vii HENRY C. CASWALL, b. May 11, 1810; d. Dec. 17, 1870.

The following was published soon after the death of Dr. Caswall:

“On St. Thomas’ Day, at Nashotah, Wis., the body of Rev. Dr. Caswall, Vicar of Figheldean, England, was committed to the earth. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Drs. Cole, Kemper and Keene, the dust being cast upon the coffin by the last named, an old and near friend of the deceased.

“Dr. Caswall was, owing to the peculiar circumstances of his clerical life, a living bond of union between the churches of England and America. He belonged to both. His home was in both, and he loved and worked for both. The first ordained graduate of Kenyon College, he was for years an English Vicar, and dying an English Vicar, his dust is laid to rest at Nashotah, beside that of the venerable man who commissioned him priest in the far west.

“He will be mourned and missed on both sides of the ocean.

“The following notice of his life is kindly furnished us, and will be read with interest as the record of a man who was a historic landmark in the history of the American church.

“The Rev. Henry Caswall was the eldest son of the Rev. Robert Clarke Caswall, Vicar of Eglington, Northumberland, England, and subsequently Vicar of West Lavington, Wilts. His mother was the niece of Bishop Burgess, Bishop first of St. David’s, and afterward of Salisbury. He was born at Yately, in the county of Hampshire, on May 11, 1810. In his early years he went to school at the Rev. Mr. Cundeli’s, Stockton, on Tees, Durham, and, afterwards, his education was carried on at the ancient Grammar School, at Chigwell, Essex, the head master of which was the Rev. Dr. Burford, a most thorough teacher and disciplinarian of the old-fashioned type. Subsequently, on the removal of his father to West Lavington, he was sent to a private tutor, the Rev. T. Meyler, of Little Bedwyn, Wilts, a most thorough classical scholar, who combined with his classical tastes a fondness for scientific pursuits, in which his pupil also had always taken great delight. About this time, 1827, Bishop Chase, of Ohio, paid a visit to England, for the purpose of creating an interest among church people in his proposed theological institution, Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. Bishop Burgess, of Salisbury, met him, and was much interested in his work and designs, and helped it forward in various ways. As Bishop Chase was anxious to secure men to fill his college, as well as means to complete it, it occurred to Bishop Burgess that probably his great-nephew would like to work under the zealous, stirring Bishops of the West. The Vicar of West Lavington was quite willing, and his son evinced a desire to go, so, accordingly, on August 16, 1828, he embarked in the ship 'Canada,' for America, reaching New York on September 18, whence he proceeded at once to Ohio. At Kenyon his time was spent in the studies of the academic course, and in such missionary labors as the Bishop appointed the students to undertake. In November, 1830, he took the degree of B. A., and in 1834, M. A. In 1831, he was ordained Deacon by Bishop Chase, having previously, in October, 1830, married Mary Chase Batcheller, a niece of Bishop Chase, and his adopted daughter. In July, 1831, he was sent by Bishop Chase to his first charge, Portsmouth, Ohio, where he continued for two years. Owing to the climate of the place and his great exertions, he then almost entirely lost his voice, and was obliged, by the advice of physicians, to retire a while from parochial duty, having waited, however, till the arrival of his successor, not bearing to leave his beloved flock there without a pastor. Thence he removed to Andover, Mass., where his health partially recovering, he was able to take some easy missionary work at Methuen, near Andover (now comprised in the thriving manufacturing town of Lawrence,) making use of his leisure time in studying Hebrew, under Professor Moses Stuart, of the Andover Seminary. In 1834, he received notice of his election to the Professorship of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary, first established at Lexington, Ky., which he accepted, and entered upon his duties in May of that year. After three years thus spent, Mr. Caswall accepted a call to take charge of the recently formed congregation at Madison, Indiana, where he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Kemper, in the year 1837. In the following year, owing to his health again breaking down, he sought the more bracing climate of Canada, where he engaged in the work of tuition in Brockville, C. W., on the river St. Lawrence, also taking occasional clerical duty at Brockville and Lambspond, on the Canadian, and at Morristown, on the American side of the river. In October, 1841, Mr. Caswall was appointed Theological Professor of Kemper College, St. Louis, Missouri. The college was not, however, at that time completely organized, and no theological students having been then admitted, he was requested to go to England, to collect books and subscriptions for the formation of a library for the college. Accordingly, in May, 1842, Mr. Caswall returned to England, accompanied by Mrs. Caswall and the rest of his family, and succeeded, through the kind liberality of many churchmen, whose names are household words, in securing for the college a magnificent library. The sad troubles which befell that institution, so dear to Bishop Kemper, who founded it, need not now be more than touched upon. Mr. Caswall saw that circumstances rendered it undesirable that he should return again to the college, and, accordingly he resigned his appointment. It may be as well to mention here that when the college property was sold, the library obtained with so much care, and presented by such loving churchmen in the old country, shared the same fate; but, evidently, it has been providentially re-secured for the benefit of the church, Bishop Whipple having purchased it for the Theological Seminary at Fairbault, Minn. Being in England with all his family, and his father and mother still both alive (the former nearly seventy-five years of age,) Mr. Caswall decided to remain in the old country.

“But a difficulty here presented itself. He had been ordained in the United States, and the Act of Parliament which had sanctioned the consecration of Bishops for the United States, also prohibited any clergy ordained by them from officiating in England permanently. However, through the active co-operation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London and Salisbury, Bishop Denison, Bishop Burgess having been dead some years, and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone and other influential men of both Houses a private Act of Parliament was passed removing his legal disabilities. After a few months temporary duty in the diocese of Salisbury, Mr. Caswall was appointed by Bishop Denison to the sole charge of the curacy of Figheldean, near Amesbury, Wilts; the Vicar, the Rev. J. H. Hume, being a pluralist, and having other benefices, where he lived in preference to Figheldean. Indeed, Mr. Caswall never once saw his Vicar, and it was owing to his having failed to appoint a curate that the appointment lapsed to the Bishop. On October 16, 1843, Mr. Caswall undertook the curacy of Figheldean, and upon the demise of Mr. Hume, was collated by the Bishop to the Vicarage on April 23, 1848, a charge which he held to the day of his death. The parish had only 500 inhabitants, and the income being only £160 a year (and that much diminished by the enormous rates and taxes levied upon it.)* Mr. Caswall again resorted to tuition in addition to his parochial work. About the year 1852, the Society for the Revival of Convocation was formed, in which Mr. Caswall took an active part, never relaxing his efforts till the object was accomplished for which the society was formed. At the next election of proctors to represent the diocese in Convocation, he was very naturally chosen to be one of the two representatives. He was re-elected on two or three subsequent occasions, holding the office altogether some ten or twelve years. On the first assembling of Convocation after his election, he had the honor of being presented to the Queen, together with the other members of the Lower House of Convocation, according to custom. On the appointment of Dr. Tufnell to the See of Brisbane, Australia, the Bishop of Salisbury—at that time Bishop Hamilton—collated him to the Prebendall Stall of Salisbury Cathedral thus vacated,—a position of much honor in the diocese. This office also he held up to the time of his death. In 1854, Mr. Caswall received the honorary degree of M. A., from the University of Oxford, England, and D. D., from Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut. In September, 1855, his old Lexington friend, Rev. Hamble James Leacock, arrived in England from the West Indies on his way to found the West Indian Mission in West Africa, afterward known as the Pongos Mission.

“Through his great friendship for Mr. Leacock, he found himself gradually drawn into the work of that Mission, and was soon appointed English Corresponding Secretary of the Mission. This involved the arduous labor of corresponding with the West Indian Board, with the English committee, and the missionaries themselves, besides the duty of collecting large sums of money in England for the Mission, by holding meetings and preaching. Sometimes he would preach twice on a Sunday and hold meetings every evening in the week at six or eight different places, on behalf of the Mission, and he continued at this work for several weeks at a time.

“This work, more than anything else, exhausted his strength and hastened his end. The beginning of the end apparently was in January, 1863. While on a “Pongos tour” in Somersetshire he became suddenly very ill, and had to hasten to Figheldean. His complaint proved to be a very severe attack of yellow jaundice, which lasted several months. He was recommended to go abroad, and at last, as he used to say, ‘he left his jaundice on the Alps.’ But he was never altogether well after that attack. In March, 1866, he had his first attack, though a very slight one, of paralysis. He was in London on Pongos Mission business, and woke up one morning with a slight numbness of the left side. This, however, speedily passed off, with the exception of the numbness of the left hand, which never left him. His illness very slowly but steadily came on, however; occasionally for a time he seemed quite well, but at other times, especially in damp weather, he felt the numbness increase, and other symptoms manifest themselves. This induced his medical attendant to recommend a change to the bracing climate of the land of his first choice, America, also the renewal of old friendships would probably do much to refresh both mind and body.

“Accordingly, in Feb., 1868, he left England with his family (with the exception of two, then in St. Johns, Newfoundland,) having previously received leave of absence from his Cure for two years, on account of ill-health, from the Bishop of Salisbury. On his arrival in this country, he took up his residence at once at Franklin, Pa., where his eldest daughter, Mrs. D. D. Grant, and her husband are settled. Here, for a few months, he was able to assist occasionally in the services, but his weakness was becoming almost daily more plainly visible. The last time he was able to take any part in the service at St. Johns, Franklin, was in Feb., 1869. On the 9th. of May, 1869, he had a second, and much more serious stroke of paralysis, which affected the right side. He soon recovered the use of his limbs, strange to say, but his brain was much affected. His medical attendants plainly discerned that he was suffering from softening of the brain, for which science has not yet discovered any cure. Till Nov., 1869, he was able to read family prayers, though often in such a manner as to be almost unintelligible. Day after day he was now talking about England; probably from a feeling that his end was approaching, and a consequent desire once more to see his native country and his relatives there. The doctors, on being asked, decided that his wish ought, if possible, to be gratified. The satisfaction of his wishes might somewhat arrest, though it could not cure his disease. So again, with two members of his family to attend upon him, he crossed the Atlantic. But now his sole wish, but one which could not be at once gratified, was to be with his children he left in Franklin. So after only a month in England, he was brought back to Franklin in February, 1870. One by one his powers of mind and body now left him. But it was not until the beginning of November that he had to keep his bed. The end then rapidly hastened in; and on December 17 he calmly breathed his last, surrounded by his family. Several times during his last hours he looked upwards and smiled most sweetly, as if recognizing some dear friend unseen by those around him. He had left no hint as to the place where he would like to be interred. His family, however, were sure that he would not wish to lie in unconsecrated ground. The choice, therefore, was alas! indeed narrowed. But thus they were led to think of a place than which none other could have been more appropriate, or more in accordance, as they believed, with what the departed would have desired, Nashotah* cemetery; as near as possible to the grave of the dear Bishop Kemper, who had ordained him priest; in close proximity to that Missionary Seminary so dear to all devoted churchmen, whence are sent forth continually so many laborers in the work of missions—work Dr. Caswall always had so much at heart, both in America and in England, during the ten years he was engaged about the Pongos Mission, in Africa. There, accordingly, he was laid to his long rest, on St Thomas' Day, Dec. 21, 1870, a bright and beautiful day, by the loving ministrations of Nashotah's fathers and sons. All that loving hearts and voices could do was done to brighten with expressions of Christian faith and hope the darkness of the grave. The hymn 157, part 1, in Hymns Ancient and Modern—'Jesu, the very thought of Thee,' was sung in the chapel, a hymn which was always a favorite, being, moreover, one translated by his brother, the Rev. Edward Caswall. All was bright and happy, as a Christian funeral ought to be; the Epistle for the week reminding us that indeed we should 'Rejoice in the Lord alway,' and the Gospel for the day, (St. Thomas') teaching us that 'Blessed are they that see not, and yet have believed.'

"In 1842, while at Kemper College, St. Louis, Dr. Caswall paid a visit to Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet, after which he wrote his books, 'The City of the Mormons, or Three Days at Nauvoo,' and 'The Prophet of the Nineteenth Century.' At Madison, Indiana, he wrote, 'America and the American Church,' of which subsequently he had a second edition published. His other principal works were the 'Martyr of the Pongos,' 'The Western World Revisited,' 'The American Church and American Union,' 'Scotland and the Scottish Church,' 'Didascalus,' 'The Jerusalem Chamber,' etc., etc."

viii ROYAL D. CASE, b. June 28, 1836.

Mr. Case was a volunteer in 1st. Minnesota light artillery, war of 1861-5. He was present at the capture of Vicksburg, and during that siege was under fire 100 successive days. He was with Sherman's army on its 'March to the Sea.' He participated in twenty-seven general engagements, and was not absent from his company a single day of his three years service.

For some years Mr. Case has been agent of the St. Paul and S. C. Railway Company, at St. James, Minn.

viii WILLIAM W. CASE, b. Nov. 2, 1839.

He was a volunteer in 10th. Minnesota infantry, war of 1861-5, in which he was commissioned Second Lieutenant; for meritorious service he was promoted to First Lieutenant, and was brevetted Captain. He was wounded in battle at Nashville.

He has, for some years, been employed in the Department of the Interior, at Washington, D. C. He was Auditor of Wabasha county, when living in Minnesota.

vi ANSON SPOONER, b. May 28, 1793; d. July 12, 1865.

Anson Spooner entered upon manhood at Albany, N. Y., where his father's family was living. He had the advantage of a good common-school education; was intelligent and of industrious habits; a general favorite, he had bright prospects before him; a cloud, however, cast its shadow over him which embittered all his after life. In driving through the streets, he had the misfortune to drive over a child, causing its death. He was arrested, hastily tried, convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment. There seems to have been great fault in his counsel, or a want of full appreciation of the facts in preparation for trial and the presentation of the case to the court and jury. This fault was recognized by the people of Albany, who appealed to the Governor of the State in behalf of young Spooner. The case, with all the testimony, having been thoroughly reviewed, Spooner was promptly pardoned a very short time after his conviction and sentence, and was set at liberty, acquitted by the Governor and the community of all intentional wrong. Soon afterward Mr. Spooner went to western New York, and here his evil fate followed him. In 1823, in the celebration of Independence day, Mr. Spooner was placed in charge of the gun used in giving the National salute; a premature explosion of the gun crippled him in both arms and almost destroyed his eyesight. Thus, he was ever afterward incapacitated from earning a living; such, however, had been his life, his industry and honesty, his social and manly qualities, he was not without friends. These friends rallied around him, and ever afterward looked to all his wants. General P. B. Porter, in his will, settled upon Mr. Spooner an annuity sufficient to provide him a comfortable support through life. His latter years were passed with friends at Niagara Falls.

vi JOHN R. SPOONER, b. Jan. 14, 1794; d. Apr. 20, 1838.

Dr. Spooner was born in Heath, Massachusetts. He was raised in Orwell, Vermont, a town to which his father removed soon after he was born.

Being of a studious disposition, John determined to educate himself to a professional life. When quite young he devoted himself to classical studies. These he soon supplemented with scientific studies, and finding his delight in scientific investigation, he naturally drifted into the profession of medicine.

John first devoted himself to the study of medicine in the broader sense, but, as his health was extremely delicate, he was obliged to give up his original purpose of practicing, and at the same time to relinquish the study of medicine, properly so-called. But before long he found a new occupation for his thoughts, the pursuit of which was destined to yield him a great deal of credit, and make his life and influence of great value to his fellow men. His attention was attracted to dentistry, a branch of medical science which was at that time in its infancy. He saw the great importance of the dentist's calling, and giving up all his other studies, devotedly went earnestly to work to prepare himself for it.

He first commenced the practice of his profession in western New York. Meeting with poor success, he soon left that part of the country and went to Canada, where he settled in Montreal. Here he had a hard struggle, for the profession of dentistry was almost unheard of in that city, and the Canadians did not welcome novelties with enthusiasm.

While making his way slowly and laboriously, a happy thought struck him. The use of artificial teeth had not yet been introduced into America. He, however, knew their value, and foreseeing the great advantage which would result to the person who would bring them into use, determined to engage in their manufacture.

He accordingly commenced the experiment. His purpose was to discover a composition which, when properly molded, would bear a close resemblance to natural teeth in color, and afford the requisite masticating power. He labored for a long time with great perseverance, encountering a number of most discouraging failures. But he at length succeeded in producing, from incorruptible mineral substances, a beautiful and perfect specimen, which, on being tested, proved to possess every necessary quality. He immediately went to work to reap the fruits of his labors. He was eminently successful. Dentists and physicians generally recognized the immense importance of his discovery, and artificial mineral teeth have ever since been in use everywhere.

John R. Spooner was thus the first on this continent to make the use of mineral teeth known. He was also the first to substitute mineral teeth in blocks, and to employ the artificial gum.

With his important discovery, Dr. Spooner's reputation was established. He soon built up for himself a very large practice. For many years he had the best portion of the dental business of Canada.

In the winter of 1837 he was attacked by an obstinate cold, which, wearing upon his delicate constitution, soon developed into a serious lung trouble. By the advice of his physician, he left Canada, with his wife, for the Barbadoes, the genial tropical climate of which, it was hoped, would soon restore him to health. He had the good fortune to make the acquaintance of a wealthy and noble-hearted gentleman residing on the island, who invited him to his house and surrounded him with every comfort. His health, however, was completely undermined. He died quietly at the house of his friend the following spring. His widow embarked for New York. On her arrival she learned that her infant child, which had been left behind in Canada, had died during her absence, and that she was doubly bereaved.

John R. Spooner was a man of rare energy. He was warmly attached to his profession, and is described as a practitioner of remarkable success, who enjoyed in an unusual degree the confidence and affection of his patients. His character was upright and amiable. He was unselfish, generous and impulsive. He did a great deal of good, and his untimely death was mourned by hundreds of witnesses to the virtue of his character, the nobility of his life, and the beneficence of his influence.

vi WHIPPLE SPOONER, b. March 12, 1796; d. January 17, 1879.

Whipple Spooner was born in Heath, Franklin county, Massachusetts, and was the third son in a family noted for its prominence and intellectuality. His father was a house-carpenter and joiner by trade, and "exemplified a life of unremitting, laborious industry, and unimpeachable integrity." From the fact that he gave his six sons excellent common-school, and five of these six academical and professional educations, it is reasonable to infer that he was a good father and a model citizen.

In 1797 the family removed to Orwell, Rutland county, Vermont, where Whipple first attended school. He showed an early aptitude for study, and at the age of twelve years was advanced to the highest class, being thus placed on an equality with pupils much older than himself. In 1810 his father removed with the family to Brandon, in the same county. Whipple now worked on the farm in summer and attended school in the winter, until he reached the age of eighteen, when he was employed as a teacher.

On attaining his majority, he received an invitation from his brother Cyrus to join him in his home near Marietta, Ohio.

He accordingly set out in the autumn of 1817, and made the journey in the primitive manner on horseback. In these days of Pullman coaches and "lightning connections," it would require some stretch of the imagination to understand how a young man could be considered fortunate in possessing a horse for such a journey. But when we remember how Horace Greeley started out to make his fortune from another village of Rutland county, Vermont,* Whipple Spooner may well be said to have traveled in style.

In Ohio he devoted a few years to the milling business, and taught school in the dull months of the year. In those days flour could be bought at $2.75 to $5.00 per barrel, and the profits on sales were so small that young Spooner decided to withdraw from the business and to fit himself for a profession. In pursuance of this object, he, in 1821, commenced the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Hildreth, at Marietta. Besides being a successful physician, Dr. Hildreth was an author of some note, having published, among other works, a treatise on the "Antiquity and Structure of Mounds."

During the two years that Mr. Spooner was with Dr. Hildreth, he was subjected to severe attacks of bilious and intermittent fever, and became finally so shattered in health that he was obliged to return to Vermont. Here he attended a course of lectures in the Vermont Academy of Medicine, and in 1824 he received the degree of M. D., being selected out of a class of one hundred and twenty-five, of whom twenty-five were graduates, to deliver the valedictory address.

Upon receiving his degree, he commenced the practice of his profession at Pittsfield, Vermont, removing thence to Williston, Chittenden county, and erected spacious buildings for himself and family. But the old fevers that he had contracted in Ohio again attacked him, and with such malignity, that he was forced, though with great reluctance, to give up his practice.

In search of new climate and associations, Dr. Spooner visited Montreal. His health being now much improved, he formed a co-partnership with an elder brother, John R.

* See Parton's "Life of Horace Greeley," p. 107.

Spooner, M. D., for the practice of dentistry. The new firm did not, however, have a long continuance. His brother was taken seriously ill, and sought to repair his health by traveling. He visited the West Indies, and subsequently the Barbadoes, where, after lingering a short time, he passed away in April, 1838.

After the death of his brother, Dr. Spooner undertook the entire management of his large practice, which he had extended and built up both in Montreal and Quebec. His thorough knowledge of the profession and its duties, served him so good a turn, that, after nine years of successful and lucrative practice, he was enabled to retire with a competency.

His residence in Canada, though agreeable in a pecuniary sense, was considered by him as but temporary and indefinite. His mind continually reverted to the scenes of his youth and early manhood, and when he had determined to again change his place of residence, he was not slow to choose a home in Vermont. He purchased a tract of land in the vicinity of the city of Burlington, and soon converted it into a country seat of great scenic beauty. His change of occupation did not, for some time, have any advantageous effect on the state of his health, but he improved gradually, and was enabled to enjoy the comforts which his thrift had provided. He died January 17, 1879, full of years, experience and usefulness.

Whipple Spooner was a man of many excellent traits of character, and, while making no parade of his abilities, possessed talents which might have enabled him to shine in any walk of life. He was generous, frank and open-hearted, and endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact. A friend speaks of him as "One of that class of men who believed in the utmost freedom of thought, whether upon the subject of politics, religion or any other subject involving his duties as a citizen and as a liberal-minded christian gentleman."

He was naturally studious and thoughtful, and his ripe literary and scholastic attainments were due to perseverance and self-exertion, rather than to an inherited or educated taste. His researches were mostly in history and the natural sciences, with which departments of knowledge he was thoroughly conversant. His writings also evidence familiarity with the intricate principles of political economy and the science of government. The many hours which he devoted to literature bore their fruits. He wrote numerous critical and moral essays, and frequently contributed to the press both prose and poetry of a general or desultory character. But having no particular ambition to obtain notoriety as an author, many of his best efforts have probably never seen the light.

As a writer, he evinced decided logical and descriptive powers. He indulged the speculative and theoretical faculties to an extent hardly to be expected from a man of his practical pursuits. Though inclined to be prolix, he was a terse, incisive critic, and readily grasped the main points of an argument.

In his latter years he pursued literature as a relaxation, and wrote for his own amusement, without any special regard for style or rhetorical embellishment. He had a fine appreciation of the humorous, and was particularly happy in his quaint "doggerel" and witticisms. This is shown to a very large extent in his letters to the compiler of these family records. In excuse of these verbose though amusing effusions, he speaks of his "dotage," and quotes from Goldsmith:

"The sports of children satisfy the child."

It is unfortunate that he did not find time or inclination to write his autobiography. There were many incidents of his life, as well as his associations with men and women, that might have possessed great interest to the present generation.

If his relatives could be induced to collect his literary productions, quite a presentable volume might be made.

In politics, Dr. Spooner was, like most Vermonters, an original Abolitionist, and subsequently a Republican. He cared little for political honors, and was content to see the faith that he championed sustained.

As previously stated, Dr. Spooner was a member of a peculiarly intellectual family. Four of his brothers were graduated physicians, and a fifth was educated for the ministry. Dr. Cyrus Spooner, the eldest of the family, was a mathematical and mechanical genius, having made many improvements, and having left a number of valuable works in manuscript. Among these were "Trigonometrical Tables Adapted to Navigation," "A Work on Percentage in all its Forms," "A System of Universal Mensuration," etc., etc. Dr. Shearjashub Spooner, the sixth son of the family, was the author of the "American Edition of Boydell's Illustrations of Shakespeare," "A Critical and Biographical Dictionary of Painters, Sculptors Engravers and Architects," "Anecdotes of Painters, Engravers, Sculptors and Architects and Curiosities of Art," etc., etc.

vi SHEARJASHUB SPOONER, b. Dec. 3, 1809; d. March 14, 1859.

Shearjashub Spooner was born in Orwell, Rutland Co., Vermont. He was brought up and educated in Brandon, a village in the same county. On the completion of his school years, he worked, until he reached the age of eighteen, on his father's farm, when he went, on the invitation of his brother, Dr. John R. Spooner, to Montreal.

In Montreal, Shearjashub commenced the study of the classics, and afterwards of medicine, under his brother's direction. He was a diligent student, and soon became a proficient scholar. From the general study of medicine he soon turned his attention to the particular study of dentistry. In 1833, having mastered this important branch of medical knowledge, he went to New York. Desirous of perfecting his attainments, he entered the New York Medical College, took a full course, and graduated with the degree of M. D., qualified to practice in any department of the medical profession.

He chose dentistry, a subject to which he had given much patient investigation. Immediately after graduation he opened an office, and commenced active professional life. He had unusual success. This was contributed to, in a great measure, by the very favorable reception of a treatise published by him soon after he commenced practice, entitled: "Care and Preservation of the Teeth." This work shows an intimate familiarity with the underlying principles of the science of dentistry. Shearjashub was one of the best known and most successful dentists of his time. His practice was large and very lucrative. He followed his profession through life.

A man of learning and culture, Shearjashub gave a great deal of thought to the sciences and arts. Keenly appreciative of the beautiful, he was led to inquire into and reflect on the state of the fine arts in this country. Painting, engraving and the kindred arts were the particular branches which engaged his attention. He did much to promote taste, and to assist the deserving, in the arts, struggling against neglect.

The work for which Dr. Spooner was best known is his restoration of the engravings of "Boydell's Illustrations of Shakespeare." This was a great undertaking. It employed a large part of his time for many years. It required a vast outlay of money, with no immediate and very few prospective returns.

The idea of the Boydell Illustrations was conceived by the man whose name the collection bears, Mr. J. Boydell. Mr. Boydell was an Alderman of the city of London,—a man of wealth and influence. In 1785 he made a proposition to build a national historical art gallery, and fill it with paintings by the foremost painters of Great Britain. The illustration of Shakespeare was his great scheme, and he finally concentrated all his efforts in this object. Numerous designs were made, and of these one hundred and thirty-four were finally accepted. They were painted in oil by thirty-six of the most eminent British painters, and the paintings were placed permanently in a splendid gallery built specially at his expense, and known as the Boydell Shakesperian Gallery. The next step was to engrave the designs. This was done by thirty-two prominent British engravers and two sculptors. The engravings were on copper, the size of the plates being twenty-four by thirty inches. Their completion required from four to five years,—so careful and elaborate was the work of the engravers. The whole undertaking was completed in 1803.

To supply the multitude of English and foreign collectors with copies of these fine engravings, numerous impressions were taken from the plates, which, in the course of time, became worn. They were finally sent to the United States and offered for sale. Dr. Spooner became the purchaser. He at once set to work to restore them. He had the good fortune to secure the artistic services of Mr. George Parker, who had been a pupil of Robert Thew, one of Mr. Boydell's engravers, and among the most famous engravers of his day. Under Mr. Parker's supervision—he was assisted by numerous skillful artists—the plates were completely restored, so that when proofs were taken they were found to compare very favorably with proofs taken from the original plates. The entire work was printed in folio, and was subscribed for largely by the libraries of our country, and by the prominent men on this side of the Atlantic. It is known as the "American Edition of Boydell's Illustrations of Shakespeare." It consists of the one hundred original plates, and letter-press description of the plates, the latter written by Mr. Spooner.

Besides this important work, Dr. Spooner published two other works of great value and interest. The first of these is a "Biographical and Critical Dictionary of Painters, Engravers, Sculptors and Architects," a volume of 1200 imperial octavo pages. This is one of the most satisfactory works of the kind ever printed. It bears the marks of great labor, research and knowledge of the subject. It contains cuts of the various ciphers and monograms used by artists to distinguish their works. It gives historical sketches of the various branches treated of and of the different schools of art.

The second of Shearjashub Spooner's important literary works was "Anecdotes of Painters, Engravers, Sculptors and Architects, and Curiosities of Art," a work of three duodecimo volumes, of upward of one thousand pages. He contemplated a much more extensive work on this subject, but was prevented by death from carrying out his intention.

And he published an edition of "The New Testament," superbly embellished and illustrated by engravings after designs of the best Italian artists, and several minor works from his pen were also published by him.

Shearjashub Spooner was a most assiduous worker. For six years, he says in a letter to his brother, during which he practiced his profession, restored Boydell, and wrote his two books, he never once remitted his labor for pleasure or recreation.

A few years previous to his death, he projected an undertaking even more arduous than the restoration of the Shakespeare engravings. He purchased the worn plates of the two great French art museums, imported them, and proposed to restore them. But the customs duties were so heavy that he could not afford to take possession of them, and, after a good deal of negotiation, and vainly seeking relief from the Secretary of the Treasury, he finally abandoned the enterprise.

Mr. Spooner continued his unwearied activity until his death. For some time before this event, he was a physical wreck. He died after a lingering illness. His complaint was an aggravation of a chronic nervous trouble.

Shearjashub's character was singularly amiable. He was one of the most generous of men. His temperament was mild and sympathetic, though impulsive in every good cause. His strength of character was great; he was immovable in purpose and resolution. He had abilities, the careful exercise of which enabled him to add to a good name an honorable reputation.

vi LYSANDER SPOONER, b. January 19, 1808.

Lysander Spooner's early life was passed mostly on his father's farm, where, according to the old custom in New England, he served out his time with his father, receiving in the meanwhile good educational advantages. For several years afterward he taught country schools and clerked in stores. He also did clerical work in the office of the Register of Deeds, in Worcester, and in a banking house in New York.

During 1833 and 1834 he studied law in the offices of Hon. John Davis and Charles Allen, Esq., Worcester. Here, in two years' time, he completed the course of reading prescribed, and confident of his qualifications, applied to the court for admission. This, however, was refused, on the ground of non-compliance with the provisions of the law, which required every applicant either to have obtained a full collegiate education, or to have passed five years in professional study. Notwithstanding his rejection by the court, he determined to enter upon the practice of his profession without delay, and so, with the full approval of his preceptors, opened a law office in Worcester. In 1835 he wrote and published a letter addressed to the legislature of Massachusetts, exposing the absurdity of the law with reference to admission to practice. In 1836 the legislature repealed this obnoxious provision by a large vote. He might then have been regularly admitted, but having other plans, did not avail himself of the opportunity, and has since appeared before the courts only in important suits, at the solicitation of personal friends.

In 1836 Lysander Spooner went to Ohio, where, until 1843 he was a resident, at different times, of Toledo, Perrysburg and Columbus. In 1837 he purchased a tract of land at the head of the rapids on the Maumee river. In 1838 he brought suit against the State Board of Public Works to restrain them from draining the Maumee, "a navigable stream." His counsel was Hon. Noah H. Swayne, since then an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. The decision was adverse to Mr. Spooner's interest.

In July, 1844, he established an independent mail from Boston to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. In relation to this enterprise he wrote to M. D. Phillips, 1857:

"I was the first to prove by argument—certainly to prove to the satisfaction of any considerable portion of the public—that Congress had no constitutional power to forbid the establishment of mails, by states, or by private individuals, in competition with the mails of the United States; that I was the first to establish mails on that principle, and invite the government to test the question before the judicial tribunals; that these events were followed by a recognition of the correctness of the principle, by an important portion of the bar, the press, the people and, in one instance, by the bench, (Judge Story) and in another instance in the Senate, (by Levi Woodbury); that numerous other private mails were specially established, whose operations, by diminishing the revenues of the general postoffice, threatened the department with bankruptcy; and finally, that Congress were compelled, in order to save the department from becoming a burden upon the treasury, to reduce the postage to a rate that would rid the department of the competition of the private mails; and that these were the immediate causes that led to the passage of the cheap postage act of 1845.

"It was my intention—had I been sufficiently sustained by the public—to carry the question to the last tribunal. But after a contest of six or seven months, having exhausted all the resources that I could command, I was obliged to surrender the business, and with it the question, into the hands of others, who did not see sufficient inducement for contesting the principle after the reduction of postage had taken place.

"But, great as was the relief afforded by the act of 1845, the value of my movement did not end there. That act, by the proof it afforded that a low rate of postage will support the department, became but a preparatory step to the still further reduction made by the act of 1851."

And it may be added, that the acts making of still further reductions, that have been passed since then, were largely influenced by the same causes.

In 1834, while a student at law, he published some pamphlets against the Christian religion, and, in 1836, "The Deist's Reply to the Alleged Supernatural Evidences of Christianity."

He published, 1843, "Constitutional Law, Relative to Credit, Currency and Banking;" 1845, "The Unconstitutionality of Slavery," and in the same year, Part Second of the same work. Of this work it was said by a New York paper:

"The book sets forth with the axiom that 'Nothing inconsistent with justice can be law.' It recites the legal rule of interpretation, that 'words susceptible of two meanings, one favorable to justice and the other to injustice, shall be taken in the sense favorable to justice,' and insists that constitutions shall be interpreted by the established rules by which all other legal instruments are interpreted. Adopting this rule, it goes on to examine the colonial charters and statutes, and argues that under them slavery had no 'legal existence in the colonies up to the time of the Revolution.'

"But admitting, for the sake of argument, that prior to the Revolution slavery had a constitutional existence, Mr. Spooner starts anew with the Declaration of Independence, which, with powerful logic, he reduces to the following syllogism: The inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is admitted by it as a self-evident truth. Self-evident truths are a part of the law of the land, unless expressly denied. This truth is, therefore, a part of the law of the land, and makes slavery illegal. He then proceeds to show that none of the state constitutions in existence in 1789, established or authorized slavery. This brings us to the point that slavery had no existence at the time of the adoption of the constitution. Pursuing this subtle and logical train of argument, he admits this instrument as the supreme law of the land, and deduces that it made 'all the people of the United States citizens of the United States, and, therefore, they could never afterward be made slaves by the state government.' From this he advances irresistably to the deduction that negroes as well as whites are eligible to the presidency, and of course to every other office; that the habeas corpus denies the right of property in man, and that the guaranty to every state of a republican form of government is a guaranty against slavery."

It has been said of Mr. Spooner: "In clearness and closeness of reasoning he surpasses Webster; in range of thought and facile return to his main argument, he is equal to Choate, and in subtle and searching analysis his superior can not be found in the forum of the Union. So keen is his logic, and so well knit, that if you grant any one of his premises, he carries you inevitably to his conclusions. There is no partial resistance to be made to his argument. Concede but a hair, and you will soon find yourself enveloped in Cyclopean chains."

In 1846 Mr. Spooner published "Poverty, its Illegal Causes and Legal Cure;" in 1850 "A Defence for Fugitive Slaves against the Act of Congress of February 12, 1793 and September 18, 1850," and in 1852 "An Essay on the Trial by Jury."

"The theory of this last book, is that ancient and common-law juries, such as we are now constitutionally entitled to, were courts of conscience, who tried, and whose oaths required them to try, all causes, both civil and criminal, according to our own notions of justice, regardless of all legislative enactments, and all judicial opinions, which did not correspond with their sense of right.

"And inasmuch as it was necessary that the juror should be drawn by lot, or otherwise taken at random, from the whole body of male adults, without any choice, dictation or interference by the government, it was reasonably presumed that substantially all opinions prevailing among the people would be represented in the jury; that in other words, a jury would be, in fact, a fair epitome of 'the country,' or whole community, which it was designed to represent.

"And since the twelve, thus selected, could render no judgment, unless by an unanimous assent, it follows that no laws were intended to be enforced, except such as substantially the whole people were agreed in as being just.

"From this statement, it will be seen that our modern idea, that the majority have the right arbitrarily to govern the minority, and to establish anything they may please as law, without regard to justice, is wholly incompatible with the principles of the trial by jury."

Mr. Spooner published in 1860 an "Address of the Free Constituents of the People of the United States;" 1861, "A New System of Paper Currency;" 1866, "Considerations for Bankers and Bond-holders of the United States," and in 1868-70, "No Treason;. The Constitution of no Authority."

The latter work he closes by saying:

"Inasmuch as the Constitution was never signed nor agreed to by anybody as a contract, and therefore never bound anybody, and is now binding upon nobody, and is, moreover, such an one as no people can ever hereafter be expected to consent to, except as they may be forced to do it at the point of the bayonet, it is perhaps of no importance what is the true legal meaning as a contract is. Nevertheless, the writer thinks it proper to say that, in his opinion, the Constitution is no such instrument as it has generally been assumed to be; but that the false interpretations, and naked usurpations, the government has made in practice a very widely, and almost wholly different thing from what the Constitution itself purports to authorize. He has heretofore written much, and could write much more, to prove that such is the truth. But whether the Constitution really be one thing or another, this much is certain, that it has either authorized a government as we have had, or has been powerless to prevent it. In either case it is unfit to exist."

During these forty years last past, Mr. Spooner has been a resident of Boston. Though he has occasionally written political and financial tracts, and in other ways kept himself before the public, his last years have been for the most part years of retirement.

The great reputation which Lysander Spooner gained among theoretical writers through his "Unconstitutionality of Slavery," and "Trial by Jury," has not been sustained by his later works. And, indeed, if the truth must be told, though all recognize that these two works show high intellectual qualities, nevertheless these works can not be read even by theorists without some dissatisfaction, since this author adopts as his premises theories which, however valuable for a theoretical state of society, can have no practical application. And since we have quoted so much that is commendatory of Mr. Spooner, and of his undoubted talents, it is no more than fair that we should give a criticism upon him, in which some of his faults are shown forth. We shall conclude this sketch by the following remarks upon Lysander Spooner as a theorist, taken from a marginal note written in a copy of the "Unconstitutionality of Slavery," at the end of the first chapter:

“The whole chapter is a discussion of the principles of law in the abstract. It defines in a clear, though not particularly original manner, the principles of abstract or theoretical law and justice—principles which every one admits because they are self-evident. But Mr. Spooner’s argument is not the argument of the profound jurist; it is the argument of the narrow theorist who undertakes to lay down a theoretical system of law for a theoretical state of society. Mr. Spooner’s conclusions are as ordinary and valueless as the principles from which they are derived. They are not conclusions proper; they are abstractions. Thus, his denial of the right of the ‘supreme power’ (i. e., the STATE, in the wide or the narrow sense of the word, as the case may be) to ‘prescribe rules of conduct’ by placing arbitrary limitations on the natural law, may be defensible on the grounds of pure theory; but, on grounds of fact, it can have no acceptance. In the ideal, the perfect state of society, there can be no ‘majorities,’ no ‘supreme power;’ natural law must and will constantly prevail, and enactments can not and will not do injury to the fundamental principles of the law of nature. But in society as at present constituted (and I regret to say, that it is this society, and not the ideal society, to which Spooner offers his fine system of theoretical law); in society as at present constituted, ‘majorities’ and ‘supreme power’ exist and must exist, and they have the right theoretically and practically to construe the law of nature as they may see fit; to limit and alter, to enact and modify. I have no controversy with Mr. Spooner concerning the practical good or evil of enactments. I take issue with him on his own theoretical grounds; he maintains that constituted society can properly have no law but the law of nature; that as soon as constituted society presumes to interpret or construe the natural law by means of enactments or arbitrary limitations, a great wrong is done in practice; I maintain on the other hand, that constitutionally, society (or its agent, the majority) is supreme; that its first and chiefest right—indeed the right which it has peculiar to itself—is to construe the natural law, in other words, to promulgate such laws as it may deem necessary to its welfare.”

vi WILLIAM B. SPOONER, b. April 20, 1809; d. Oct. 28, 1880.

William B. Spooner was the third son of Asa Spooner, of Athol, Mass. From his seventh to his sixteenth year he lived with his uncle, Daniel Spooner, of Walpole, N. H. From his sixteenth to his eighteenth year, he was employed in a country store in Vermont. In 1827 he went to Boston to seek his fortune. He was at that time—as he wrote—very poor, so poor that he was obliged to borrow ten dollars with which to purchase decent clothing—clothing which he adds was “quite sufficient to insure his health and comfort during the following winter.” But he commenced life honestly, and with a stout heart. He obtained good employment, and was able, in two months, to return the money which he had borrowed.

In Boston, Mr. Spooner was for about four years a clerk in a mercantile house. At the close of that time, (about 1831) he commenced business “on his own account,” though with a small stock and a slender capital—as a dealer in hides and leather. Honesty, perseverance, and an intelligent understanding and observance of business maxims soon won him a place in the world of trade. His business increased year by year, and finally reached very large proportions—being for a long time one of the most extensive in that branch of trade in the United States. In 1873 Mr. Spooner retired from active business life and took up his residence in Petersham, Mass., where he lived until his death.

As a merchant, Mr. Spooner was highly appreciated and respected by his fellow-tradesmen. He was the first President of the New England Shoe and Leather Association; held directorships in various banking and insurance companies; was for many years an officer in the Boston Board of Trade, and was a State Director of the Western Railway Company.

Had we nothing more to say of William B. Spooner, than that from a state of extreme penury he rose to a height of wealth and business reputation, we should still accord him the meed of very honorable mention and praise; for he who by the force of talent and resolution has the address to “break his birth’s invidious bars,” and commend himself to the favor of the world, must needs be pronounced a man of consideration and note. But the praise to which Mr. Spooner is so justly entitled for his energy and success, is greatly heightened when we consider the nobility of his character and the value of his services in behalf of his fellow-men. He was a more useful as well as a most successful and prominent member of society; and his usefulness was not of that kind which lives by words, but of that other and better kind which lives by beneficent acts.

It is no reflection on Mr. Spooner's independence and individuality to say that his views of life were largely inherited. The example of his father, as we have already had occasion to remark, was one of the first to assert the doctrines of total abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors, and the memory of his mother—a woman “who was everything kind and lovely in character,”—exercised a controlling influence in the formation of his mind, and in the development of his principles of action. The cause of temperance, of anti-slavery, and of the elevation of suffering and degraded humanity, received from him a life-long advocacy. Nor was he one of those who, under the guise of seeming philanthropy, hide the desire of reputation and applause. He was singularly free from selfishness and ostentation; few could be more so. But once was he prevailed upon to accept public office, and then only when his services were absolutely essential to the success of a movement with which he had been personally identified.

To the cause of the abolition of slavery, Mr. Spooner contributed much of his energy and means. He was an original Abolitionist and Republican. * * * “I had a good deal to do,” he wrote, “with the ‘Emigrant Aid Society,’ and was for several years Chairman of its Executive Committee while the contest was hottest. The results of that contest, though a triumph, do not prove quite so satisfactory as might be desired. The State of Kansas does not seem to prosper. The enterprise cost me several thousand dollars. The company strongly urged me to give my name to a town in the state, which I declined to do.” He was for three successive years nominated by the Republican party for the office of Mayor of Boston, and once as a candidate for Congress, both of which positions he declined to fill. “I have been quite actively interested in public matters,” he said, “but have generally preferred my private independence to public positions, which are too often obtained by sacrifice of one's personal self-respect.”

As a temperance advocate, Mr. Spooner was, for many years, one of the most useful and prominent men in Massachusetts and New England. He did not bring to the advocacy of the cause the great ability and eloquence which characterized the efforts of Wendell Phillips, Caleb Cushing and Governor Chafin, but for earnestness and consistency, as well as for the actual good which he accomplished, he was the peer of any and all of these celebrated men. He was one of the founders of the Massachusetts State Temperance Alliance; was for a long term of years its President, and was at all times during his connection with it, its leading spirit. He represented Boston in the General Court of the state for two years, and in that body was chairman of the Committee on Finance. He was also chairman of the State Committee which procured the enactment of the prohibitory liquor law.

In politics, William B. Spooner was a Republican from the organization of that party. His political course was, however, characterized by great independence; he was never a violent partisan. Though he believed in the adoption of the principle of "prohibition" as a part of the policy of the state, he, nevertheless, discouraged all attempts to organize a distinct prohibition political party. "For," said he, in a memorable political address, "the subject of temperance is not like the great national questions on which political parties are formed, on which the party is supposed to be unanimous, but on which there is and must be a difference of opinion among the members of the party. * * * The only way to secure the desired temperance legislation is to act in the elections, through the primary meetings; if temperance men will do their duty there, they can secure the triumph of prohibition, if it can be done any way. * * * There have been many attempts to build up temperance parties, but they have never amounted to anything respectable in numbers, and all for the very good reason that the common sense of the people shows them that there are other objects demanding the action of government than temperance, and that temperance laws can be better secured within the existing parties than without them."

William B. Spooner, though a man of very firm and pronounced opinions, was anything but a "fanatic." Neither was he one of those "men of one idea" whom Hazlitt has so finely and effectively ridiculed. His convictions were earnest and sincere, rather than stubborn or dogmatic. Though' all his efforts tended to one particular and definite end,—that of bringing about a higher standard of morality,—yet few could have been more tolerant of the opinions of others; for he held that no exertions, however good in themselves, are truly commendable, unless directed by that liberal spirit which concedes to all men liberty of conscience and liberty of action.

Mr. Spooner was not a man of very great literary or oratorical pretensions; nevertheless he was a writer and speaker of ease and accuracy. His parts and accomplishments were above the average, but he appears to have been solicitous that his abilities should appear less than they really were, rather than greater. His temperament was strongly social, sympathetic and benevolent. He was as generous as he was wealthy and successful; but his charities, though large, were not indiscriminate or for personal fame,—on the other hand, they were judiciously bestowed, and were conferred without display.

The account which we have here given of William B. Spooner, we have made as complete as our information and ability would permit, nevertheless, in concluding, we are sensible that it lacks something of being perfect, for the sources which supply our material are scant. He was, himself, very averse to speaking of his own performances, consequently our facts are indirectly derived. It is hoped, however, that our memoir will serve the purpose for which it was written,—that of leaving on record some account of a life attractive in all its aspects and well worthy of remembrance for the results which it accomplished and for the lessons which it teaches.

The following is taken from a Rhode Island newspaper:

“ When but a lad, Alexander left his father’s house to live with his uncle John Allen, (No. 541) by him he was educated and started in business. He commenced as a manufacturer near Crompton village in Warwick, R. I., where he would, no doubt, have succeeded, but for a destructive fire, by which he lost his all.

"His views on political questions, and particularly his espousal of the cause of Thomas W. Dorr and his adherents, caused an estrangement of his relatives and some early friends from him. It is said that few men labored more ardently or incessantly than he, without the hope or promise of reward, for the cause of general suffrage as set forth in the so-called People's Constitution; and his outspoken and uncompromising efforts for the rights of the whole people, as avowed at that time, to the elective franchise, brought down upon him severe opposition. He was at that time a resident of Scituate, R. I.

"On the death of his uncle, he inherited a small patrimony in real estate in Warwick, R. I., to which place he removed. In 1853, the Democrats were successful in the elections of Rhode Island, and rewarded Mr. Allen for his long service to the party, by electing him High Sheriff of Kent county, which office he held two successive terms, to the entire satisfaction of the people. Soon after the close of his last term as Sheriff, he was elected Representative in the State Legislature from the town of Warwick, which office he filled with marked ability and to the approbation of his constituents.

"He was Postmaster under President Buchanan, notwithstanding he was bitterly opposed to many of his measures. He warmly espoused the cause of popular sovereignty, as enunciated by Douglass, whom he warmly supported for the presidency.

"Mr. Allen was a supporter of Mr. Lincoln at the time of his reelection to the presidency, and during the remainder of his political life acted with the Republican party. About the year 1866, he was again called to represent his town in the General Assembly of the State, which was the last public office of importance that he held.

"Those who knew Mr. Allen best bear testimony of his being one of the most companionable and genial of men, and those who ever had the opportunity of meeting him in political campaigns or on convivial occasions will never forget the pleasure afforded by the exercise of his mirth and wit, jest and song."

vi JOSEPH B. WEAVER, b. Nov. 7, 1810; d. Jan. 20, 1873.
The Newport, R. I., "Mercury," said of Mr. Weaver:

"He was a hatter, and for several years carried on the manufacture and sale of hats in this city; he gave up this business in about 1844, and became the proprietor, and finally the owner of the Atlantic House, where for a time he was a popular and successful landlord, but a succession of hard seasons and the financial depression of 1857 and '58 overwhelmed him, and compelled him to relinquish his business and surrender his property to his creditors. He was afterwards appointed Inspector of the Customs for this port, which office he held up to the time of his decease.

"Mr. Weaver represented Newport often in the General Assembly, and the ward in which he lived, in the City Council. He inherited his politics from his father; he was a Whig, and for many years a prominent member of the Whig party, and afterward became a Republican, and among the most influential citizens of the city. He was a faithful representative of Newport, and devotedly attached to its interests. He was a man full of generous and kindly impulses, devotedly attached to his friends and to his country. Withal he had read much and was well versed in the topics of current discussion, and was an interesting companion and a good and useful citizen, and died lamented by a large circle of relatives and friends."

vi PETER O. ALDEN, b. Aug. 20, 1772; d. Feb. 14, 1843.

The following is taken from "The Courts and Lawyers of Maine:"

"Peter O. Alden was a graduate of Brown University, 1792. He became a student in the office of Judge Paddleford in Taunton, Mass., and came to Brunswick, Me., near the close of 1796, or early in 1797, having probably been previously admitted in Bristol county, Mass. He was the only lawyer in Brunswick for the remainder of that century and for several years in the present.

"His business for a time was very good; he was well read as a lawyer, and had fair talents and information, but he was no advocate. He was very irritable in his temper, and in his manner, when he undertook to argue his cases, was abrupt and disagreeable. Whenever a shrewd adversary wished to gain an advantage over him, his certain way was to ruffle his temper, when he would be sure to spoil his own cause. As competitors gathered around him in Brunswick and the neighboring towns, his business declined, and he was left almost briefless. Henry Putnam, Isaac Gates and Ebenezer Everett, all graduates of Harvard, established themselves by his side and divided a business that was not more than sufficient for one; while a diversion was also made by Orr in Thompson, Mitchell in Freeport and enterprising lawyers in Bath. To make good the deficiencies arising from these causes, he engaged in commercial operations, which for a time were successful, but which were suddenly and sadly blasted by the restrictions on mercantile transactions, which took place prior to the war of 1812. The latter portion of his life was embittered by disappointment and poverty, which produced hypochondria and left him a wreck.

"Mr. Alden was a large and bulky man, but well proportioned. He was, by what may be inferred from the faults of his temperament, unpopular in the community in which his life was passed; but by some reaction, in 1826, perhaps from sympathy, he was elected to the House of Representatives, and re-elected the three following years, growing each time in favor until his election in 1829 was nearly unanimous."

vi AUGUSTUS ALDEN, b. June 16, 1781; d. Jan. 9, 1850.

Mr. Alden was a graduate of Dartmouth College. He studied theology, and subsequently the law, and practiced law at Norridgewock, Augusta, Winthrop, and finally at Hallowell, Maine, where he ended his days.

It has been said: "Mr. Alden was a man of piety and of religious character, and, no doubt, would have succeeded better in the ministry than he did in the law."

The historian of Augusta, Maine, says of Mr. Alden:

"He was very tall of stature, exceedingly spare in person, and of dyspeptic habits; was religious, conscientious and upright. He lacked force as a lawyer, and his professional business was small and unsuccessful. When at Augusta he taught school in his office in the Whitwell store, corner of Water street and Market square, and at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, usually left the school in charge of a monitor while he retired to the Edes House, where he lived, to lunch. Upon his return, if the monitor reported any breach of the rules during his absence, a court was organized and the culprit tried by a jury of his peers, the master acting as judge and appointing attorneys to manage the case. The scholars liked the fun; breaches of the rules were frequent, and his school prematurely ended."

vii ANDREW MACKIE, b. Jan. 24, 1794; d. May 2, 1871.

The following is taken from the "History of Bristol County, Massachusetts:"

"Dr. Mackie was born in Wareham, Mass., and died at his residence in New Bedford. He was son and grandson of physicians, each successful. His father, Dr. Andrew Mackie, of Wareham, was a leading practitioner in Eastern Massachusetts. His grandfather was Dr. John Mackie of Southampton, L. I.

"He was fitted for college under the care of Rev. Noble Everett of Wareham; graduated at Brown University in 1813; studied medicine with his father and elder brother, Dr. John Mackie, of Providence, R. I., and also the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York, and commenced practice in Plymouth, Mass., in 1817, where he remained in practice until 1831, when he removed to New Bedford, where he remained in the practice of his profession as long as he lived. That he stood well in respect to his associates, is shown in the facts that he was for many years a Councilor, twice Vice President of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and gave, by election, its annual address in 1850. He kept up his reading of current medical literature to the last; but had, doubtless, seen so many glittering specialties come and go, that, though not rejecting, he was jealous of new novelties.

"At the annual meeting of the South District Medical Society, held in New Bedford, May 10, 1871, the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That, by the death of Dr. Andrew Mackie, of New Bedford, the members of this society lose an associate of marked professional ability and uprightness of character.

"Resolved, That, as one of the founders of our society, he has claims to our gratitude for his unfailing support of it, a support given from an often expressed conviction of the correctness of the principles underlying its organization, that by measures promotive of our professional good that of our fellow-man will be promoted.

"Resolved, That, as individuals, our gratitude is due him for the example of steadfast devotion to duty, and high moral principle which has governed his course; that as a man, a friend, and a physician, his memory will be precious.

"Resolved, That we tender to his widow and children our sincere sympathy in their bereavement.'

"In early life he united with the Congregational Church, and was ever a faithful and consistent member. In 1834, he was chosen Deacon of the North Congregational Church in New Bedford, and retained his official connection until his death. From a memorial sermon preached by Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D., we take the following extract:

"'A man is valuable who is strictly conscientious. We have the memory of a man scrupulous to know the right and jealous to do it at any cost. In his life of seventy-seven years, he left the testimony of an honest and conscientious man. A strong man, he was strong in his convictions. He reproduced the Puritan idea modified only to less sternness. A massive strength, a solid faith, a fearless utterance, and though genial, and especially so in his own family, where he considered everybody's comfort before his own, yet a character, if aroused to wrath, one would dread to encounter. Such men are capable of great severity. He was satisfied with long life. He saw his family long settled, his sons in useful professions. He had the respect of his fellow citizens as a just man, and the regard of those in his own work, to some of whom he was a patriarch.

“Fifty years of consistent christian life are his testimony. Duty was his watchword, duty fulfilled is preparation. It does not take years to make such a preparation. Fruit does not ripen in blossom time. A great oak is many years from the acorn. A good life, stalwart, vigorous, true, it takes years to build up. Character is a plant of slow growth, but the reward of patient continuance is certain.”

“Dr. Mackie married December 24, 1821, at Plymouth, Miss Hetty Amelia Bradford, daughter of Captain Lemuel Bradford, who was killed in the war of 1812-15, and was a lineal descendant of William Bradford, the second Governor of Plymouth Colony.”

Of Mrs. Mackie, it was said by a New Bedford paper:

“She was born at Portland, Maine, where her father was stationed at the time. Captain Bradford was killed at the battle of Lake Champlain. Mrs. Mackie’s youthful days were mostly spent in Plymouth. After her marriage she became a member of the North Congregational Church, in this city, in which for 48 years she has been a highly esteemed member and an earnest laborer for the cause of her Lord and Master. A long illness has been borne by her with christian patience, and her loss will be deeply felt by a large circle of friends, and she will be remembered by her children for her faithfulness in all the duties of a wife and mother.”

viii ANDREW MACKIE, b. Feb. 21, 1823; d. Apr. 22, 1878.

Mr. Mackie was educated at private schools in New Bedford, and with the Rev. E. M. P. Wells at South Boston. He attended college at Brown University, Providence, R. I., where he graduated with the degree of A. B., in 1845, and in due course received the degree of A. M. He studied for the ministry at the General Theological Seminary in New York; was ordained Deacon in 1848, and Priest in 1849, by Bishop Doane of New Jersey. His parish was at Galesboro’, New Jersey. He was, at different times, in charge of parishes at Philadelphia, Newark, Boston, Amherst and Fairfield at the East, and after his removal to the West, at Madison, Peru and LaPorte, Indiana. At the time of his death he was Rector of the church at LaPorte and Dean of Northern Indiana. A short extract from a memorial sermon preached by the Rev M. Fandé at St. Thomas Church, Plymouth, Indiana, is as follows:

"It is but a few days since there came the dread message of the death of one who was well known in this parish and diocese. The startling news brought genuine sorrow to all who knew him, and dismay to not a few.

* * His death will be felt by the diocese at large. He was more than an ordinary man among men of his calling; superior talents and a thorough education, supplemented by studious habits and devotion to the cause of Christ, made him a high place in the councils and esteem of his brethren. The positions of Deputy to the General Convention, Trustee of the General Theological Seminary, Chairman of the Committee on Canons, Examining Chaplain to the Bishop, and Dean of the Northern Deanery, show that it was with no mean appreciation of his merits that Bishop, Clergy and Laity regarded him. Commanding in appearance and manners, grave and dignified, yet cheerful and cheering, he won the admiration and respect of many who knew him but slightly; while his warm heart, his gentleness, his strong, manly characteristics made it impossible to really know him and not to love him."

viii JOHN H. MACKIE, b. Aug. 24, 1826.

The following is taken from the "History of Bristol County, Massachusetts:"

"Dr. Mackie was born at Plymouth, Massachusetts; was educated at private schools and under private tutors; he pursued his professional studies at Harvard College, (on whose roll of honor his name stands) and at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, where he graduated as M. D., March 9, 1850, and in the same year established himself in practice in New Bedford, where, at this time, 1883, he is one of the leading surgeons and physicians. His reputation as a surgeon is not limited to his city or county, but is recognized all through the United States, he having performed many of the most important and difficult operations in surgery, and being frequently called in consultation in various parts of his own, as well as other states in New England. From the Massachusetts Medical Society, of which he has been an honored member since 1850, he has received many honors, having been for many years a Councilor, and been chosen to represent the State Society at the meetings of the Rhode Island, Connecticut,

New Hampshire and New York Medical Societies. He was also chosen a delegate from the Massachusetts Medical Society to the International Medical Congress of 1876, a Congress composed of the most eminent physicians and surgeons from all parts of the civilized world; and became a member of that Congress.

"In 1876, he was chosen Anniversary Chairman of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and presided at the annual dinner in Music Hall, Boston, where, among more than one thousand members and guests, was Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, and other distinguished strangers. In 1882, he was chosen Vice President of the Massachusetts Medical Society. He is a permanent member of the American Medical Society, also a member, and in 1863-4, President of the Bristol South District Medical Society. In 1882, he was chosen President of the New Bedford Society for Medical Improvement. He was appointed Consulting Physician and Surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital in 1875, and still retains that position. In the war of the Rebellion, he was an Acting Surgeon in the U. S. navy from May 13, 1861, and did good service in the Gulf of Mexico for about one year, when his health being affected by the climate, he resigned his position, and was soon after appointed an Acting Assistant Surgeon in the U. S. army, and during the rest of the war was in charge of hospitals at the North. Since 1863, he has been a United States Examining Surgeon for the Pension Bureau. He is a member, and in 1881, was elected a trustee and member of the Council of the Massachusetts Benevolent Society. From 1868 to 1871 inclusive, he was a member of the New Bedford City Council. In 1879, he assisted in the arduous work of organizing the first Board of Health in the city of New Bedford, and in 1880 and 1881, was its chairman. He also served as Quarantine Physician, and organized a system of quarantine which received the unqualified endorsement of the National authorities. Dr. Mackie has been largely called upon as a surgical and medical expert before the courts. His well known thorough knowledge of his profession, and the perfect clearness and honesty of his testimony, give his evidence great weight with juries.

"In politics, Dr. Mackie was a Whig until the death of the party, since when he has voted and acted with the Republican party. His character is formed very much on his father's, having the same devotion to the calls of duty, and the same uncompromising sense of honor and devotion to his professional duties; charitable to the poor, equally ready to respond to the call of the humble and lowly as well to the honored and wealthy; he is a worthy successor to an honored name and reputation."

CORRECTIONS.

On revising these pages after printing, it is found that the errors are quite numerous. Some so serious as to call for a word of explanation.

The errata are chiefly typographical. They have crept into the work during its progress through the press. Correction is, of course, impossible in the body of the book; it can be done only by reference, and, so far as possible, has been done in this manner.

The compiler will esteem it a personal favor if those, who, upon examining the book, may notice errors unmarked by him, will call his attention to them. Due correction will be made in the 2d. volume, which will be published as soon as possible after the subscription list for it is completed.
